

Jury Finds Jack Dubard Innocent Of Fraud Charges

OXFORD—A federal court jury Tuesday found Booneville attorney Jack M. Dubard innocent of all eight counts in a federal indictment charging that he conspired with a former First Mississippi Bank of Commerce official and a Booneville businessman to defraud FMBC of nearly $1 million during 1974-78.

The jury of eight men and four women returned the verdict to U.S. District Judge William C. Keady after about two and a half hours of deliberation on the evidence presented during Dubard's six-day trial in U.S. District Court in Oxford.

An indictment returned by a federal grand jury in September charged that Dubard, a former director of the bank, former FMBC president Eddie Caveness and Booneville furniture manufacturer M.M. Bartlett conspired in the misapplication of FMBC funds between July 1974 and September 1978, converted the money to their own use and made false entries in the bank's books in an effort to conceal the alleged fraud from bank examiners.

Bartlett, charged in 14 counts of the indictment, is scheduled for trial in Oxford on Feb. 5. Caveness, charged in all 20 counts of the indictment, will be tried in mid-February, also in Oxford.

Evidence presented against Dubard by government prosecutors Al Moreton and Tom Dawson included bank records showing that a worthless $96,000 sight draft from an Arkansas bank was processed through Dubard's special attorney's account at FMBC in March 1976 and used to pay over $75,000 in overdrafts on the account of a factoring firm in which Dubard was a partner with Caveness, Bartlett and State Bank Comptroller James Means.

The bank records showed that the sight draft was written off by the bank after the Arkansas bank refused to honor it following several requests by FMBC officials.

Dubard's defense attorneys, Clyde Hulbert of Biloxi and Lawrence Chandler of Calhoun City, argued that Dubard had no way of knowing the draft was worthless at the time he deposited it to his account and paid overdrawn checks on the account of E-Z Lounger Services, the factoring firm that handled purchases and sales of Bartlett's two furniture factories.

The government also introduced bank records showing that Dubard issued two cashier's checks totaling nearly $31,000 in July 1975 that were used to pay federal taxes on Bartlett's factories, the FMBC accounts of which were overdrawn at the time the checks were written.

William E. Tidwell, a former vice president of FMBC's Walnut branch who was convicted of federal bank fraud charges in 1977 and pleaded guilty to embezzlement charges in a later indictment, testified last week that he arranged for the proceeds from a bogus loan for $31,000 made in the name of his secretary to be deposited at FMBC to cover the overdrafts created by the checks Dubard wrote to the Internal Revenue Service.

However, Tidwell testified he was not certain that Dubard knew that loan was fraudulent, although he said Dubard was present at a meeting with Tidwell, Caveness and Bartlett when Tidwell was instructed to arrange a loan to cover the overdrafts.

In their final arguments Tuesday morning, Hulbert and Chandler told jurors not to believe Tidwell because he is a convicted felon and probably agreed to testify against Dubard in hopes of receiving favorable treatment from the government before he was sentenced on his bank fraud convictions.

Dubard's defense attorneys insisted throughout the trial that Dubard never benefitted financially from the transactions connected to Bartlett's factories or the factoring firm. "His terrible mistake in judgment was agreeing to be a managing partner in E-Z Lounger Services—that's what got him in all this mess," Hulbert told the jury.

Moreton told jurors that "Jack Dubard was the strategist" in the alleged bank fraud scheme. "He was the one who sat there in the bank and told everyone else what to do," said Moreton.

Franks Asks Gov. Finch To Take Polygraph Test As He Promised

Honorable Donald Franks
Attorney at Law
Booneville, Mississippi 38829

Dear Don:

I really appreciate your letter. I know the intent and purpose of the letter is to make absolutely sure that we have a governor who is willing to work for the benefit of the people of Mississippi and not for any personal self motivation.

There is no question that I would be willing to take a polygraph test concerning the finances or any other matter in the Governor's Office. I am sure that there is no doubt in your mind of my integrity and that I will be working for the benefit of you and the people of our state.

With kindest personal regards,

Sincerely your friend,

CF/mp

Booneville lawyer Donald Franks received written assurance in 1975 from then-candidate Cliff Finch that Finch would agree to take a lie detector test every six months regarding his personal finances after he was elected governor.

On Jan. 4, of this year, Franks called on Finch to keep his promise to take the polygraph test, but so far Franks has received no reply from the governor about the lie detector test.

In the same Jan. 4, letter to the governor that requested Finch to keep his promise about the test, Franks also requested a full accounting of receipts and disbursements from the Mississippi Colonels fund.

Franks, who is a member of the honorary colonels staff, has not received any reply to that request.

Finch's agreement to take a lie detector test came in a letter of response to Franks in June of 1975. Franks had written the governor during May of that year, asking his support for polygraph tests for people appropriating or expending public funds in the state.

Without committing himself to support the legislation, Finch replied that "there is no question that I would be willing to take a polygraph test concerning the finances or any other matter in the Governor's Office."

In the Jan. 4 letter to Finch that requested information about the Colonels Fund, Franks said that "As a member of this enormous complement of medallion recipients, I have become increasingly concerned about the awesome amount of funds poured into your hands at the rate of $200 per honored person, and the lack of any accounting thereof.

"As a contributor to this fund, I request a complete accounting of all receipts and disbursements from (Continued on Page 2)

School System Problems Aired

(the educational system here) but no one does anything about it.

A public meeting Thursday night about the future of education in Prentiss County brought volleys of questions from citizens, information-packed answers—and several answers—from county superintendent of education Lex Cain.

Before the question and answer session got underway, the near-100 citizens who packed the meeting room at the George Ed Allen Library also heard a history of the county educational system delivered by Mrs. Mildred Anderson. She later outlined four possible solutions to the consolidation controversy that plagues the school system here.

"I think we ought to try to do something about it, because indecision is decision," he said.

In attendance at the meeting along with Superintendent Cain, were the members of the Prentiss County School Board, Mayor Charles Crabb and several members of the city board of aldermen. No county supervisors were present.

The four possible solutions outlined by Mrs. Anderson included a suggestion that the county board of supervisors devote a larger share of money to the school system that the present 30 (of 88) mills that make up the county budget.

A second alternative was that the tax structure here be equalized to bring in more revenue to support the system.

A third possible course of action was to float a bond issue to raise funds for construction and renovation in the school system.

The final choice was to develop a Booneville separate school district.

Moore: No Second Term

State Sen. Dan Moore told the Banner-Independent Tuesday morning that he would not be a candidate for reelection, but that he was "seriously considering" running for the northern district public service commissioner.

The freshman senator who represents Prentiss, Itawamba, Tishomingo, and Monroe counties said that "I appreciate what the people of this area did for me, and I feel like I kept my promise to them to do the very best job I could.

had to do was have a good idea, but it doesn't work that way," he said.

"I feel I can help consumers more by being public service commissioner for the northern district than by being state senator, so I'm seriously considering entering that race," he said.

That position is currently held by D.W. Snyder of Eupora, who has been in office for 16 years, Sen. Moore said.

Moore, a Mantachie native, said the purpose of the commission is to control utilities, and that power and telephone companies, railroads, the trucking industry and natural gas companies are dealt with by the commission.

Candidates Qualify

Several people qualified for county political offices this week, according to records on file at the Prentiss County Circuit Clerk's office.

Mackey Gann qualified for sheriff, John Hatcher qualified for county attorney, Gerald Tennison qualified for District Five supervisor, and W.J. "Bill" Cook qualified for the District One justice court judge post.

School Absenteeism Peaks

The "flu"-related absenteeism in the Prentiss County School system appears to have crested earlier this week, according to figures released Tuesday by county superintendent of education Lex Cain.

Cain said that about 677 students were absent Monday from the 4,100 student system. About 400 were out Friday, as the ripped through the school system.

Tuesday saw about 620 students absent, and Cain said that he felt the absentee rate was on the way back to normal.

"We hope the absentee rate will be back to the usual 75-100 students out by the end of the week.

"Tuesday was our worst day. According to school absentee figures, 66 students were absent from the elementary (Continued on Page 2)

Miss Helen Is In Love With Life

By DON CUNNINGHAM
Associate Editor

A conversation with her is rather like talking to a cyclone. That is, if most of the cyclones you've talked to recently are devoted to the English language, can recite "Thanatopsis" or practically any other Victorian poem at the drop of a stanza and feel that children—especially school children—should be seen and heard as much as possible.

And she's been both visible and voluble herself in a teaching career that's spanned many years and many schools. Mention Mrs. Helen Pippin and eventually someone's going to exclaim fondly, "Miss Helen! Why, I had her for the sixth grade at Pisgah!" (Or at Biggersville, Osbourne, New Site, Jumpertown, Meadowcreek, Wheeler and New Chandler.) Her name usually provokes a chorus of "Do you remember when she..." or "She was the one who told us about..."

The thing is that Miss Helen manages to make a indelibly good impression on practically everyone she meets without even trying.

And small wonder. The lady is one of a kind. She's a poet who originally wanted to be a doctor and her vocabulary is still spiced (if that's the word) with medical terminology that she learned as a little girl from Dr. W.H. Sutherland, her beloved "Papa." When Miss Helen takes the floor, carcinomas jostle alliteration, gall bladders tangle with Emily Dickinson and ivory towers and Halley's Comet (which she saw through her own telescope way back in 1910) yields to the mysteries of the alimentary canal.

"I always wanted to be a doctor," she reflects. "But Papa was against it. Girls just didn't do that sort of thing when I was the right age for it. I've always regretted that I didn't go to medical school—but who knows? Maybe it was fate.

"I know it's hard to believe after meeting me but I was terribly shy as a girl. I had an inferiority complex. You see, I was born with amblyopia or "lazy eye" as they call it now. And one day some little something happened in school and when we got home my sister asked me if I had "right good sense." It upset me terribly and I went to Papa and asked him, "Papa, do I have right good sense?" And he said I did or I wouldn't have asked him that question.

"And then I had a grouchy old maid teacher who was devoted to gloom. She had hair the color of a toesack and if she caught herself smiling she covered her mouth with her hand in the old English way. And one day she called me on the carpet for smiling at a boy. She gave me the first two demerits I'd ever had for nothing at all! I was devastated. That was a lesson to me about hurting a student's feelings.

