ministrator of the Northeast Mississippi Hospital in Booneville, and members of its board of trustees did more than make posters to recognize May 10-16 as National Hospital Week.

In keeping with the national theme, "Looking Well Into the Future," they have developed a scholarship program which will enable five nursing students to pursue their studies each year without the financial difficulties faced by many. "Although the hospital has sponsored students on an individual basis in the past, this is the first organized program we have ever had," Barker said.

The scholarship program is; designed to provide a full scholarship to a student from each of the five schools which exist in Prentiss County. The recipients will be chosen on the basis of academic ability and a desire to complete the nursing curriculum.

The scholarships also guarantee the graduate a position at Northeast Mississippi Hospital for at least two years, Barker said.

"With the ever increasing meed for professional health care services throughout the country and especially in small towns, we feel that the program will benefit the student, the hospital and most of all the community it serves," Barker said.

The Associate Degree Nursing Program, at Northeast, since its beginning in 1957, has been recognized for its high quality graduates, a number whom provide progressional nursing services to local hospitals.

In reference to the number of Northeast graduates presently employed by the Northeast Mississippi Hospital, Barker said, "It would be easier to count how many are not graduates. Most of our RN's and LPN's have some association with Northeast."

Thirty-five students received their Associate of Applied Science in Nursing degrees during commencement exercises Friday night at the junior college. A college spokesman said it is expected that there will be some 50 returning sophomores this fall in the program.

BIBLE OUESTION BOX

QUESTION: Mr. Hogland, What did the Lord mean in (Lk. 16:9,) when he tells us to make friends of the mammon unrighteousness? Sounds like he is encouraging sin. WARD HOGLAND

ANSWER: This statement is found in the parable of the Unjust Steward. The commendation was not for wrongdoing. The Lord never commends such. The commendation was for the wisdom of preparation. Sinful people recognize the need for preparation and so often the so called "Children of light" do not. The admonition is still one of wise preparation. The Christian is instructed t use mammon (worldly riches) to prepare for eternity. The Christian may do this by supporting the preaching of the gospel, ministering to the needs of the saints and in generally doing good to his fellow man. The Lord often used illustrations from among the Jews to teach important lessons. The RSV says, "Make friends for yourselves by means of unrighteous mammon." This makes it somewhat clearer.

Fire Death Risk Greatest In Homes

"FIRE CLAIMS MORE THAN 8,000 LIVES; 300,000 INJURED"

Imagine the reaction to that headline.

There would be an outcry of indignation followed by a nationwide demand for investigations--and action. Fire codes would be rewritten. Construction regulations and procedures would be improved. Safety instruction would be required of every man, woman and child.

Far-fetched? No! The figures cited are the latest annual statistics on the number of casualties in home fires in the United States. A fire breaks out in a residence every 55 secondsmore than 1,500 a day, and eight times the number in factories and stores.

The toll in home fires amounts to a staggering national disaster, according io-safety researchers for the Combined Insurance Company of America. The facts are much less dramatic but no less tragic than those produced by the two recent hotel fires in Las Vegas and the one in Westchester County, N.Y.

Safety authorities are in agreement that home is the place posing the greatest risk of death in a fire. Most home blazes involve the careless use of matches and cigarettes or heating and electrical equipment.

The principal immediate causes are the incorrect burning of trash, defective or misused electrical wiring and equipment, defective or overheated heating and cooking equipment, and the careless use of smoking materials.

The rooms most likely to catch fire first are the kitchen and living room. Most fatal fires start at night, thereby reducing the chances of saving lives and property.

What can you do to in your home? Here are some suggestions compiled by Combined Insurance researchers:

-- Arrange for regular checking and cleaning of heating equipment.

-Keep stoves clean and free of grease. Keep towels and curtains away from the range. Place pans or burners; so handles do not prot:rude over the edge, and nevier wear long loosesleeved garments while cooking.

-- Get rid of clutter--old newspapers and clothing; half-used cans of paint, and rags soaked with oil, polish or other flammables. If you keep paint, store it in well sealled metal containers where ventilation is good. Don't keep flammables you don"t need.

-- Dispose of all flammables in outdoor containers with secure lids.
--Arrange for periodic checks of appliances and wiring; don't overload outliets; never hang electricial cords over nails or run undler carpets, and replace frayed or cracked cords.

-- Never clean clothing with benzine or gasoline and never use kerosene or other flammables to start a fire.

