Repairs To Be Costly

Monday Fire Damages Bridge

A fire of undetermined origin destroyed more than 50 percent of a bridge on Highway 4 near the Prentiss-Tippah county line Monday afternoon, forcing the Highway Department to close a section of the road. Officials said it has not been determined whether the fire was accidental or set intentionally.

Ken Hurt, director of Public Information at the Mississippi State Highway Department in Tupelo, said Tuesday that the state fire marshal is investigating the cause of the fire at the bridge.

Hurt said that it will probably take 8-10 months to repair the 350 feet of damaged bridge.

"The tentative cost of repairing the bridge is between a half and three-quarters of a million dollars," Hurt said.

He said traffic is currently being detoured onto Highway 370 to Highway 30, Highway 30 to Frankstown, and then up Highway 45 from Frankstown to Booneville.

The bridge, which spans the Little Hatchie River between Booneville and Ripley, was built approximately 20 years ago out of creosote lumber and asphalt.

"Concrete and steel will be used to repair the bridge," Hurt said.

The fire was reported to the Booneville Fire Department about 5 p.m. Monday. Fire Chief Frank Flemming said the fire was fought for about an hour. Jumpertown and Ripley Fire Departments also responded to the fire.

Holiday Closings

Many of Booneville's merchants this week indicated they planned to close Saturday for the Independence Day holiday, but will remain open Friday and Monday for the convenience of their customers.

The Booneville Post Office will also be open Friday and Monday, but will be closed Saturday.

Offices in the Prentiss County Courthouse plan to close Saturday and Monday for the holiday. The Booneville City Hall, which does not open on Saturdays, will also be closed this week on Friday, but will be open Monday.

The Banner-Independent's office will also be closed all day Friday, but will open again Monday morning.

Second Morrow Murder Trial Also Ends Without Decision

By ANGELA SMITH
Staff Writer

For the second time, a jury has been unable to reach a verdict in the murder trial of a Prentiss County man.

The second murder trial of Bobby Ray Morrow ended in a mistrial last Thursday night when, after deliberating for almost four hours, the jury of six men and six women informed Circuit Judge Fred Wicker they were unable to reach a unanimous decision.

County Attorney John Hatcher said the case will be tried for the third time during the October term of the Prentiss County Circuit Court.

A mistrial was declared in February at Morrow's first trial when another six man, six woman jury told Circuit Judge Thomas Gardner that, after more than five hours' deliberation, they were hopelessly deadlocked in their attempt to reach a verdict.

Morrow, 34, was indicted last October on murder charges in connection with the March 22, 1980, shooting

Nine Are Sentenced In Local Circuit Court

By ANGELA SMITH
Staff Writer

Nine people who had pleaded guilty to criminal charges were sentenced last Friday by Circuit Judge Fred Wicker during the June term of Prentiss County Circuit Court.

Tommy Kesler, 18, of Baldwin, was sentenced to serve two additional years in Parchman as a result of his guilty plea last Friday to a jailbreak charge. He was indicted two weeks ago on that charge.

The charge was in connection with Kesler's escape from the Prentiss County jail on April 22. Kesler was being held for delivery to Parchman for his conviction on other charges when he escaped.

Curtis Lee Gamble, 31, of Route 6, Booneville, was sentenced to a four-year prison term by Judge Wicker. Gamble pleaded guilty to a burglary charge in connection with a break-in at Barron's Grocery. He was ordered to pay $35 in restitution to J.R. Barron.

Timothy James Holloway,

18, of Route 5, Booneville, was given a suspended two-year prison term for his guilty plea to two counts of arson. He was sentenced to a suspended three-year prison term for his guilty plea to two related counts of grand larceny.

Holloway was placed on two years' probation and ordered to pay restitution to Farm Bureau Insurance in the amount of $2,940, and $500 to Milton Flemming and $500 to Mrs. Rosella

Independence Day

HIS FIRST PARADE—Kristie George (left), one of the four young ladies who initiated the Seventh Street, 4th of July parade, helps 10-month old Barkley Galloway prepare for his first Independence Day Parade by decorating his stroller in red, white and blue streamers. Kristie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will George and Barkley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Galloway.