"And I was also the only student in school who wore glasses. I felt—if I'd known the word at that time—retarded. That, combined with my sister's remarks, gave me an inferiority complex that last 25 years."

Unpleasant as they were, those experiences made Miss Helen aware of the tenderness of a youngster's feelings and how easily and permanently they can be wounded. She never made the same mistakes with her own students, as the students themselves gladly testify.

In addition, this sensitive nature added another dimension to her budding creativity and Miss Helen became something of a poetic prodigy. She began composing poems at a very young age and some of those early verses display a feeling and sensibility amazingly advanced for one so young.

"English was always my favorite subject," she reflects. "I loved words and I loved trying to put words on paper to express a thought. The first poetry I ever wrote was about my mother's beautiful hands. I've lost that particular poem."

Fortunately, her other poems were found and saved and appear in her book

"Meditations in Poetry" which she published in 1975. Many of the poems were written while Miss Helen was a student at Booneville High School and reflect an abiding love of God, nature and country. But Miss Helen writes beautifully on themes less lofty than these. One of her best and most affecting poems "The Lonely House" deals with an abandoned log house, the old Fugitt place, which still stands on Highway 4 just past Hobo Station.

"I drove past that house while I was teaching at New Site," she remembers. "I kept passing and seeing it, passing and seeing it. And I was suddenly inspired. I got up in the middle of the night and wrote a poem about it."

Morris Leads Tour

Dr. Joe R. Morris, a psychologist with the Timber Hills Mental Health Center in Booneville, will lead a group of 16 northeast Mississippi residents on a month-long tour of the People's Republic of China and four other Far Eastern Countries.

The tour is being organized by the American Institute of Foreign Studies.

Dr. Morris said that 14 spaces are still available for the trip, which is set for July 9, through August 5. Adults as well as students may participate.

The group will go to Canton, visiting a marketplace, a commune, a ceramics and porcelain factory and an arts and crafts studio. The group will meet with Chinese students and will sample Chinese music and food.

Because the agenda was organized before the United States recognized China, the length of the stay there may be extended beyond the four days originally planned and may include a trip to Peking, Morris said.

The tour will cost $2,595 from Atlanta, $2,510 from Dallas and $2,295 from San Francisco or Los Angeles. Morris said participants must make a deposit and set financial arrangements for the rest of the fee.

He said those interested should contact him at Route 6, Corinth, or by telephone 287-2070 or 287-6336. Spaces will be reserved on a first come basis.

He may also be reached at 728-3174.

Dr. Morris has broad travel experience. He has traveled in Europe, the Mid-East, Africa, South and North America, and has also traveled above the Arctic Circle.

After the group is filled, Morris said he will hold meetings to view slide presentations and prepare participants for the trip.

Local Man Arrested

A Booneville man is free on $1,500 bond today pending a preliminary hearing on charges he broke into a car wash on Highway 45 North, according to police records. Booneville Police Chief W.V. Stacy said that Daniel Strickland, 18, has been charged with the break-in. A preliminary hearing for Strickland will be held Monday before city court judge John Ferrell, the chief said.

Chief Stacy said that Strickland may be charged with four counts of breaking and entry in connection with a series of recent break-ins at the Booneville Post Office. He said a decision on whether or not to prosecute will have to come from federal officials, since the post office is federal property.

The chief said that there have been several break-ins at the post office for the past three weeks. Several checks and letters have been destroyed and about $50 taken from a copying machine in the building, according to the chief.

Strickland was arrested Sunday afternoon. Working with chief Stacy in the case were Capt. Bill Inghram, Asst. Chief Bob Jones, and sergeants Butch Nanney and Sam McGee.

The consolidation controversy centers around the county board of education and the state Educational Finance Commission.

The county board of education has refused to ratify the county's present long range educational plan now filed with state educational officials. The board disagrees with the aim of the plan, which would consolidate the county's five high schools into one.

The EFC will not allow any state construction funds to be used in the county school system until the board either ratifies the present long range plan or submits one acceptable to the EFC. So far, the board has done neither.

Without EFC funds, needed renovations and construction in the county school system can't be financed, according to Superintendent Cain. After Mrs. Anderson's talk, Dr. Preston invited the board of education members to field questions from the audience.

The questions came slowly at first, then more quickly, and continued for nearly two hours. Superintendent Cain spoke most of the questions. Those questions, including several asked of the superintendent the following day, and the replies follow.

Q—How many mills of taxes are now going toward education in the city and county?

A—Thirty mills, about $331,000, go to support the Prentiss County School system. Of that, 12 mills go toward minimum programs, 16 mills go toward district maintenance, and two mills go toward capital improvement. State law allows up to 25 mills to be assessed without calling an election. An additional maximum of two mills may be assessed by the board of supervisors without an election for capital improvements, if the board is requested to do so by the board of education. This board did so. The other three mills in our budget are in district maintenance, and were approved in a bond issue for the Vo-Tech Center.

Q—How many voters have responded to the advertisement run in area newspapers requesting guidance about the consolidation question?

A—About 112 ballots have been received. A petition signed by about 1200 people has been received from a group in the east side of the county. It requests that a high school be built in that area about five miles from the city limits. A petition signed by about 400 people has been received from the west side of the county. It requests that Thrasher school be kept open. If that can't be done they would like to see the county zoned into three high schools, to include a high school in the city limits, a high school at least five miles west of the city and a high school located at least five miles east of the city limits.

Q—What do the ballots received indicate?

A—Eighty-two people voted for some form of consolidation and for a bond issue. Twenty-five people voted for neither. Of those who voted for a bond issue and consolidation, 40 favored one high school, 31 favored two or more high schools with at least one high school in Booneville. Eleven people did not sign their ballots.

Q—How many students are now in the Prentiss County school system?

A—About 4,166 students are enrolled in the system. About 1,000 students are in the city limits and the rest live outside the city. Q—How much money is available to the school system from the Educational Finance Commission?

A—About $965,000 in borrowing power is now available to us from the EFC. That figure should increase to just over $1 million by next year. The difference is from the $18 per student the state pays us based on annual average daily attendance figures.

Q—Can we build in the county school system without EFC funds?

A—Not substantially.

Q—When must our EFC funds be used by?

A—There is no firm deadline, it is there when we need it. However, if we don't submit an application by late February of this year, it will be at least October of this year before we can hope to get an application funded. This is because the bond sales that raise the money are held yearly in October by the EFC.

Q—What must we do to be able to get EFC money for use in Prentiss County?

A—We must agree on a long range educational plan for the county that is acceptable to both the board of education and the educational finance commission. The present board of education has not ratified the present long range plan for the county because of substantial differences with it, nor have they submitted an alternate plan acceptable to both the board and the EFC.

Q—Is there any way we can avoid consolidation and still get any EFC money?

A—The present system of five high schools in the county is not acceptable to the EFC, according to Dr. Lovell, executive secretary of that group.

Q—How long can we go on without school construction funds from EFC?

A—We would have to school system renovation on our own, and we can't afford to do that. Perhaps we could go along without school repairs or renovations for a few years. But for us to do any repairs we would have to get help from somewhere.

Q—Why not try to pass a bond issue to pay for repairs?

A—I believe the maximum amount we could pass for a bond issue would be 15 per cent of the assessed value of the county, and that would be about a $2 million bond issue. That wouldn't be enough to pay for the renovation and buildings we need. Q—What repairs does the school system need?

A—Right now we need more space. Our system is filled to capacity. Presently we're operating classes out of auditoriums in nearly all our schools. New roofing will be needed shortly at Thrasher, and other schools will need roofing and other repairs in the next three to five years.

Q—What are the details of the present long range plan for the county?

A—The plan would call for one high school for the county, to be in Booneville. The other high schools in the system would become attendance centers for grades 1-8. The Booneville elementary school grades 1-3; middle school 4-6, and junior high school 7-8 would remain unchanged.

Q—How is the board of education split about agreeing with the present long range plan or developing an alternative?

A—I won't answer that question.

Q—How is the board split about consolidation?

A—I won't answer that question.

Q—Would consolidation save us any money over the present system?

A—I don't see where it would save us a lot of money, but it might save some. The principals of the centers would remain as principals of the eighth grade attendance centers and the coaches would be absorbed into the system as teachers.

Q—When is the last time any EFC money was received in this system?

A—We received about $55,000 in EFC money here last year. It went toward roofing work on Wheeler and Thrasher elementary schools, and roofing the Booneville High School gym.

Q—Does the board intend to take any action about approving a long range plan?

A—I can't answer that.

Q—In your opinion, what would be the best solution to the problem?

A—I'm going to hold off for a while on answering that. I was elected on a platform of keeping community schools in the county, and I want as many high schools as possible for the county. I think the board is going to wait for replies from the ballots, and talk with people in the city and county. It will probably be late February before they take any action.

Finch

The Booneville attorney also questioned Finch's judgement in allowing State Bank Comptroller Jimmy Means to continue in that office.

"I read with disbelief several months ago the newspaper accounts of your investigation of the Banking Department under Comptroller Means and the impecunious conditions reportedly discovered by your efforts.

"I did not believe the results of your investigation, and I could not make myself believe that your high sounding utterances of last night (during the governor's address to the legislature) were either sincere or honest."

Franks reminded Finch of his promise to take a polygraph test regarding his handling of official duties and the handling of contributions made to his campaign.

"It appears to me that the time has come for you to keep your promise to me to submit to a polygraph examination inquiring into your relationship with the conduct of Jimmy Means as your Comptroller of Banks, the use made by you of the funds generated by contributions to your campaign and appointments to your staff of honorary colonels."

The governor's press secretary, Bill Bartlett, told the Banner-Independent Wednesday morning that "When the governor took office, he placed, all his personal finances and holdings in a blind trust. He has no control over the trust and doesn't know what he has."

"Mr. Franks is welcome to his own opinion about the colonels fund, but the idea that the books should be opened to public scrutiny is not the opinion of the majority of colonels that support the governor."