-Leave a door or window slightly ajar to provide a steady flow of oxygen whenusing portable gas or oil heater. Never leave a healter burning all night. -- Clean lint from the clothes dryer regularly. -Do not enclose the TV set in a confined area.

-lInstall a sturdy fireplace screen and never retire until the fire has died down.

Of crucial importance, according to Combined Insurance researchers, is that no one should ever smoke in bed. Smouldering butts should never be left in ashitrays. All smoking matterials and matches should be kept out of the reach of children.

If a fire does break out in your home, you will have a better chance of survival if minimize the chances of fire you have installed smoke andl fire alarms, which let off piercing sounds at the first sign of smoke or heat.

Excused Or Unexcused?

Dear Editor:

As concerned parents, we would like to comment on recent events concerning absences in the Booneville High School.

What is an unexcused absence?

We are told that the only acceptable excuse for missing school is sickness. Recently, the seniors were required to bring either a doctor's or dentist's asked by the parents in the stattement for missing a day.

Is: this correct? Does this excused and unexcused rule not apply to everyone? Does this rule not apply to everyday of the school year or is it just for certain days picked out by the principal?

Does this rule apply only to the seniors or all of the grades in school?

These are just a few of the Booneville, Mississippi questions that have been past few days.

All we are asking is fairness for all, and if rules are made, let them apply to everyone, whether it be a doctor's child, board member's child, or one of our children.

Now I've got it! (I think.)

For the past few weeks I've been mulling over the problem of just how it is determined whether or not there will be a runoff election in the election of the city alder-

Some people have indicated that they thought the five candidates receiving the most votes would win, and there would be

I knew that wasn't true. There was no runoff four years ago in the election of the aldermen, but I have seen in old copies of The Banner-Independent reports on other such elections in which there were runoffs.

The first time I broached the subject to anyone in a position to know the answer was about a week ago when then incumbent (and now re-elected) alderman Charles Steen was in our office.

He explained the procedure to me, but, unfortunately, it wasn't one of my better days and I didn't grasp it.

I did figure out that, to win in the first primary, a candidate must not only be one of the top five vote getters, but he (or she). must also receive a majority of the wotes.

But, how do you determine a majjority when each voter votes for five off the

This means that there are five times as many votes as there are ballots cast (provided all the ballots are valid. If someone votes for more than 5, or less than 5, candidates in the alderman race, none of those votes are counted.)

Does a candidate have to have a majority of the number of ballots cast or of the number of votes cast? And how do you determine it?

Sitting in the City Clerk's office Tuesday night waiting on the election results, a discussion was started on this subject. Unfortunately everyone had their own which totally confused both me and my boss, Paul Miller, but seemed to work perfectly for him.

Finally, (on the second try) Kermit' Jones explained it to me (I think).

He said you take the total number of votes (not ballots) cast in the election and divide it by 5. Divide that result by 2 and then add 1. The final result will be the minimum number of votes necessary to win an alderman's position in the first primary (I think).

According to my calculations, this means that in Tuesday's election a candidate needed a minimum of 666 votes to win without going into a runoff.

And my figures seem to jive with those of the election holders, since the four candidates to win in the first primary all had more than 666 votes, while the two who will meet in the runoff had less than 666.

Now that I've gotten that all straightened out, I will sleep better tonight (I think).

Mississippi Is Paying For Past Sins

The question before the Congress is whether or not ·Mississippi or other states which historically maintained barriers against Negro voting can be trusted now to administer voting rights without discrimination.

Naturally, Mississippi officialdom, even Gov. William Winter, who is an old foe of discriminatory laws that prevent blacks from exercising their civil rights, believes the state has reached the point where it can be trusted, and has demonstrated such for years

As State Treasurer back in 1965, the year the Voting Rights Act was passed, Winter lashed out at the "self-styledspokesmen" for Mississippi and the South "who have insisted that we could ignore laws that we didn't like and didn't agree with."

Winter had added then that "we observe and try to obey the law not because we are forced to, but because our respect for the law overrides our private feelings."

Perhaps Winter then had little idea that he would be speaking 16 years later as the leader of the political democracy in Mississippi, trying to convince the nation that the "rule of law" is now firmly implanted in the administration of civil rights to its black citizens.

For Winter to say otherwise would be an admission that the efforts he and a few others in public life here started years ago to bring moderation and impartiality in the treatment of all citizens had failed.