On 4th Of July

Neighborhood Parade Is Annual Affair

It's the only patriotic thing to do.

At least, that's how the people of one Booneville neighborhood feel about having a Fourth of July parade. So, since the city doesn't sponsor such a parade, for the seventh straight year, the people in that community plan to hold their own.

The idea of the neighborhood parade began seven years ago when four young ladies of the Seventh Street neighborhood decided Booneville needed a parade on the Fourth of July. Since there was not one scheduled, Cindy George, her sister Kristie George, Claire Lamb and Lori Bolen organized their own, marching through the streets of the neighborhood.

Somehow the idea caught on and other people began to join in from year to year, dressing up in whatever they could find, and playing whatever instrument happening to be lying around.

Two years ago, the number who participated in the parade had swelled to about 50. And last year the number jumped even higher, to about 100 participants.

Mr. and Mrs. Will George, whose house on Seventh Street has become an informal gathering place for the parade, are looking for even more to turn out this year.

The parade is a fun thing, according to George, and anyone who would like to take part—as a participant or as a spectator—is welcome, whether they live in that neighborhood or not.

"Anyone who wants to show their patriotic spirit can come join us," Mrs. George said.

This year's parade is scheduled to start at 10 Saturday morning. Following the same route as last year, the parade will line up on Seventh Street, turn west on College to Ninth, go north on Ninth to Washington, east on Washington to Fifth, and follow Fifth to Foster Park, where the parade will disband.

There will be lemonade and refreshments waiting in Foster Park. The parade and other festivities usually take about 1½ hours, George said.

While Booneville's neighborhood Independence Day Parade may not be as fancy or elaborate as other parades that will be taking place across the country, few will match it in enthusiasm—that is if past years are any indication.

'ROASTED' EARS—Thomas Goddard of Booneville looks over parched, dried-out corn stalks in his garden on Tidwell Street. He says that, because of the hot, dry weather during the past few weeks, he has lost some of his 3½-to-4-acre corn crop. "Two weeks ago this was some of the prettiest corn in Prentiss County," he said. "Now it is gone." Goddard, who retired from construction work last year, said he decided to raise the corn this year, mostly as a hobby, but also to sell. Fortunately for him, only the corn he planted on a hillside has died. He says he still has some growing in a bottom that has not been affected by the weather yet.

NE Board Takes Steps To Limit Use Of Stadium

Northeast Mississippi Junior College trustees took steps last week that could possibly halt the use of the school's football facilities by area high schools after 1983. Booneville High School has rented the field for its home games for numerous years.

The college charged a $100 per game rental fee until the past two seasons when the fee was raised to $200 per game.

Tony V. Parker, Alcorn County superintendent and NEMJC trustee, said seasonal maintenance on the field and stadium costs the college about $3,000. Included in the cost are expenditures for watering and mowing the field and painting bleachers, press box facilities and restrooms.

He also said weekly janitorial costs on the stadium were at least $300. The real cost to the college for use of the stadium is about $600 per game, Parker said.

An increased fee schedule for use of the stadium was unanimously approved by the trustees.

Schools wishing to rent the field will pay $300 per game during the 1981 football season. The rental fee will jump to $400 in 1982 and climb to $500 in 1983.

In State Poll

Gasoline Prices Decline

Gasoline prices in the state declined for the second month in a row, according to information gathered in the American Automobile Association's Fuel Gauge Report for the Fourth of July.

Since the Memorial Day report last month, AAA reports that the average price of fuel in Mississippi dropped by 1.6 cents a gallon to $1.451. In May, a decrease of approximately one cent per gallon was reported.

Fuel remains generally available in Mississippi and throughout the United States, AAA reports. Motorists traveling for the Fourth of July holiday should find ample fuel supplies along major travel routes and in cities.

Mississippi's prices, while continuing to decline, are still the highest in the nation, a trend shown in the past several Fuel Gauge Reports.

The lowest prices in the nation were reported from Ohio, where the average cost per gallon was $1.307. The average price of gas in the United States as a whole was $1.374, a decrease of 1.1 cents since last month.

A growing difference between the price of full-service and self-service prices is giving motorists a chance to take advantage of a competitive market, AAA reports.