"There are no state or federal funds in that fund, only contributions from individuals. There is no legal requirement for disclosure. Disclosure would be up to the majority opinion of the colonels, and so far that has not been voiced."

"About the request that the governor take a lie detector test, I personally would advise the governor not to because it would demean the status of the office."

"All state and federal programs have a built-in funding and monitoring capability. Each agency has its own monitors for programs that are funded, there is also a state department of audit designed to audit these programs."

"In addition, federal agencies that fund programs monitor and audit those funds, and finally there are federal investigative units that ensure the proper use of programs," Bartlett concluded.

Miss Helen

"He was such a hero to me," she says. "Papa was interested in so many things and he taught me so much. When I was about four I said, 'them things,' and he corrected me and told me very gently, 'You must say 'those things' and 'these things.' I've never forgotten that. Papa was the one who showed me Halley's Comet. We stood there and talked about it until it went out of sight. What an experience that was! I saw it in 1910 and I hope to see it when it comes around again."

While waiting for the comet's second coming, Miss Helen paints, reads her favorite poets—Lord Byron, William Cuellen Bryant and Edgar Allen Poe—and keeps up with the Reader's Digest, which she's taken since 1940. She's given Shakespeare a couple of whirls, but admits that she is not especially thrilled by the Bard.

"I've read Shakespeare but I never cared much for him, did you? He takes a good deal of effort to understand. "Which reminds me of one thing I learned from Papa that I always told my children—'read with understanding.' I've tried always to read with understanding and to be understanding—especially in my teaching. I mixed strictness with kindness and I used parables in teaching lessons."

And now that she's not teaching, Miss Helen doesn't know quite what to do with herself. She scatters her thoughts among poets and primers and people.

"I don't go to town anymore," she says regretfully. "What's the point? Everybody's gone away. I miss teaching terribly—especially the sixth grade. They're the meanest but I love them the best. They're so malleable at that age and they can be shaped to suit. Oh, I loved them so much!"

That's really her philosophy, the essence of Helen Pippin's long and useful life, and it sounds rather like a line from one of her own poems:

"I've got to have something to love. God is love, you know? And let's face it—you've got to have love to live!"

Farmers Getting Better Prices For Crops, Livestock This Year

By C.E. CALVERT
County ASCS Director

Farmers are getting better prices for their crops and livestock than last year. Due to a record high for U.S. agricultural exports and participation in government farm programs.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture presently estimate that the United States exported around $29 billion worth of agricultural products in 1978, well above 1977's $23.7 billion. The increase was brought about by larger fourth quarter exports during 1978.

Farmers also buoyed up prices through their own efforts. They placed large amounts of grain under loan, and in the reserve thereby preventing an oversupply from knocking down market prices and they participated in the 1978 feed grain and wheat set-aside programs.

During mid-November, corn sold for $2.03 a bushel, compared to a national average of $1.88 a year earlier. Even the $1.88 compares well with the $1.60 of August-September 1977—which shows how low prices could go without the protection of farm programs.

If farmers had not set aside 5.9 million feed grain acres, we could have had an additional 590 million bushels of corn in 1978. This would have destroyed prices.

During mid-November 1978, wheat prices stood at a national average of $3.05 per bushel, with $2.46 a year earlier. June 1977 was the lowest recent wheat price—$2.03 a bushel for the national average. Prentiss county farmers will again have a chance to influence farm prices during 1979 by participating in the voluntary programs administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Over 841 acres of woodland has been improved with the Federal Forestry Incentives Program (FIP) in Prentiss County. The program, administered by ASCS since 1974, cost shares the planting of trees or improving established woodlands.

Since the program began, ASCS has provided about $32 million in cost-sharing nation wide.

Most landowners cannot afford to make the long term investment necessary to produce timber crops.

ASCs provides cost-share funds under this program for tracts of more than 10 but less than 1,000 acres. Any landowners wishing to explore long-term profits from timber production can contact the county ASCS office in the North Mississippi Savings and Loan Building.

Mississippi Forestry Commission provides technical assistance to landowners through state foresters.

An initial sign-up under this program began Jan. 22, and will continue through Jan. 31.

STOLEN GOODS—Pictured with an assortment of stolen items, including several antique guns, taken in Prentiss County and recovered by local law enforcement officers in Alcorn County are, left to right, Deputy Paul Sartin, Prentiss County Sheriff Ralph Martin and Deputy James Bush. The recovery of the merchandise is part of a continuing investigation of burglaries in the Prentiss and Alcorn County areas and Martin said an arrest would be made shortly.

Reaction Favorable To Water Plan

Residents of Alcorn, Tishomingo and Prentiss counties reacted generally favorably to the Northeast Mississippi 208 Water Quality Management Plan at hearings in the tri-county area Tuesday, Troy Norris, director of the project states.

Representatives from industry, real estate agencies, contractors, landowners, farmers and homeowners attended the hearings to learn of future plans for water quality management in the region.

The Prentiss County meeting centered on questions concerning the difference in point-source and non-point source pollution.

Explaining that the local 208 project only deals with point-source pollution (where polluting substances enter the waterways through a specific point such as a pipe or culvert), Norris pointed out that the 208 program here would be beneficial to the farmers who have been concerned with non-point source pollution.

"We do not have jurisdiction, per se, in this plan over non-point source. The pollution that occurs as runoff from agriculture land, from forestry land, dairies and highway construction is covered by the Soil Conservation Service, the Mississippi Highway Department and the Forestry Commission."

"Our plan does not in any way regulate farmers," he emphasized. "However, the local 208 plan does have some benefit to the farmers. Alcorn and Tishomingo counties, individually or collectively, felt that the state of Mississippi was coming up with some regulations that did not have application in this area, they could go to the local 208 board, composed of local elected officials, and point out how they (farmers) are being hurt. The 208 staff could then go directly to the office of the governor of the state of Mississippi and intercede in the farmers' behalf and get the regulation changed."

Likewise, Norris pointed out to the industrial and municipal leaders, if wastewater facilities restrictions on cities and plants are too strict, they can ask the local 208 staff to take these problems up with the governor's office and ask for a reassessment of these limitations.

The local 208 water quality management plan deals with sewage treatment facilities and is an attempt to provide sewer service on a regional basis rather than establishing five or six sewer programs in each county. "It won't be like the water associations where you have six, seven, eight, nine or ten water associations in one county," Norris said.

Copies of the draft plan, which includes a management arrangement plan for responsibility for municipal wastewater collection, treatment and disposal on a regional basis, were distributed to those attending the hearing.

Comments on this plan will be received until March 15, 1979, after which a final public hearing will be held on the plan. Additional copies of the draft plan are available at the Tennessee Valley Regional Planning Commission, 208 Office, P.O. Box 1140, U.S. 45 South, Corinth, 38834.

Drafting And Design Program Offers Numerous Positions

The drafting and design technology program is a curriculum which has plenty of spaces in the working world to fill but lacks enough people to fill the available positions. Students who successfully fulfill the drafting and design program at Northeast can look to a promising future with good salary and benefits.

The drafting and design technology program is a two year program designed to prepare students as entry-level technicians in the field of architectural, structural, topographic and machine drafting. As drafting and design technicians, graduates will have gained the knowledge and technical skills necessary for employment with architectural firms, industries, highway departments, construction and engineering firms, physical plant planning services and other agencies. Because of the industrial growth in this geographical area, drafting and design technology is a wide-open field with many opportunities for achievement and advancement available to men and women.

One of the areas of study in drafting and design is rendering and modelmaking. It is a sophomore fall-semester project which runs in conjunction with architectural drafting. Between these two courses, the student is exposed to many various methods of construction, delineation, and presentation. Students spend an average of 70 hours on each model and the cost of each model averages $25. Since there isn't much of a job market for rendering and modelmaking, the wide range scope of the course not only covers the architectural aspects of presentations. Students work with presentation techniques that would be of great assistance in all other fields of drafting. Students completing the curriculum will receive the Associate of Applied Science degree and enter the job market where they can fill the many job openings—three times as many jobs as there are students to fill them.

Stennis Plans Completion Authorization

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Senator John C. Stennis has announced plans to introduce a bill authorizing completion of the Natchez Trace Parkway within five years.

Stennis said he plans to introduce the bill early in this legislative session to authorize and direct the Secretary of Interior to complete the 444-mile parkway which runs from Natchez to Nashville. He said 89 miles remain to be completed although the Trace has been under construction over 40 years.

"Although the States of Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee have cooperated fully, successive Administrations have declined to budget funds to maintain a consistent rate of construction," Stennis said. "I believe that it is not sensible to prolong this project year and year, leaving it as a facility that is usable only in intermittent stretches."

"It has reached a state where it would be a sound investment for the government to complete it in a timely way and start to realize the benefits to the citizens of the three-state area and to the many other citizens who as tourists visit that area in increasing numbers each year.

The Mississippi Senator said within a year 333 miles of the Trace will be open to traffic, including 254 miles in Mississippi, 57 in Tennessee, and 22 in Alabama.

An additional $19 million was appropriated last year to be used primarily for construction on the parkway in Northeast Mississippi. That appropriation also included completion of a short link south of Port Gibson, some construction in Alabama and engineering work on sections near Natchez and south of Nashville.

State Weather Outlook Chilly

MISSISSIPPI STATE—Mississippi's agricultural weather outlook from mid-January to mid-February calls for below normal temperatures and precipitation ranging from above median in the southern part of the state to below median in the northern part of the state.

According to the National Weather Service Outlook distributed by the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, this year's below normal temperature averages may mean Mississippi will have more frequent invasions of arctic air. Deeper penetration of cold air into the southern portion of the state may account for above median precipitation in the southern half where the arctic and gulf air masses clash. say agrometeorologists at the Environmental Studies Service Center in Stoneville, who prepare the forecasts.

Cattlemen will see little improvement in pastures, and cattle will require greater amounts of hay and protein supplements to maintain weight gains. Poultrymen should keep alert to the possibility of freezing rain and cold winds behind cold fronts. They should pay special attention to passage of fronts late in the day to stay on top of rapid drops in temperature, say weather experts.

Soil moisture in mid-January is surplus over much of the state. Cold temperatures provide poor conditions for drying. Land preparation may be delayed well into February.