When the record of political progress by blacks in Mississippi since 1965 is viewed objectively, it is little short of spectacular. At the time the Voting Rights Act was passed, there were only 29,000 black Mississippians registered to vote, none holding office. Now there are 340,000 black registered voters, and 387 elected black officials, most in any state. In many elections, the black vote holds the balance of power. But blacks in Mississippi, who believe the ghost of Bilbo still walks in the political arena recall the white voter registrars in the state who used to ask blacks "how many bubbles are there in a bar of soap" when they came to take the registration tests.

Understandably, they are still skeptical that there won't be a reversion to the old ways if the force of federal law is removed.

Mississippi has become the focal point in the refinement of the thrust of the Voting Rights Act, not having a majority black population, (and is expected merely in removing obstacles to black voting, but to tip over in 1985), a black preventing the dilution of still cannot be elected in an black voting strength.

at-large situation. In what was a most remarkable voluntary act lby Mississippi, Gov. Paul Johnson back in 1965 convinced the State Legislature iit should repeal all the state's discriminatory voter registration laws as a good ffaith gesture just prior to the enactment of the federal Voting Rights Act. Some lawmakers, it can be recalled, agreed to wipe clean the state's voter registration back then, looking to the day when they would be out from under the federal yoke.

That day, however, may still be a long way off, so long as Mississippi must pay for the sins of demagoguery in its past.

The requirement that all trucks when traveling the highways of this state carry manifests showing the total load weight is excepted for trucks transporting raw products or timber.

An exception to the axle spacing requirements or the axle or tire loading requirements is made for trucks transporting concrete products; but such vehicles, among other things, must have at least three axles, may only be operated within 50 miles of their home bases and may not exceed a gross weight of 60,000 pounds.

No tolerance will be allowed on interstate highways or on other roads in this state where a tolerance is specifically prohibited by the State Highway Commission, a county board of supervisors or municpal governing authorities.

The tolerance which this bill authorizes only applies to the operation of vehicles from the point of loading to the point of unloading and shall not exceed a range of 60 miles except where products are being transported for processing in this state. No tolerance is permitted for vehicles loading at a place where scales are available.

The tax commission is authorized 75 additional automobiles to enforce the weight limtis and motor vehicle privilege tax laws. The tax commission is authorized to maintain up to 40 portable scale teams.

Any enforcement officer who stops a vehicle believing it to be overwieght is authorized to inspect that vehicle for contraband. Whistling Swans Pay Visit To Area

The largest civil works project ever undertaken by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers-the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway seems to be attracting some interesting visitors.

This past winter, migrant whistling swans were observed using wildlife habitat ponds built on Waterway in northeast Mississippi.

The swans were apparently members of that portion of the population which migrates to the mid or upper eastern coast from nesting grounds chiefly along the western and northern coats of Alaska, the upper Yokon and Northwest Territories and the Arctic fastest water-fowl, using a seven-foot wingspan to propel its 16-17 pounds at a cruising speed of nearly 60 mph and at spurts of 80 mph.

The wildlife habitat ponds were included in construction plans as part of an overall effort to establish valuable wildlife habitat on disposal areas for excavated material and on other areas disturbed by construction of the Waterway project.

ATTENTION PARENTS "SCOLIOSIS"

The term "scoliosis" means "curvature of the spine." Rarely does an individual discover his scoliosis because it usually develops with no pain or other symptoms. Most cases are observed and reported by parents. Parents should be aware of symptoms, and watch for any developing signs, so that the earliest possible treatment can be obtained.

Chiropractic care can arrest the damaging process and rehabilitate the spine and nervous system. As John Bishop and his parents, Ann and Conrad Bishop were overjoyed to discover. In February, 1981, John became a patient of Dr. Jim Davis, Chiropractor, in Frankstown.

John was examined and X-rayed by Dr. Davis. Diagnosis was "Idiopathic Adolescent Scoliosis." This condition can be corrected if found early enough, as you can clearly see in John's before and after X-rays.

There are other methods used as a last resort, including surgery and steel or plaster of paris full spine braces. As John Bishop and his parents will tell you, try gentle chiropractic adjustments first, surgery and braces last.

Sorghum Behind Wheat?

If you plan to plant grain sorghum behind wheat, be prepared for potential problems you may not have with earlier plantings.

The main problem in planting after wheat is not enough moisture for a quick, uniform stand. Most of our wheat is harvested in late May to early June, meaning sorghum won't be planted until after about June 10 when rain is less frequent.

Another problem is insects. Budworms and midge are much more active in late sorghum. Lesser corn stalk borers can damage late stands, where this insect normally wouldn't be a problem in early May plantings.