Average self-service prices were cheaper by 6 cents a gallon in Mississippi and 8 cents a gallon on an average throughout the United States.

However, the AAA pointed out that while savings can be realized at self-service pumps, proper maintenance through regular inspections of fluid levels, tire pressure, belts and hoses can also help save money to and add to travel convenience and safety.

BIBLE QUESTION BOX

QUESTION: Mr. Hogland, does the Bible teach that man is wholly mortal?

WARD HOGLAND

ANSWER: In Matthew 10:28, our Lord refutes the theory of materialism. He says, "And fear not them which kill the body." Why? Because the latter part of the verse tells us they cannot "Kill the soul." The term "kill" is equivalent to "put to death." The Lord tells us the body can be put to death, but the soul cannot. If the materialist is right, then the Lord is wrong. He says there is a part of man which cannot be killed. It is sometimes argued that the latter part of the verse teaches that the soul will be "annihilated." the word destroy means "to deliver up to eternal misery" (Thayer). W.E. Vine in his word studies says, "The idea is not extinction but ruin, loss, not of being, but of well-being." Thus, you have the answer that man is not wholly mortal. The word man is from anthropos and according to both Thayer, Gingrich and Arndt this word has reference to the two fold nature of man which includes both body and soul. Although the word "soul" is sometimes used to denote lower animal life it is also used for that which is higher. It is the body that dies and not the spirit (Jas. 2:26).

Parker's original motion would have closed the door on field rental after the 1983 football campaign. However, an amendment by Troy Holladay of Tippah County leaves the rental open. Holladay's amendment would allow the college to set the rental fee for the 1984 season and reap all proceeds from concession sales.

Another amendment requires schools using the facility after the 1983 season to pay a fee based on operational and capital improvement costs as well as lost concession revenue.

Parker said that, under the final agreement, the rental fee could be as high as $2,000 per game.

Trustees approved a $507,500 contract June 2 for stadium improvements at NEMJC.

Change Of Venue Granted In Manslaughter Trial

A manslaughter trial originally scheduled for last Thursday in Prentiss County Court has been moved to Monroe County and rescheduled for the October term of Circuit Court.

Circuit Judge Fred Wicker last week granted a change of venue to James Lowrey Edge who was convicted of murder in a jury trial during the October 1979 term of the Prentiss County Circuit Court.

The murder charge stemmed from the shotgun slaying of another Prentiss County man, John Wayne Murphy, 39, at Elder's Lake on the night of Oct. 24, 1978.

In February of this year, the Mississippi Supreme Court, in a unanimous opinion, reversed that murder conviction and remanded Edge for a new trial on the charge of manslaughter.

The opinion, written by Justice Harry Walker, cited four reversible errors found in the trial which resulted in a murder conviction and life sentence for the 36-year-old Edge.

The court also said that when the new trial on manslaughter was held a change of venue to another county should be granted if requested by Edge's attorney.

During the first trial, Edge's wife, Geneva, testified she had been having an affair with Murphy and was attempting to break it off. The Edges told the jury that the night the shooting occurred Murphy objected to her breaking off the affair and attacked her with a knife.

She testified Murphy kept saying that if he couldn't have her, nobody else could and that he was going to kill her and then kill himself.

The Edges also testified that in the struggle that followed, the defendant was cut on the hand. He said he left his wife struggling with Murphy while he got a 12-gauge shotgun from his car.

Edge returned to the scene of the struggle, where Murphy was still attacking his wife and still threatening to kill her when Edge shot him, they said.

Another woman, Eva Epperson, had gone to the lake with Murphy, but testified that she was gathering wood for a fire they had built and did not witness the shooting.

Edge's defense was that he was protecting his wife. However, prosecution witnesses claimed Murphy could not have been close to Mrs. Edge because there was no blood on her coat after the shooting.

The prosecution also said that Murphy was crippled and unable to walk at the time due to an automobile accident he had been in.

In the Supreme Court opinion, Walker said Edge could not claim justifiable homicide since the material evidence about the proximity of Murphy to Geneva Edge was in conflict.

However, he said the court is "of the opinion that the evidence does not rise to that high degree which would justify a jury in finding the defendant guilty of murder beyond a reasonable doubt."