Federal Land Bank Of New Orleans To Offer Agricultural Scholarships

The Federal Land Bank of New Orleans will offer two agricultural scholarships each year to Auburn University, Mississippi State University and Louisiana State University, beginning with the fall school semester of 1979.

Each scholarship will amount to $600 per year over a two-year period (freshman and sophomore years) provided that the student maintains the scholastic requirements. The Land Bank previously offered one scholarship per year to each university.

Land Bank scholarships are limited to residents of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana and two scholarships are awarded for each state. Selections are made by a scholarship committee of each university.

In order to receive a scholarship, a student must have attained grades to rank in the upper 30 per cent of the current year's high school graduating class, and must have demonstrated leadership qualities. Scholarship recipients must enroll in the College of Agriculture, in agricultural education, or in home economics.

"The purpose of a Land Bank scholarship is to educate young people for positions of leadership on the farm, in educational work, or in business related to agriculture," said Loren R. Zimmerman, President of the Land Bank Association of Tupelo. "We want to give the most deserving high school seniors the opportunity to have the finest agricultural instructors and facilities."

High school seniors wishing more information on the Federal Land Bank scholarship program should see their high school principal, vocational agriculture teacher, county extension agent, or contact Loren R. Zimmerman, President of the Federal Land Bank Association of Tupelo or write the Dean of Agriculture at Auburn University, Mississippi State University or Louisiana State University.

The Federal Land Bank was organized to provide a dependable source of long-term credit to farmers and rural families through its 34 associations.

Movie Ratings Helpful

It was about 10 years ago that ratings came to the movies. Now the rating system is as much a part of movies as hot buttered popcorn.

Ever since the introduction of the rating system to the "flick" or "picture show"—what you call a movie depends on where you grew up—moviegoers have had their movies labeled with a G, PG (which used to be GP), R or X ratings. There is no such rating as XX or XXX, except perhaps in the imagination.

The ratings were developed to give audiences some advance notice of the levels of violence, sex and profanity in films.

A recent nationwide survey commissioned by the motion picture association indicates that the rating system, although not perfect, has helped many moviegoers in choosing their films.

Of the moviegoing adults surveyed, 65 per cent found the ratings "very useful" to "fairly useful" while only 27 per cent did not find them so.

About 60 per cent of the families with children under 18—those the ratings are designed to help—found them useful in picking movies for children.

Granted, the system isn't without problems. That's to be expected any time a movie has to be viewed by a group of people, who then have to decide between a "general" and a "parental guidance" rating for a film that may include a single four letter word.

Lately, however, filmmakers seem to be avoiding the "G" rating, perhaps because it has become associated with bland entertainment. Americans may preach against excesses of violence, sex and strong language in the movies, but many other Americans will pay well and sometimes repeatedly at the box office for those things.

Producers consider "G" movies difficult to sell, and this has resulted in a proliferation of "PG" films. As a result, the PG label has been broadened and watered down to the point of vagueness.

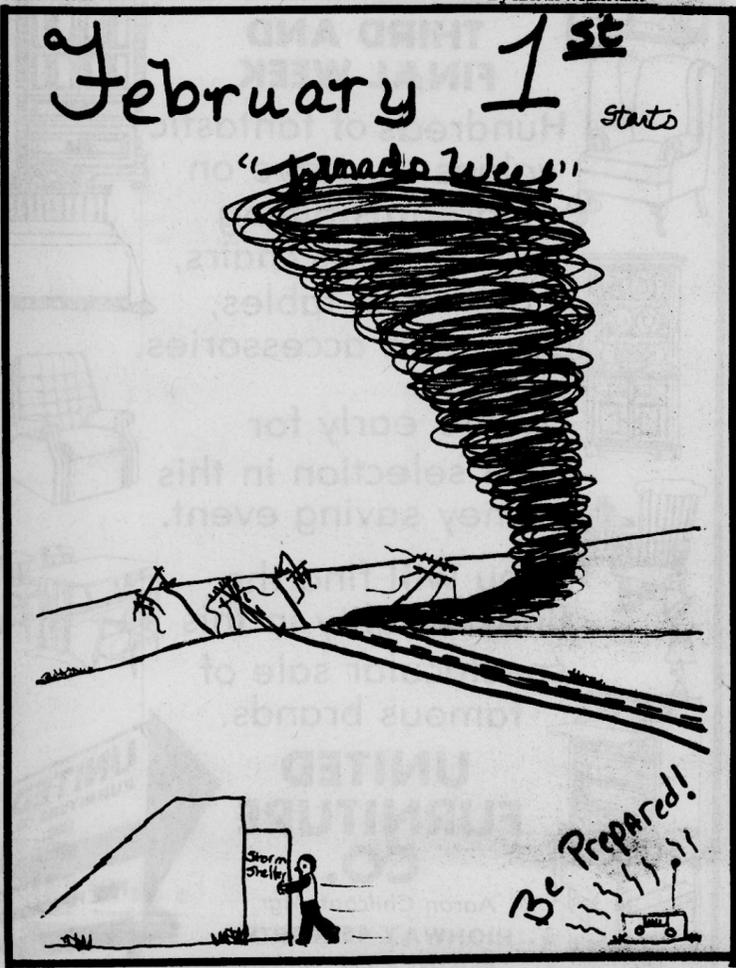

Now even Walt Disney's newest production, "The Black Hole," is expected to get a PG rating to go along with its expected $17.5 million pricetag.

It is the first time Disney has abandoned the "G" rating. The film has no explicit sex or violence, but has several scenes that may be considered "too intense" for a "G" rating.

The result of all this is that PG can mean nearly anything from Disney to far more spicy scenes or syllables.

But the ratings have been a help to moviegoers: in America—a group that traditionally dislikes being told what it can or can't see, but apparently likes to know what it or its children might see or hear.

Is Quality Education In Peril?

By HANK WIESNER
 Managing Editor

Perhaps the decimated ranks of the men and women you love to hate have finally grown too thin to defend the palace. And if the palace be a quality education, the palace is in peril.

Florida will become one of several states this year which will require their graduating high school seniors to pass a minimum competency test before being allowed to graduate.

If the student doesn't pass the test, he doesn't graduate. The competency test—which requires a student to show a basic ability in reading, writing and other subjects—is the result of growing concern by many people. They suspect, and rightfully so, that sitting in 12 different classrooms for as many years and then automatically being awarded a diploma does not mean a student can survive after leaving school.

Unlike a carrot, which can be put in water and soak up enough to survive, a student cannot be put in a classroom and automatically be expected to absorb enough knowledge to survive.

One reason Florida students will be taking the test comes from a survey held last year of the 116,000 eleventh graders in that state's public schools. Of those who took the literacy test, which required figuring sales tax and handling other real-life situations, only 63 per cent passed the math portion.

In Florida and elsewhere, competency testing is becoming popular—even in the face of criticism that it discriminates against minority students. Perhaps it's because the ranks of the men and women you loved to hate—your old tough teachers—have grown too thin.

Most of us have several teachers in mind when this sort of teacher is mentioned. They may be the Miss Grundy of the Archie comics fame, the stern professor in the Paper Chase or the nun in the parochial school.

They loaded homework like theirs was the only course a student was taking. They tested hard, frequently, accepted no excuses for not having homework up.

They weren't all snarly or scowly. They may have teased you into liking their course, tricked your imagination into an interest in it in spite of yourself. Others less subtle may have rammed the words and figures into your ears on a direct pipeline into your mind.

There were as many techniques as there were those tough teachers. And backing it up was a ruler across the knuckles or a plank across the bottom, wielded with enough power to lift the mortgage right off your house.

Where have they all gone? Why can't many students read or figure or write well anymore? And why don't they care that they can't? What has brought us to a situation where a child has to be tested to be sure he can recognize more than the outline of his home state or be able to pronounce the letter he has earned in school?

I think it has to do with the concept of authority. That concept has fallen on hard times today. The idea of doing something because you're told to do it, whether you want to do it or not, seems as well accepted today as the Mao jacket or the hula hoop.

That's a shame, because authority is required in many areas today, and one of the most important areas is teaching.

Authority isn't the only thing a good teacher needs, but it is an irreplaceable part of being a good teacher. Teaching authority is necessary in life, whether it is a lioness teaching her cubs how to pull down a gazelle, an aborigine teaching his son how to track wild game, or a teacher explaining the concepts of the dewey decimal system. Jungles are where you find them, and each require a different technique for survival.

Granted, there's a lot of patience and love and ego enhancement involved with teaching. But it's a mistake to confuse those ingredients with lowered teaching standards or to let any student hide and slide.

It may not be clear to a child why long division or reading or history must be learned, but a teacher should still insist it be learned. What should be clear to the teacher, if not the student, is that failure to learn these things will condemn a person to a future where he can't produce enough to survive or take care of his loved ones. And a person who can't produce will take from others to survive.

Perhaps the concept of democracy—governing by consent of the governed—has seeped too deeply into education. We live in a democratic society and the leakage is understandable.

Democracy may be good government, under some conditions, but it's bad education. There are some areas of learning that are too important to be left as educational options. A student who can avoid taking the tough essentials won't be the sort of informed citizen a working democracy needs. It's a cyclical process.

Freedom for the students? Let's talk about the freedom to function in a society after graduation. How freely can a person function who has not mastered the basics of reading, writing, mathematics or science?

Where did the tough teachers go? Were they cut down by sniper fire from administrators who cared about peace and calm more than learning? Or were they ambushed when parents took the side of their children and stopped demanding a child's homework be done every day? Or were they smashed in a frontal assault when parents just stopped caring if their child was in school or cut school?

Whatever the answer is, the ranks of the teachers you loved to hate seem to be growing fewer.

And we are all the worse for it.

Eyes On Mississippi...

Drive Underway For Open Primary

By BILL MINOR
 Columnist

JACKSON—There's a new drive underway, with more support this time, to install the "open primary" system of elections in Mississippi, the plan by which all candidates, under party label or independent, are put before the voters in the same election.

Mississippi had pioneered in the open primary idea going back to the 1960's, but it has never gotten the plan past the U.S. Justice Department, or gubernatorial veto.