Late planting also can mean uneven emergence which, it turn, causes uneven heading and more problems with midge control. Late planted sorghum won't head until late August or early September when rainfall is less and more erratic.

All of these factors combined point to lower yields and less profit for grain sorghum planted after

Replant Corn?

Some of our corn stands are not the best, but don't be too hasty to replant. If you have 12,000 to 13,000 plants per acre that are reasonably well distributed, it's probably better to keep this population than to plant 36-inch rows, a In plant every 12 inches is 14,500 plants per acre. In 38inch rows, it's 13,700 plants, and in 40-inch rows, it's 13,000 plants per acre.

Use Direct Spray

Cotton farmers who do a good job with the first postdirected spray will find controlling weeds easier from then on.

Over-the-top applications do not control weeds as well as directed sprays, and over head treatments often reduce yields. I would use over-the-top sprays only when necessary to salvage a

'Preacher' Keeps Working At TVA

holds out, I'm gonna continue to work," says the 61-year-old laborer foreman at Yellow Creek Nuclear Plant, Ollie "Preacher" Under-

Underwood, a native of Sheffield, Ala., has been working in construction and with TVA for almost 35 years. He earned the nickname "Preacher" after joining the ministry 10 years

Since working for TVA for more than a quarter of a century, he has seen the agency grow through various changes, including progressing from segregation to intergration, and the emerging of women into the workforce.

""Preacher" began his career with TVA as a "common laborer" in 1947 at the National Fertilizer Development Center (NFDC) in Muscle Shoals, Ala. His first job was bagging and loading fertilizer. He recalls that, during that time, race relations and working conditions were prejudicial.

"The two races didn't know how to communicate," explained Ollie. "I was 'boy" and they were 'mister.' "

After 12 years of bagging and loading fertilizer, Ollie went to work at Wilson Lock where he placed concrete. From there, he went to Wheeler Dam, then back to Muscle Shoals.

It was during his second term in Muscle Shoals that he saw the "Jim Crow" removed and desegregation laws passed.

"We were learning to communicate and understand each other, which created a better working atmosphere," he said. "As months passed, we seemed to realize that we had to live and work together."

In 1968, the "common laborer" went to work at Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant in Athens, Ala., and, according to him, "this is where the tide started to

"I realized a change had come about when I saw men being placed where they were best qualified," he said. "Male minorities were doing more than placing concrete, running jackhammers and pavement breakers; they started coming in as apprentices."

Ollie "Preacher" Underwood thought he had seen all the social changes there would be, when suddenly the tide started to turn again. TVA began hiring women in construction.

Ollie's first experience was foreman for the first 12 anyway. women laborers hired at the nuclear plant. He says he enjoyed working with females, but that he also had to teach them to do "men's

"After learning the job, they (women) tended to be more cooperative," he said. "A woman has the attitude that if she doesn't do the job supervising women came in right, she'll lose it because 1978 at Yellow Creek. He she isn't wanted here

But "Preacher" disagrees with that reasoning. "A woman has a place working here just like anywhere else," he said. "She does just as good a job as a man." The 61-year-old laborer foreman has worked on almost every TVA construction site in Alabama and now Mississippi. So far, he has not made any retirement plans. Ollie says that in his opinion, working conditions and job opportunities are better at Yellow Creek than any other TVA job he has worked on.

"So, why should I quit?" he asked. "I'm gonna work just as long as I can."

Flower Seeds

A packet of rugged, easyto-grow, mixed kinds of annual flower seeds can transform an area of poor soil into a source of pride and pleasure.

Before you buy a packet of mixed seeds, consider the four types: wildflower mixtures, old-fashioned garden flowers, dwarf flower mixtures and blends of taller flowers for cutting, says Jim Perry, Mississippi

Service horticulturist.

The wildflower mixtures are sturdy, sun-loving meadlowland or prairie flowers. In addition to native North American species, they often contain desirable varieties from other areas of the world. All naturalize by dropping seeds to grow year after year, Perry says.

Old-fashioned garden flowers are of the "English cottage garden" class with generally soft colors. They often contain obscure species, he adds.

Cutflower mixtures will give you armloads of round, spoke and filler flowers for summer bouquets that would cost dearly if purchased in a flower shop, he says. Garden clubs grow them for plant sales, altar societies rely on them for decorating churches and hospitals; and homeowners appreciate their potential for gift bouquets and table centerpieces.