Two years ago, neighboring Louisiana passed the open primary election system, went to the Justice Department, and got it okayed. Ever since then, Mississippi lawmakers who are longtime advocates of open primaries have been hot under the collar and asked, "how come Louisiana and not us?"

Both states are required under Section five of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 to submit any election law changes for approval by the Justice Department or the U.S. District court for the District of Columbia.

The last time Mississippi tested the Justice Department on the open primary three years ago, it was bounced back without approval, based on the reasoning that blacks in Mississippi have traditionally run as independents, and the open primary would take away the advantage they have in the present high-man-wins general elections.

But the recent political history in Mississippi shows that no black has been able to win any office in a statewide or district-wide election running as an independent. And locally, it appears blacks only win in a black-majority voting unit, whether or not they run as party candidate or independent.

Consequently, backers of the open primary system believe they have more empirical evidence to support the plan against any attack that it is racially discriminatory. They expect to also have backing from some black politicians who are disturbed over Charles Evers' plan to take blacks out of the Democratic Party and put them into a permanent independent political mold.

The open primary idea caused bad overtones when it first came on the scene in the Mississippi Legislature in the mid-1960's. It was conceived after the 1963 governor's race when the Mississippi Republicans posed their first major opposition to Democrats for the governorship.

Most Republicans viewed open primary as a device to destroy the Republican Party and a lot of Mississippi Democrats didn't do anything to disprove that was their motive. But surprisingly, then Gov.

Paul Johnson, who had won election on a campaign of "burying the Republican Party for another 100 years," vetoed the bill which many thought would do that.

Late in the 1960's, open primary gained new support around the legislature when the oldtime Dixiecrats saw the possibility that the black Loyalists would take over the Democratic party in Mississippi, and they looking for a way to run in elections without using the Democratic or switching to the Republican party. So they figured open primary offered the route to run without any political party label as independents.

Under then Gov. John Bell Williams, who had an old Congressional friendship going with President Richard Nixon, an Open primary bill was sent up to Washington with the expectation it would get Justice Department clearance.

But John Mitchell of Watergate infamy, who was then U.S. Attorney General, garbled the approval letter, and the issue as to whether or not the open primary had been given clearance wound up before a three-judge federal panel. Not really knowing what to do with it, the three judges put the law in "suspended animation" which kept it from being used in the 1971 elections.

Thinking about the open primary has changed substantially in Mississippi politics. Former foes among more liberal Democrats are now for it, Republicans are now for it, and those who are knowledgeable about campaign financing are strong advocates.

The cost of running campaigns in Mississippi has reached the point that any Democrat who has to run two primary campaigns and then a general election campaign against a well-financed Republican finds it virtually impossible to raise the necessary financing. In 1975, Cliff Finch became the first candidate to spend over $1 million, and now million-dollar-plus campaigns are the order of the day.

In a relatively poor state like Mississippi, politicians say there just isn't the kind of political financing to run three major campaigns. Republicans have also found they have to shell out campaign money now to keep their candidates before the public even while the Democrats are going through their primaries.

Looking back, some political observers believe if Mississippi had the open primary in 1975, there would have been a different result than the election of Cliff Finch. Similar observations have been made about last year's Senatorial race, if the open primary had been in effect.

Talking Politics...

Money Links Politics, Coaching

By BILL CRAWFORD

"Politics" is the general reason given for the ouster of Bob Tyler from his position as athletic director at Mississippi State University. While that may not be literally correct, the situation at MSU certainly bears a great similarity to actual politics.

By the time you read this column a settlement will probably have been worked out between MSU President James McComas and Tyler. The likely settlement is that Tyler will accept a payoff less than his four year contract price of $400,000.

Big money, of course, is that element which links politics and major college coaching. For big money decides who is in power and when they must give up that power. After all, it's their money that picks up the tab.

McComas, still wet behind the ears as a university president, would have us believe he decided as a rational exercise to separate the posts of head coach and athletic director at State. And when Tyler refused to step down as AD, McComas fired him from that job but wanted to keep him as head coach.

The fact is that McComas made his decision under powerful pressure from big money alumni who want Tyler out, out as AD and out as head coach. Led by Pascagoula dentist

Bill Overstreet, this group of wealthy alumni want Tyler out whatever it takes, and have indicated they will place the MSU football program in jeopardy of NCAA suspension if Tyler doesn't leave. They say they have the "goods" on Tyler, goods which prove him a liar and crook.

The majority of MSU alumni aren't rich and powerful, and it's doubtful they want Tyler, who resurrected the MSU football program, booted out. A substantial number of them wanted Tyler kept at all costs when rumors he had been offered the coaching job at Tulane surfaced during the season. That, remember, was when this same McComas got MSU alumni to raise extra money to boost Tyler's contract to $100,000 per year and sign him to a brand new four year contract as head coach AND athletic director.

The boot-Tyler side now says they hadn't told McComas the scope of the "goods" they have on Tyler at that time, but now have.

McComas and this group apparently decided together they didn't want to pay Tyler his full contract price. Thus came Tyler's firing as athletic director. By ousting him from that post and by refusing to give him financial control of the football program, they felt Tyler would find his position untenable and resign.

Tyler, though, decided to fight to enforce his ten 16-day old contract. Amid all of the in-fighting at MSU, newspaper reports have varied on what the facts are at State. It has now been shown that false stories have been planted with major newspapers to distort those facts one way or the other. Naturally each side says the other was responsible.

Meanwhile, the majority of MSU alumni and most Mississippians have no idea whether they should believe that Tyler is a quiet, honest guy getting a raw deal from nasty, rich alumni or if Tyler is a crook being kicked out by the good guys.

Chances are this huge group of people won't ever know the true facts. And isn't that the way with politics.

Yes, in Mississippi football and in Mississippi politics, big money rules the roost and seldom cares what most people think about their policies.

Northeast Mississippi Retired Teachers Association Meets

The Northeast Mississippi District Retired Teachers' Association met at Itawamba Junior College, Fulton, in the Conference Room, on Wednesday, January 10, 1979. The meeting opened at 10 a.m. Mr. Herbert Sumners, vice-president, presided, due to the absence of the president, Mr. Newman Reese, who had gone with a brother to a Jackson Hospital.

Have you ever received an obscene telephone call? I have and other people have also. I found the following article on this subject and decided to pass it on. I believe it might work. The title is "Those Disturbing Telephone Calls." Have you ever answered the telephone only to hear some stranger making indecent remarks? It can be an unnerveing utterly disturbing experience. Or, I have found, it can be a most unusual opportunity. I know that the telephone company urges, one to hang up immediately and to contact the business office if the calls persist-but I reacted differently to my first such call. You see, I am someone who believes that the "Protecting Power" is real, that if you walk in the security that God most surely provides His believers, there is no room for fear. As I thought that call over, it came to me that I myself was in no trouble, it was my caller who was confused, perhaps hurting. When he called again, I found the moment to tell him. Maybe he was hearing it for the very first time-that God loved him. I will not change my telephone listing to hide from any calls that might upset me, for I remember what happened the third and last time I heard that stranger's voice. He called to apologize.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Garrett visited Mrs. J.W. Helton Monday morning. The Garretts were neighbors of Mrs. Helton's some 15 years ago. Mr. Garrett is now deputy sheriff in Tusculumbia, Ala.

POCKET YOUR FUTURE

Developing a sound estate plan gives you a framework which creates an equitable balance among (1) reducing taxes, (2) distributing property as desired and (3) assuring financial security. To develop a sound plan, a complete inventory must be taken. Ask your local Extension home economist for a copy of Publication 704, "Protect Your Estate." This material will help you organize your plan to include all pertinent data relating to your assets, liabilities, future commitments and expectations, family, responsibilities and personal objectives.

FDA CONSIDERS REGULATION OF SALT

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently asked a scientific panel to examine the health effects of sodium. The panel has tentatively concluded that sodium, or salt, shouldn't be considered to be "generally recognized as safe." If the panel's final report agrees with this finding, and if FDA agrees, sodium would be subject to FDA regulations covering use of food additives in processed foods. The FDA could then take a number of actions, including limiting the amount of salt in foods or requiring label disclosure.

Scientific evidence shows sodium can contribute to high blood pressure (hypertension) which, in turn, can lead to serious heart, circulatory (stroke) and kidney ailments. About 35 million Americans have hypertension. This includes one of our adults and a growing number of children. Another 25 million may have borderline high blood pressure.

Salt (sodium chloride) is the primary source of sodium in the U.S. diet. The American diet probably contains 3 or more teaspoons of salt a day, far more than the one-eighth teaspoon the body needs. The most prudent course appears to be a reduction in daily salt intake to 5 grams (about 1 teaspoon) or less.

Since sodium occurs naturally in most foods, the average requirement would normally be met without consuming salt in processed foods or adding it in food preparation.

The purchase of salt by consumers has declined some as its use in processed and prepared foods has increased. More and more, sodium intake is being determined through the purchase of processed foods rather than by the individual.

The FDA has said the possibility of establishing label requirements for disclosing sodium is one of the issues it will consider in developing its planned food-labeling strategy later this year. FDA, USDA and the Federal Trade Commission have been holding hearings to consider nutrition labeling issues. FDA is still collecting and studying the evidence on sodium.

D.T. Beall Chapter Of D.A.R. Meets

The D.T. Beall Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, held its January meeting in the George E. Allen Library. The meeting was opened with the ritual, the Pledge of Allegiance to the U.S. Flag and the Salute to the Confederate Flag by Mrs. Allie Isbell.

Mrs. Mary Robinson gave a tribute to Mrs. Mary Oakley, the chapter's charter member lost by death on January 2, 1979. Using a poem by Isaac Watts based on Psalm XIX, Mrs. Robinson quoted the following: "The Heavens declare thy glory, Lord! And, the blest volume thou has writ, Reveals thy justice and thy grace." and concluded by saying that D.T. Beall members prayed that the daughters of Mrs. Oakley-Margie, Berniece, and Pauline—also UDC members, would be comforted by the wonderful grace of the Lord. Following the tribute, the members bowed for a few minutes in reverent remembrance of their departed UDC sister.