Dwarf flower mixtures occasionally are labeled "Rock Garden Mixtures." They are blends of lowgrowing varieties containing many flower types and Cooperative Extension colors. Use dwarf mixtures ween low edging and in raised beds or in front of taller flowers or shrubs, Perry suggests.

"If you are a beginning gardener, try annual flower seed mixtures," he says. "They let you avoid the difficult decision of which varieties of flowers to plant, and they give you a living sampler to learn which flowers you like."

Flower mixtures can be used in informal plantings or in traditional garden situations. Some gardeners are converting troublesome parts of their backyard lawns into flower-bedecked meadows.

Meadow plantings will give you a mixture of flowers along with the grass and weeds already there, he explains. Meadow plantings add color and charm to fence rows, orchards, vacant lots and odd-sized plots that are hard to mow or water.

In traditional garden situations, mixtures of annual flower seeds look best when planted in bet-tallbackground flowers. If the edging and background flowers are stright colors, not mixed, they will set off the mixed colors of the annual flower mixture.

"The taller mixtures of annual flowers are popular for temporary foundation plantings. If you have moved into a new home and don't wish to plant shrubs immediately, surround the house with beds of tall annual flower mixtures," he says. "They will make your house look like a home."

"Don't get the wrong idea about flower seed mixtures just because they are inexpensive," he adds. "They aren't made up of leftovers. Blending mixtures of annual flowers is as precise as blending coffee." "Flower seed experts balance the ingredients of blends by colors, plant size, leaf texture, season of bloom and optimum planting time. They even consider the germination percentage for each variety, in order to project the balance of species more accurately." you good value for your Flower seed mixtures give investment.

Due to my being ill, I did not have a report in last week's paper. I do want to make a partial report, belatedly, of a few things which will be of interest to many people.

On Sunday night, April 26, following the worship service, Michey Gardner and Kent Scott were united in a candle light lovely ceremony.

In a beautiful setting of blue and white candelabra and baskets of blue and white carnations the vows were pledged while exchanging rings. Bro. Calvin Barber performed the ceremony in a simple, impressive ways and emphasized to them the part which says "unto death do Belated birthday greetings to the following: Betty Coats, May 3; Ann Wiigginton, May 3; Mrs. Myrtie Harris, May 5; and Donna Coats, May 7.

On May 5, nieces and nephews came from Corinth, Sheffield and nearby communities to honor a special person, Aunt Myrtie Harris, on her 95th birthday. They helped her to celebrate by bringing food, lovely potted plants and many gifts both beautiful amd useful.

She deserved all of that amd more because of her calm and serene attitude of liffe and the many kind helpful deeds to others. About the sick:

Mrs. J.C. Barber, mother off our minister, had surgery om May 7 in the Northeast Mississippi Hospital. I called her on May 9 and she said she was doing fine.

Mrs. Zana Floyd was in the North Mississippi Medical Center last week for senior class of Celina High tests. She will be having surgery soon.

I remember Oscar Orick from childhood days. He was a wonderful Christian.

Also, I taught some of the nine sons and one daughter of Oscar Searcy. The men of the

I want to thank people from the Baldwyn hospital for a hanging basket with airplane plants, also the

Regional Group Meets At Library

By LEE DAVIS Librarian George E. Allen Library

The 14th annual meeting of the Northeast Region of the Mississippi Library Association met at the George E. Allen Library in Booneville on Friday, May 8.

Academic librarians, school librarians, public librarians and special library staff members in two dozen counties of North Mississippi make up the membership of our regional organization.

County Library. The purpose of the morming session was to help llibrarians use government documents to greatest adwantage for library patrons.

The federal government through the Government Printing Office publishes materials on a wide variety of subject matter and locates them in libraries throughout the county to which the general public has free access.

Because these libraries are frequently, although not always, in the buildings that house state college and Those who will serve in university libraries,

Slides identifying federal documents and their uses were presented by Patsy McDaniel of Mississippi University for Women, and those on Mississippi State Documents were explained by Lynne Mueller of Mississippi State Univer-

In aging: You know you're growing old when:

the Year."

Your mind makes contracts your body can't fulfill:

You know all the answers, but nobody ask you the questions:

You look forward to a dull evening;

You walk with your head held high trying to get used to your bifocals;

Your favorite part of the newspaper is "25 Years Ago Today":

You turn out the light for economic reasons rather than romantic ones; You sit in a rocking chair and can't get it going; Your knees buckle and your belt won't;

You regret all those decisions to resist temp-

You're 17 around the neck, 42 around the waist and 108 around the golf course. And this observation:

I find that one of the most disturbing aspects of aging is my growing inability to recall important information like the Greek alphabet, the gross national product of Lebanon, and where I left my glasses. This becomes particularly pronounced when I go upstairs to get something. Halfway up I realize I have no inkling of what it is I am going upstairs to get. Should I go back downstairs and try to remember what it was I needed? Or should I continue on up and look around for something that needs brining down?