During the business session, the members voted to change the meeting date to the second Wednesday of each month. Mrs. Barbara Holland graciously consented to fill-in as secretary for Mrs. Helen Perry whose absence will be necessitated because of illness in her family.

Bringing the program was Mrs. Eudora Kemp who gave an informative and interesting talk on one of the Confederate greats, Admiral John Pemberton.

During the social hour, Mrs. Eleanor Tidwell served tasty tid-bits, namely, sausage balls, nut sticks, cookies, nuts, with coffee and mocha.

Tigers, Tigerettes Split Twin Bill With Northwest

By LEE GENTRY Sports Editor

The Northeast Mississippi Junior College Tigers fought off a second half surge from arch-rival Northwest here

Monday night and held on to take a 61-56 decision before a home crowd at the Bonner Arnold Coliseum.

The Tigerettes lost the opener to Northwest's Rangerettes 64-59 to take a split of the two-game stand. Tiger playmaker John Sanford, said there would be several basketball observers to be one of the top players in Region Seven competition, paced the Tiger scoring brigade with 18 points (several of which came in crucial situations) and also aided Northwest with a number of key assists.

Northwest jumped out to an early lead and led throughout the entire ballgame. The Tigers scored a series of eight straight points at the ten minute mark in the first half which proved to really be the turning point of the game.

The Tigers shot at a 61 percent clip from the floor hitting on 22 of 36 attempts while the Rangers shot only 44 percent with 22 of 49 from the floor.

The low number of shots issued by Northeast came as a result of a semi-stall offense called by Tiger head coach Ken Lindsey. The head mentor said this type offense, when run properly, can be very effective especially against Northwest.

From the free throw line, Northeast shot a remarkable 73 percent with 17 out of 23 attempts while Northwest hit only 60 percent connecting on 12 of 20 attempts.

The Tiger rebounding corpe pulled down 22 rebounds for the night including 19 defensive and only four offensive.

Booneville's Mike Cartwright led in rebounds with 10 while Sanford and Roy Humphreys collected four each.

Northwest had only 23 overall rebounds getting nine offensive and 14 defensive.

The Northeast pawmen committed 13 turnovers on the night while the Rangers had nine. On the recovery side, the two teams had seven each.

Sanford's 18 led the Tiger scoring attack while Troy McWilliams followed with 17 and Mike Cartwright had 14.

Northwest's Gary Taylor had 12 points to lead the Rangers while Willie Manning and Johnny Gibson had 10 each.

In ladies action, Judy Edington led Northwest with 26 points while Yolanda Fleming had 15, Dixie Wiltshire 11, and Ellihouse Haddix 10 for Northeast. Northwest led 33-24 at the intermission.

Wheeler Drops Jumpertown

Wheeler's High School Eagles won their 15th game of the year here last Friday night with a 57-42 victory over Jumpertown's Cardinals in local action held at the Wheeler High School Gym.

The Eagles, now 15-13 on the year, (after Friday's game) jumped out to an early lead and never looked back.

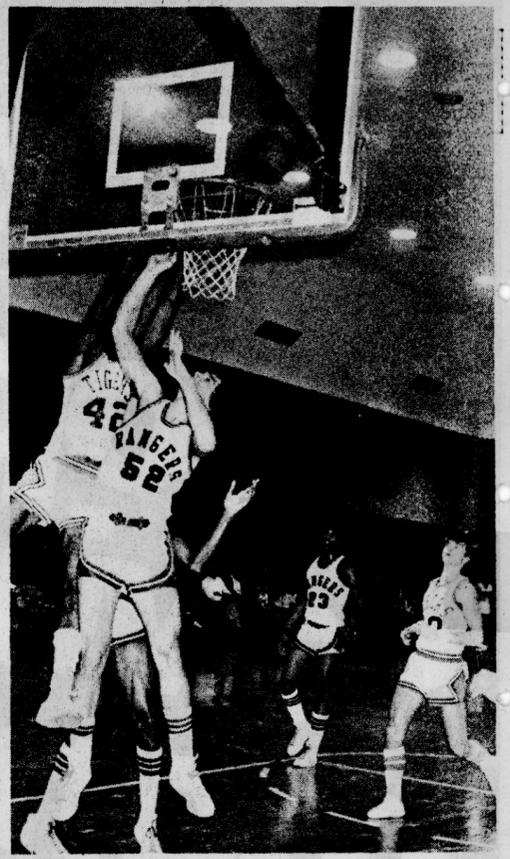

Rolf Rinehart paced the Eagle scoring brigade with 19 points while Mitchell Gardner netted 15 and Terry Ballard had 11.

Steve Treece led Jumpertown's Cardinals with 12 points while Mike Phillips was next with 10.

In B action Friday, Wheeler's B's dropped the Baby Cardinals 30-29. Jim Davis had 14 points to lead Wheeler while Freddie Anderson had 14 to pace Jumpertown.

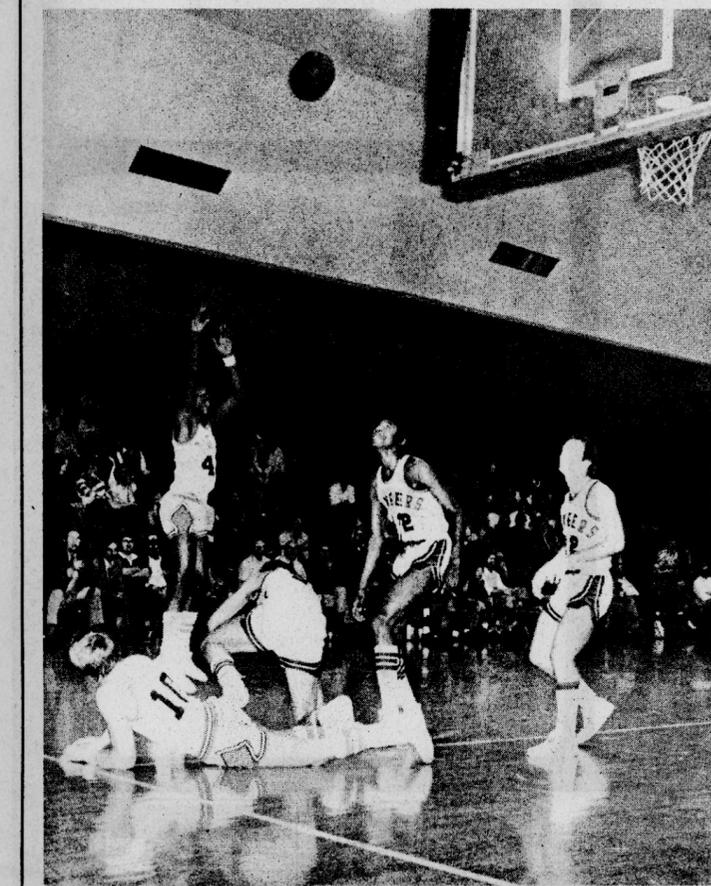

DUNKS IT—Northeast's John Sanford sends home a slam dunk here against Northwest in action Monday night at Northeast's Bonner Arnold Coliseum. (Staff Photos by Lee Gentry and Hank Weisner.)

BATTLES FOR REBOUND—Northeast's Roy Humphries (42) battles for the rebound here with Ranger forward Tim Thompson. Tiger playmaker Troy McWilliams (10) arrives on the scene.

WATKINS ON THE MOVE—Northeast performer Ray Watkins (40) sweeps around Northwest's John Woodall (21) Garry Taylor (45) and Tim Thompson (52) in last Monday's battle at Northeast. The Tigers took a 61-56 win.

FIRES FROM OUTSIDE—This Tiger player shoots a 16 foot jumper from the outside against the Northwest defense. A little feet movement gets in the way here.

Commission Wants Extended Duck Hunting

JACKSON—Acting on behalf of thousands of disgruntled duck hunters, the Mississippi Game and Fish Commission voted unanimously at a January meeting to ask the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to extend the closing date for duck and goose hunting next year from the traditional January 20 closing date to January 31.

The action was taken after the weather and lack of sufficient water made this one of the worst duck seasons in recent years, officials say.

"We are asking the Fish and Wildlife Service to extend the framework for the next year's waterfowl hunting from October 1 through January 31. We are not asking for more days to hunt, we are simply requesting that we be allowed to take our hunting days as late in the hunting season as possible," Executive Director Joe Stone said.

"We feel strongly that the great majority of the ducks that migrate to Mississippi come after the close of the season, preventing many hunters from enjoying a good year."

Thrasher Splits With Kossuth

Kossuth and Thrasher split a pair of games here Friday, Kossuth's Lady Aggies getting to the Rebelettes 45-38 while the Rebels stormed back for a 91-58 decision.

Ramona Patton pumped in 20 points and Wren added 18 for the Lady Aggies who fought back from a 23-20 halftime deficit. Pam Johnson had 18 and Monty Hare had 14 for the Rebelettes.

Dickie Goddard and Darryl Hatfield spearheaded a Rebel defense that accounted for the boys victory. Tony Morgan had 22 for the Aggies. Alan Wooten had 14 and Steve Nelms added 10. Thrasher led 44-27 at the half.

New Site Shares With Central

New Site and Alcorn Central split a prep basketball outing here Friday night.

Central's girls had a 38-25 margin, while New Site's Royals had a 50-46 advantage at the end.

Central's Nellie Roach hit 16 and Sonja Burns 15, while Nancy McComb and Pat Floyd tallied seven each. Central led 25-15 at halftime.

New Site's Anthony Webb stuck in 21 and Tony Crowe 16. Greg Simons made 14 and Mark Winters 12 for Central. Central led 22-21 at halftime.

A similar request last year to the Service was denied because federal biologists felt that the ducks were in a weakened condition in the latter part of the season due to harsh weather.

"We feel to the contrary," Stone said. "They are in a much better condition when they leave to return north than when they came here, due to the abundant supply of soybeans and natural foods occurring in our state. "To substantiate this our waterfowl biologists are weighing ducks that are harvested during the first of the season and in the last of the season to obtain proof that the ducks are fatter when they leave than when they get here," Stone explained.