Unable to decide, I resort to sitting on the landing, only to discover after three minutes that I have completely forgotten whether I was originally upstairs coming down, or downstairs going up!

Some of us think growing old is simply an unavoidable process that begins at birth while others search for the right medicine to help cope with this age-old old-age syndrome.

These anonymous selections suggest that older people who enjoy a sense of humor may have found the best medicine of all.

Kesler Signs Roundball Pact With Delta State

By LEE GENTRY Sports Editor

Wheeler high scoring guard 'Tim Kesler has signed a four year scholarship with Delta State University it was announced

Kesler, the son of Mr. and Mirs. William Kesler Jr., signed the pact last week after debating an earlier offer with Northeast Mississippi Junior College.

The high point guard for the Eagles was one of the top players in his position in the area. His senior year was his most productive where he averaged 16.4 points per game along with 7.4 assists and shot a remarkable 67 percent average from the floor, one of the top averages in the state.

Kesler led this years Wheeler Eagle squad to a very impressive 42-4 overall record which included a number of tournament championships, this year's District Crown and a second straight trip to the State Tournament in Jackson.

Tim has been around the basketball circuits for some nine years. Starting in the early years in junior high and even fifth and sixth grade, he played under coach Mike Anderson then advancing to the B team and high school rainks where he has been a starter for the past four years under coach Sam Richey.

Coach Richey said Tim was one of the most unselfish players he had ever coached and also said the former Eagle was a good shooter and an outstanding leaper for his size.

'He's just a good ball player," Coach Richey said. "He has good peripheral vision which is an asset to a ball player," Richey added. I think he'll do a fine job at

The Prentiss County performer has received a number of local and state awards in his four years in the high school roundball circuits.

Among those many awards highlighted are All-District, All-Northhalf and All-State honors as well as the tops in school

One of the top goals of a high school athlete is to score over the 2000 point mark in a career. Kesler would have easily broke that barrier but suffered a broken leg his sophomore year and missed some 13 games. He still managed 1.991 points which is a record itself.

Kesler has had a number of outstanding games in his four starting years. Probably his best game last season, according to coach Richey, would be in the opening round action of the Northhalf Tournament at Baldwyn. Kesler pumped in a game high 36 points to lead the Eagles to a win over North Carrolton.

Richey also stated that the Wheeler-Tupelogame was one of Tim's better performances. The Eagle guard had a good game here scoring over the 15 point barrier and adding some eight assist to aid the Wheeler squad to a 66-62 victory which gave them the number one State spot at that time.

Kesler still has another game to play still in high school. Tim will join a host of Mississippi's top athletes where he will participate in the Annual Mississippi High School All-Star Game to be played in Jackson in August.

He will play guard for the North squad under his former head coach Richey who will join Corinth's Scott Dyson as top mentors.

Kesler will take up his duties as a Delta Statesman at the beginning of the 1981-82 season at Cleveland. Kesler is the second performer from the county to sign a grant with Delta State. He joins Thrasher's James Swinney to wear the statesman uniform.

Kesler, a 6'2" agressive guard, will no longer wear the familiar Eagle uniform but as any Prentiss County fan knows, wherever he plays he'll give it that extra

The Cross Of Christ

Galatians 6:14 - God Forbid That I Should Glory, Save In The Cross Of Our Lord Jesus Christ

There is a powerful force that compels men to believe the message of the Bible about the cross on which Jesus (Christ was crucified. People are pulled to the cross by the Holy Spirit of God. Daily He opens the eyes of countless individuals to see that their only hope is in the work of Jesus on the cross. It was on the Cross that Jesus paid for the sins of the world. Everything, yes, everything is dependent on His work for us on the cross. Today millions wear the cross as a symbol to show their joy that God loved them so much.

Because true christians are those who have been pulled by the power of God, His church will never fail. One church after another may not tell the message today that they promised to tell, but new churches rise to tell the truth.

No barriers can withstand the power of the Cross of Christ, and no boundaries can contain it. Everywhere men are drawn to the cross. Around it is gathered a glorious giroup of international and inter-racial people like no other in the world.

What about you? Do you believe in this Jesus that was crucified for you? You have no excuse not to. The message of the cross is used by the Holy Spirit to draw you. BELIEVE ON THE LORD JESUS CHRIST AND YOU WILL BE SAVED!

Sixth, seventh and eighth grade English students of Mrs. Grace DePoyster at Marietta Elementary School have been studying creative writing during the last sixweeks.

The following poems are a few of the many that were written by the students. Many creative stories were also written and enjoyed by the classes, Mrs. DePoyster said.

Houston's Home-Owned Industry Study Available

Mississippi municipality's expansion of its manufacturing base has been developed by the Mississippi Economic Council and is provided to municipalities across the state.

"Home-owned Industry in Miss. Houston, Industrial Development Case Study" is an in-depth analysis of successful efforts to encourage small business development within that community, according to MEC chairman Lewis F. Mallory Jr., a Starkville bank executive.

The case study was developed by the Council's Economic Development Committee chaired by E.B. Robinson Jr., a Jackson executive, and presented to MEC's board of directors at its April 21 meeting in Jackson.

"MEC has identified six steps that must be taken to move the state off the bottom of the economic ladder and the City of Houston has excelled in one area frequently overlooked by many municipalities," said Mallory. "That area is in the development of small, home-owned industries."

Presently, 15 home-grown, home-owned, and homeoperated industries are most cases, the com- community facilities communty.

Such participation should include executive involvement in development committee activities, advice and counsel to public bodies and officials, and other activities, which encourage local entrepreneurship.

Construction Work

It's No Longer For Men Only

The world of construction was long considered "a man's world," but it can be a woman's world now, too.

Linda Long and Jeannie Thomas are two of the many women who have entered the world of construction at TVA's Yellow Creek Nuclear Plant. And though they are just two of many, they are also unique. Linda and Jeannie wear the title "Foreman."

Linda Long, originally from Madisonville, Tenn., became a cement mason foreman a little over a year ago after finishing a two-year apprenticeship program at Watts Bar Nuclear Plant near Chattanooga.

She describes her first day on the job as a Yellow Creek foreman as a big cahllenge.

"This job is a big responsibility, and my main concern was to get my part of it done," said Linda, who now lives in Corinth.

But getting the job done was sometimes a lot easier said than done. According to Linda, she encountered some problems, but never lost her self-confidence.

"The biggest problem I had was feelings of resentment from my co-workers and my crew. I felt it even before I became a foreman, but I didn't give it much thought," she said

"Most of the people who showed signs of resentment were usually just set in their ways and didn't want to change," she said, "but then there were those who underestimated me because I'm a woman. That made me feel that I had to prove something to myself, as well as others."

Linda admits that being a woman and a foreman is tough, but far from impossible. Setting standards and positive thinking are her keys to success, she says.

"I set my own standards for doing a job, but I also talk it over with my crew," she says. "I do things in a way that will make them most comfortable, as I think it builds better relationships."

After setting her standards for doing a job, Linda does what she feels necessary to get it done.

"I go into each task, not thinking I can do it, but knowing I can," she said.

Jennnie Thomas, carpenter foreman of Athens, Ala., has almost six years of construction experience prior to Yellow Creek. She completed her apprenticeship through a Decatur, Ala., local.

According to Jeannie, she, too, found that being a female foreman sometimes presented problems.

"When I gave out instructions, I had to be careful how I worded them," said Jeannie. "I felt a lot of times they (the crew) didn't think I knew what I was talking about."

But, realizing the problem was only the first step. For Jeannie, performing as a forem an in problem situations is a three-step process. She has to know when a conflict becomes a real problem, where this problem originates, and how to solve it.

"My solution was to be plain and clear when giving insructions; letting them (the crew) know where I stood and where they stood," she said. "They're the journeymen, but I'm the foreman.."

Though Linda and Jeannie encountered some difficulties at first, both considered the first few months as foremen challenging. And, as months passed, their work has even become more enjoyable.

me enjoy my job more," Jeannie said. "I couldn't ask for any better people to work with."

"The men are easy now to get along with, which makes

So, the old adage that "a woman's place is in the home" is changing, but that does not mean "women" are dying out too.

"Working here makes me appreciate the fact that I'm a female even more," said Linda. "This way, I get the respect due all women, as well as that due a foreman."

Maintaining Your Mental Health

'Guilt'

TIMBER HILLS
MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

There was a time not so long ago when a child who got into trouble was considered "a bad kid." Then someone coined the phrase "there's no such thing as a bad boy." And someone else followed along who added "only a bad parent."