He added that state biologists are conducting lead shot surveys by examining duck gizzards in hopes of learning more about the condition of waterfowl in the state during the winter.

The Commission is asking for the later hunting dates after receiving numerous complaints from shooters around the state that there are few ducks to hunt and that few ducks have been seen in traditionally good waterfowl areas in the state's delta region.

Anderson Junior High Wins Nine Games

Anderson Junior High School won nine games out of a ten game stand over the past week in local junior high action. The Anderson troops took four games over Ripley, two out of three against Baldwin and claimed three victories over Biggersville.

In action against Ripley, Anderson's Seventh Grade Girls took a 22-18 decision while the seventh grade boys won 26-6, eighth grade girls won 37-25, and the eighth grade boys climaxed the night with a 58-35 victory.

Against Baldwin, Anderson's seventh stopped the Baby Bearcats 31-23 while Baldwin's eighth grade girls won 37-25 and Anderson's eighth grade chargers took a 47-39 victory in the nightcap.

In Biggersville action, Anderson's seventh grade boys won 35-16 while the eighth grade girls stopped Biggersville 24-12 and the eighth grade boys waited to a 62-26 victory in the nightcap.

Sovenia Harris was named the seventh grade girls best offensive player while Tressa Shinault was the best defensive player.

For the seventh grade boys Craig Brooks and Patrick McGee shared honors as best offensive players while Scott McKinney was best defensive player.

For the eighth grade girls, Kushing Sorrell scored 42 points over the week to take best player honors while Greg Oakley, John Shinault and Scott Downs was named best offensive players for the eighth grade boys and Victor Gardner, Bernard Anderson and Larry Mackin shared best defensive honors.

Tyler Steps Down: Leaves Dynasty Behind

By LEE GENTRY
Sports Editor

How can it be? A man who has turned the entire football program around at Mississippi State University has stepped down as head football coach. Due to controversy that erupted between Tyler and Mississippi State President Dr. James McComas, Tyler has resigned as coach.

Football is becoming so political that it's taking its toll and is becoming just as boring as the other gossip subjects that have swept across the country.

Being planted here in Booneville and not really knowing the whole situation at Mississippi State, I really can't print a well-researched story on the situation. I will however comment on what coach Tyler means to me and if there is a side to be taken, I will be on his.

Being a football coach is like holding down any other job. It's not all roses all the time. Believe me, there's so much pressure on a college coach today that you can't expect a person to be a saint all the time.

I don't see how anyone can even question the job Tyler has done. Without a doubt he turned the football program around and brought the winning tradition back to Starkville where it belongs. But this isn't enough for some folks. An SEC championship isn't too much to ask. One who opposes Tyler might say "Oh sure, you just go out every year and pick that SEC crown up, really Bob, there's nothing to it."

Well then, why not talk about getting rid of Joe Paterno at Penn State? He goes undefeated almost every year but can't win the national championship. And then there's Bear Bryant. He passed up two chances to win the national championship and has failed both times at least from UPI's viewpoint. Come on Bear, if you can't do better than that, then we're going to start talking about you too.

Is this what makes football? No way. Football is a game of dedication and desire among the athletes and coaches. Is a coach supposed to have a politician's license? Well the one who is elected at Mississippi State will need one I do believe.

I met coach Tyler several years ago when he first came to State. The man made so much of an impression on me that, believe me, it has stuck with me throughout these years.

Oh sure I've heard all kinds of talk within the past couple of years about what all Tyler is doing and this and that, but it went in one ear and out the other.

Coach Tyler came to Northeast a couple of years ago at the sports banquet for a guest appearance and after the banquet was over he talked with me as if he had known me all my life. I did a story on the banquet and sent him a couple of copies of the paper. He looked them over and within a week, sent me a thank you note.

Now this has nothing at all to do with his coaching ability or the situation with State's President but to me, it's better for a coach to conduct himself this way than to belt an opposing player on the sidelines...Get my drift...

Booneville Drops Baldwin Trice

Jackie Leach poured in 23 points here last Saturday night to aid Booneville's Blue Devils in a 69-38 victory over Baldwin's Bearcats in local action held at the Baldwin Gym.

Booneville's Devilettes made it a clean sweep for the night 30-28 nipping over Baldwin's Lady Bearcats.

Dale Groves followed Leach in scoring with 17 points while Bill Groves added 14, Clarence Taylor 7, Gary Cavness 6 and Giles McDaniel 2.

Dough Stowers paced the Bearcat scoring brigade with 18 points followed by Tim Rowan with 6.

In girl's action, Dianne Harris led the Devilette attack with 16 points followed by Lorraine Cole with 6, Vanessa Groves with 4, Tina Gardner with 3 and Tiny Pierce with 1.

Ann McBrazier netted 16 to lead the Lady Bearcats. Booneville led on both occasions at the half with the Devilettes leading 18-15 while the varsity Blue Devils led 33-17 at the intermission.

District, North Half Sites Set

Both the District and North Half Tournament sites have officially been set and Prentiss County's local teams are now preparing for their upcoming tourney conquests.

District action kicks off the tourney season beginning in early February with North Half action to follow.

Booneville's girls and boys' squads will compete in Class A competition while Thriasher, Wheeler, Jumpertown, and New Site will compete in Class B action and Baldwin will be classed as the lone Prentiss County representatives in Class BB competition.

Competition is expected to be strong for the local squads, however, Prentiss County's teams will be ranked high in both District and North Half competition.

The State's top teams are usually picked from the Northern part of the state and this year will be no exception.

From the District to State...Plenty of basketball action to come...Make your plans to attend.

Jones Considers Coaching Post

Former Itawamba head football coach Ben Jones is a strong candidate for the head football coaching post at New Albany High School.

The New Albany school board is now in the process of electing the new mentor who will replace former coach Johnny Buskirk.

Officials have stated that they wish to elect the new coach as soon as possible so he can start working on the spring football program.

A number of hats have been thrown in the ring for the position but it looks as though Jones is the most likely choice. According to outside sources, Jones has been contacted several times but no definite word has been given.

Jones is a former coach of the Tombigbee Conference and led Fulton's Indians to several 'Bigbee championships and while at IJC, turned the Indians into one of the powerhouses of Mississippi Junior College football.

His last coaching tenure was at Meridian High School where he also turned that school into a winning program.

A decision is expected soon concerning the head coaching position and some football observers say within the next two weeks.

Hodding Carter Papers Donated

He was called "the conscience of Mississippi," "the most hated white man" in the state, and "a prophet honored in his own country."

Hodding Carter Jr. of Greenville, former editor and publisher of The Delta Democrat Times, won a 1946 Pulitzer Prize for his editorials advocating racial tolerance.

On Saturday, Feb. 3, Carter's widow, Betty, and his sons Hodding III and Philip, will present his papers to Mississippi State University's Mitchell Memorial Library.

Activities include a reception from 10-10:30 a.m. in the John C. Stennis Suite of the library, followed by a symposium beginning at 10:45 a.m. in the Simrall Building auditorium.

Presiding over the symposium will be Arkansas Gazette editor Hugh Patterson. Among those speakers on various aspects of Carter's life will be his eldest son, Hodding Carter III, on "The Father I Knew." Carter is currently assistant secretary for public affairs, Department of State.

Other speakers and their topics will be: Wilson F. Minor, editor and publisher of the weekly Capital Reporter in Jackson, "The Mississippi Dissenter"; John Popham, former editor of the Chattanooga Times, "A New Voice for a New South"; and Harry Ashmore, former editor of the Arkansas Gazette, "The Delta Dissident Speaks to the Nation."

"We are indeed fortunate to have acquired the outstanding collection of Mr. Carter's papers for Mitchell Memorial Library at Mississippi State University. Because of the stature of Mr. Carter and the value of his papers, the collection was sought by some of the most prestigious universities in the nation," said Dr. George Lewis, director of MSU libraries.

Lewis said a collection of such stature will bring nationally known scholars to Mississippi State to do research.

"The impressive group of well known journalists who will be program participants attests to what this will mean to MSU," he added.

Also participating in the program will be university President James D. McComas, Vice President Emeritus for Academic Affairs John K. Bettersworth, Stennis Institute of Government Director Morris W.H. Collins Jr., Head of Special Collections Jimmy G. Shoalmire and Dr. Lewis.

CHARLIE SMITH—Glynn Turman portrays young Charlie Smith, a former slave, now 136 years old and living in a Florida nursing home, in "Charlie Smith and the Fritter Tree," an original film dramatization. It can be seen at 9 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 27, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

County Agent's Notes

By W.H. HADEN
County Agent

It's not too early for you gardeners to make preparations for a more productive garden in 1979. The first step to a better garden is thorough planning. Start by selecting the garden location. This area should receive full sunlight and be near a water source. Then, choose the vegetables you want to grow, considering available space, family eating likes and dislikes, freezing and canning needs, and your gardening ability. Don't plant more than your family can use or maintain.

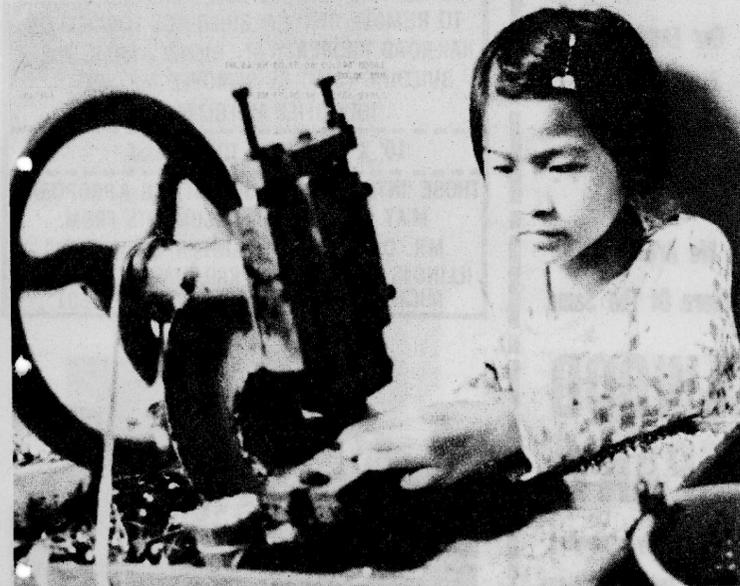

Dairymen need to take extra precautions during extremely cold weather to make sure their cows have an adequate supply of clean, ice-free water. Many dairymen often let their water supplies freeze and stay frozen for several days. This is often the single biggest factor contributing to a drop in milk production during cold weather. To prevent this winter production slump, make sure your dairy cows have a good supply of ice-free water near the barn.

The January 29 edition of "Farmweek" will feature the second of a series focusing on the Mississippi farmer. This week Farmweek reporter Mike Windham will travel to the Delta for a look at cotton and soybean production on the Rex Morgan farm at Shaw. The two will discuss what it takes to produce these cash crops and turn a profit.

Be sure to tune in Farmweek each Monday night at 7:30 and Tuesday mornings at its new time at 7:30 on your local Mississippi Educational Television Network station.

You may get more money for your timber if you take the time and effort to market it properly. Marketing timber involves seeking bids rather than selling for the first offer. You should seek bids over at least a 75-mile radius. It's common for sawtimber to be hauled at least 50 miles, and high quality timber may be hauled 100 miles or more. Seeking bids on timber is a good investment because marketed timber usually brings a higher price than timber sold outright.

FAMILY LOYALTY—In many Hong Kong homes, parents and children do piecework in their spare time to augment the family's income. Here a young member of the Ng family takes her turn at assembling parts of batteries in the National Geographic Special, "Hong Kong: A Family Portrait." It can be seen at 7 p.m., Sunday, Jan. 28, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

Haven House Director Says Rehabilitation Available Locally

Newly appointed Timber Hills Haven House Director, Mike Rogers, stressed recently that alcohol rehabilitation services are available to residents of Alcorn, Prentiss, Tishomingo, and Tishomingo counties, not just to the residents of Alcorn County.

Rogers assumed duties of the facility Jan. 1, succeeding Rick Gray, who assumed another position with the Timber Hills agency. Rogers has been an alcohol counselor with Timber Hills since November, 1977. A graduate of Blue Mountain College, he is a member of the Mississippi Personnel and Guidance Association and the Mississippi Alumni Association of the Southeastern School of Alcohol and Drug Studies.

The facility, which opened its doors for the first time in September, is a 15-bed alcohol rehabilitation unit for men. It is located in the old East Corinth Baptist Church Building at the corner of Fourth and Breckinridge.

The center offers residential care to recovering alcoholics in an alcohol-free environment.

Therapy and social interaction with others are an integral part of the Haven House program.

"We are implementing a family treatment approach," stated Rogers. "During the last portion of the clients' 60-day in-patient treatment, we will begin to work with families and other significant persons to combat the negative image and the myths surrounding alcoholism."

"Haven House is part of a continuing program, and residents will continue to receive treatment of 12 to 18 months after their in-patient stay," according to Mr. Rogers.

Jay Lee, Coordinator of Alcohol and Drug Services for Timber Hills, is in charge of out-patient services. Wendell Southward of Tishomingo is counselor for Tishomingo County and K.B. Phagan of Blue Mountain is counselor for Tishomingo County. Lanny Taylor is secretary-receptionist for the out-patient services. Additional mental health services are available through Timber Hills, if needed.

"We are in the process of improving many of our procedures and policies in order to expedite the flow of treatment at Haven House," Mr. Rogers said. Assisting with this are counselors James McGee and Harry Crayton.

Lacy Dalton is night manager and Tom Johnson is resident relief manager. Billie Standfield of Walnut is secretary-receptionist at Haven House. The 24-hour facility has served 48 clients since its opening.

Haven House was created under the auspices of the Region IV Mental Health-Mental Retardation Commission. Commissioners for the program include: Mrs. Buddy (Brenda) Moses, Alcorn County; E.O. Roden, Prentiss County; Troy Holliday, Tishomingo County; and J.O. Southward, Tishomingo County.

Funding for the program is in part by Title XX of the State Department of Public Welfare, state alcohol tax money, and by a Mississippi Department of Mental Health grant.

HIGH-YIELDING—Georgia extension scientists and cotton producers look at a field on the Julius Chastain farm in Thomas county from which he got a yield of approximately 992 pounds an acre using the recommended practices of the extension service. Looking at the field are (left to right) Allen Fulford, Georgia extension agronomist for cotton; Julius Chastain; J.B. Weaver, University of Georgia cotton breeder; Dr. William D. Eickhoff, associate director for agricultural research implementation for Cotton Incorporated, and cotton producer Bobby Webster of Waynesboro.

Extension Service Gives Cotton Tips

WAYNESBORO, GA—A package of recommended practices from the Georgia Extension Service is helping cotton producers in Georgia grow cotton profitably and may be of benefit to growers beltwide.

Four demonstration farms scattered across Georgia showed cotton producers and extension scientists that it is possible to get outstanding yields while limiting costs, explains Dr. William D. Eickhoff, Cotton Incorporated associate director for agricultural research implementation.

Cotton Incorporated funded the demonstrations along with the Georgia Extension Service. Cotton Incorporated is the fiber company of American cotton producers. Supported by producers' per-bale assessments, it works for each producer through programs of research and marketing.

Cotton Incorporated and the Georgia Extension Service sponsored the four demonstration farms to prove the value of management practices that emphasize the economic benefits of each crop input, explains Allen Fulford, Georgia extension agronomist for cotton.

Profits from the four demonstration farms ranged from $201 to $386 per acre, says Fulford.

The recommended practices included proper use of herbicides, use of varieties that mature as early as possible, wise use of phosphate insecticides, plant populations below 40,000 an acre (preferably in the 20,000 to 30,000 per acre range), use of under 60 units of nitrogen per acre, and insect control based on accepted thresholds established by entomologists.

Fulford adds that, "if I had to pick out one thing that may be responsible for increasing yields, I'd say it might be nitrogen management. For years we have been putting ourselves out of the cotton business because we are using too much nitrogen for our rainbelt conditions."

The recommended practices emphasized nitrate monitoring through petiole analysis to determine if nitrogen was necessary.

One result of the success of the demonstration farms is that Georgia may get a substantial increase in cotton production in the years ahead, says Fulford, because Georgia cotton producers are now more confident they can make a profit with cotton.

Eickhoff adds that, "What was done here in Georgia has application throughout the whole cotton belt."

Demonstrations were conducted at the Bobby Webster farm here in Waynesboro, at the James Hegidio farm in Dooly county, the Chauncy Taylor farm in Calhoun county, and the Julius Chastain farm in Thomas county.

The package of practices was developed by an extension team that included Fulford, agricultural engineer W.E.

"Gene" Seigler, entomologist W.R. "Bill" Lambert, and plant pathologist Johnny Crawford.

Estimated profits per acre on the demonstration plots ranged from $201 at Webster's farm, which was hit by drought, to $386 at Chastain's farm. Costs of production and estimates of profits per acre were made by the extension team using costs of production budgets developed by the University of Georgia.

While Webster's 60 acres suffered from drought, he made approximately $201 profit per acre on an estimated yield of 656 pounds of lint per acre with a hog-round contract offer of 65 cents a pound and with estimated seed yield of 825 pounds returning 5 cents a pound. Expenses were estimated at $274 an acre, including picking, ginning, interest, overhead, and return to management.

Taylor netted a profit of $356 an acre on his 60-acre demonstration plot with an estimated lint yield of 1,052 pounds and seed yield of 1,578 pounds, with lint at 65 cents and seed at 5 cents a pound. Costs were an estimated $356 per acre.

Hegidio made $270 an acre profit on his 23 demonstration acres. He had an estimated lint yield of 800 pounds an acre and seed yield of 1,200 pounds with sale price of 65 and 5 cents, respectively. He estimated his costs at $310 an acre.

Chastain made a net profit of $386 an acre from his 25-acre demonstration plot with an estimated lint yield of 992 pounds an acre and seed yield of 1,500 pounds with sale price of 65 and 5 cents, respectively. His costs were an estimated $333 per acre.

Glasses Helps Timmy

Ten-year-old Timmy S. of Waco, Tex., loved to play baseball, but his friends teased him and called him Casey because he always struck out. He could not see the ball. Every game ended in humiliation and near tears for him.

Because Timmy's father had long been out of work, glasses were simply out of the question—until this year.

The boy's glasses were paid for by a volunteer organization, hundreds of miles away, called New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., in Short Hills, N.J.

Now Timmy is one of the top batters in his class and ends every baseball game with a grin. He writes to New Eyes: "My Dad says there won't be any gifts under our tree this Christmas, but I have my present, the best ever, my new glasses. Thank you, New Eyes."

Timmy is just one of the more than 10,000 grateful people in this country who received eyeglasses from New Eyes in the past year.

New Eyes has earned the reputation of being one of the most effective sight-saving charities in the world. It has helped many thousands of needy people obtain glasses—here and abroad—and it has never asked for a penny in donations.

Since its inception 47 years ago, New Eyes has asked only for used eyeglasses and precious metal articles such as old watches, jewelry (real, costume and antique), good or damaged silver and dentures.

The eyeglasses and glittering clutter are sent to New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., Short Hills, New Jersey 07078. Thousands of packages from all over the United States arrive in the neat stucco headquarters every year. There, volunteers, mostly housewives, sort out the glasses, separating those in plastic frames from those in metal frames.

Many of the 250 workers have learned to operate complex optical grading and testing equipment. They help fill specific orders from missions and hospitals in foreign countries where plastic framed glasses and sunglasses are sent.

The metal framed glasses have their uses, too. Through refining, they yield precious metals that are sold, along with the jewelry, to finance New Eyes funds in over 100 hospitals and health agencies throughout the United States. The money in these funds buys glasses for people who have nowhere else to turn.

In addition to these funds, arrangements have also been made in 48 states through health and welfare agencies whereby New Eyes purchases glasses for carefully screened persons, to whom no other private or public funds are available.

But, as public response has grown throughout the years, so has the volume of requests. Therefore, New Eyes needs more discarded jewelry and eyeglasses to do its job.

These gifts can bring vision to a little boy, like Timmy.