For quite a while now parents have been getting and accepting a good deal of blame. Family counselors have found that this liberally distributed blame is often enough to take all the fun out of parenthood.

Far from being unconcerned and uncaring, some fathers and mothers become so anxious that they don't dare let their children out of their sight or let them draw an independent breath. Their children's failures are their own failures, and they find it difficult to see the children as persons in their own right.

There is the mother who re-writes all her sons homework papers, or the father who feels that he personally failed because Johnny didn't make the baseball team. There are the parents who look much gloomier than their daughter on those Saturday nights when she doesn't have a date.

Then there are the parents who become so worried about all the potential difficulties that their children might get into that they inadvertently suggest to the child just exactly the kind of behavior they fear. It's the old "don't put beans up your nose" technique, carried into the psychological sphere.

Counselors know that parents who love their children and have every honest intention of helping them in every way can still find themselves with a youngster who is hard to understand.

If such a child gets into trouble there is usually a good deal of discussion as to who is to blame. Grandma may say: "The trouble is you don't spend enough time with Junior." The neighbor (who has just finished watching the latest installment of "As The World Turns") may say: "The trouble is that I was just cut out to be a bad parent." The chances are everybody is wrong.

In any case, family counselors have found that there is little point in shifting the burden of guilt from "the bad kid" to "the bad parent."

Parents of children in trouble are often so burdened with guilt and fear already that they cannot think or act rationally. Since the counselor has no preconceived notion of what caused the problem (the neighbor, grandma and the parent probably have), she can help the parents to view the whole situation more objectively and to sort out some of the facts that caused the trouble.

Even children whose parents love them can get into trouble. Counseling can often help such parents to regain their confidence and to cope with the problem at hand.

> Dwindling Forest Resources

The old observation "you can't see the forest for the trees" is losing its punch. More and more you can't see the forests for the stumps, the pavement, the new shopping center.

Around the globe, one-half of the world's forest lands have disappeared since 1950-a mere 30 years and less than a generation. Annually, forests covering an area approximately the size of Cuba disappear.

Until last year the problem was in other places far removed from deep the timber producingest part of this vast nation where the sun shines hot, the rains come slamming down with more volume than most parts of the country, and where lower land values and faster tree growth rates have given Mississippi an enviable record in timber production potential.

But beginning in 1980, timber consumption in Mississippi and the whole South was greater than its rate of growth. In this state in 1979 sawtimber was cut 30 percent faster than it grew. In the central and southwest regions of the nation the deficit has reached 60 percent.

And this is happening in a state where our cash income from forests is second only to that of soybeans, and where one out of five jobs depend on the forests.

The threat far exceeds commercial effects, for each resident needs an estimated 78 trees to absorb carbon dioxide from the air in order for that one person to breathe. And 20 trees are required to offset the pollution of a car driving 60 miles per day.

Trees are nature's air conditioners--moderating the daily climate by protecting us from extremes of wind, heat, cold, drought, erosion, and unsightliness. Most forms of wildlife depend on trees for both food and shelter in one way or

Mississippi's new timber drain problem is likely to get worse before it gets better because an increase in demand for lumber is anticipated in the 1980's as a result of housing pressures.

According to Dr. Michael Jones, extension marketing specialist, as lumber and plywood prices increase, so will timber market prices.

"Interest rates appear to have peaked, and mortgage rates should come down this season", the specialist said, "and the reduction in the prime rate will give lumber dealers and wholesalers more incentive to increase inventory."

The increase in inventories may not occur until later in 1981, Dr. Jones indicates, but rising prices normally spark demand so more timber will be cut.

Having a strong impact on the problem of lagging supply is the fact that on private non-industrial lands, only 17 percent of the acres harvested are being replanted or reseeded, according to Glenn Jones of the Mississippi Forestry Association.

Reforestation would be spurred, Jones believes, by revision of federal tax laws to increase incentives, and by altering inheritance tax laws which today tend to liquidate forests after the death of owners in order for heirs to pay steep tax demands shortly after the death of the forest owner.

An analysis of present ownership of Mississippi forestlands shows that 75 percent of the state's timberland is owned by 133,000 people and only 12 percent of this land is actually producing timber.

Mississippi's current timber drain includes over 100,000 acres of timberland lost each year to clear cutting without being reseeded or replanted, according to state forester Dick Allen.

In view of the bright economic outlook for Mississippi's timber industry it would behoove all state landowners to bring any idle acres into a reforestation program as rapidly as possible.