The Supreme Court held Judge Wicker erred in not granting the defense motion for a directed verdict of innocent of murder and leaving only the charge of manslaughter to be considered by the jury.

The Supreme Court also held that Wicker erred in allowing the county prosecutor to instruct the jury as to the law, in not allowing a defense witness, Jackie Hamblin, to rebut testimony by the state that there was no blood on Geneva's coat, and committed a fourth reversible error by not granting the defense attorney's motion for an overnight recess when he had been working for 10½ hours.

Edge has been released from custody of the Prentiss County Sheriff's Department on $10,000 bond.

For Key Community Status

Prentiss County Completes Five Of Seven Requirements

Prentiss County has completed five requirements thus far on its way to possibly becoming a "Key Community," Doug Mansell, Key Community Program Coordinator said Monday.

Prentiss County must fulfill two more requirements by August 1982 to be eligible for "Key Community" status.

The Key Community program is a statewide program designed to help areas interested in attracting new industry to prepare for achieving this goal.

Each community that successfully completes the seven categories in the program will be given priority consideration by state developers when they are approached by industrial prospects seeking a community to locate.

One of the requirements currently being worked on is a clean-up campaign.

"We're working on goals with the County Extension office," Mansell said. He hopes by the end of July to have the goals formulated, he said.

Some of the obtainable goals for the clean-up campaign include encouraging the communities and towns to keep the roadsides clean and the repainting of the industrial park signs in Booneville and Baldwin, he said.

Another possibility, Mansell said, might involve civic clubs sponsoring a clean-up day.

Mansell said the merchants in Baldwin and Booneville have been very cooperative in cleaning around their stores.

Once the community feels they have accomplished their goals, a three-member review team will come to Prentiss County to simulate an industry seeking to locate here.

The local seven member Development Team will have to make a presentation just as if the review team were a real industry. This will be the seventh requirement, Mansell said.

The team will have to be

THE BIG AND THE LITTLE—Shelby Moorman, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Moorman of Route 6, Booneville, poses with a huge cabbage grown by his father in the Aklitudo community. Moorman said he planted the cabbage seed on Jan. 1. The head shown here tipped the scales at 19¼ lbs., he said.

Booneville Mayor Charles Crabb and Baldwin Mayor Merle Rowan co-chair the Site Committee; Booneville alderman Wade Lambert and Baldwin banker John Haynes co-chair the Existing Industry Committee; Prentiss County Extension Home Economist Claire Ross chairs the Community Appearance Committee; and Booneville attorney Eugene Gifford chairs the Development Team.

If the community is approved as a Key Community, Gov. William Winter will come to Prentiss County to present the award.

On June 18, the Mississippi Board of Economic Development voted to award Key Community status to four communities who were among the first to meet the qualifications for this designation: Madison County, Pike County, and the cities of Jackson and Meridian.

RECEIVE FUNDS—The city of Marietta has received a total of $210,000 in the form of a grant and a loan from the Farmers Home Administration for work on the town's sewer system. ## Marietta Receives Grant And Loan

The city of Marietta has received a loan of $110,000 and a grant of $100,000 from the Farmers Home Administration to work on the city's sewer system.

"All the pipes are in and now they are starting work on the treatment plant," town clerk Eunice Sherrill said last Friday.

Work on the sewer system began in March and she said the project should be completed by late this year.

In addition to the grant and loan from the FmHA, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Appalachian Regional Commission provided funds for the city, she said.

Bills Affect Corrections Board

By SEN. BILL MAY
Fifth District

H.B. No. 542: This bill reenacts the Department of Corrections, which was slated for expiration on July 1, 1981. The department would continue in existence until June 30, 1984.

The bill continues the authorization for the confinement of state offenders in county jails until July 1, 1982. The maximum daily payment by the state to counties for the confinement of state offenders is increased from $7 to $10.

The supervised release program is continued for another year, until July 1, 1982.

H.B. No. 887: This bill revises the aims and purposes of the Penitentiary-Made Goods Law of 1978.

One of the aims of this law is to provide employment in prison industries so that offenders may receive vocational training and rehabilitation. This aim is eliminated.

The aims and purposes of the law in the future would be (a) the utilization of prison labor for self-maintenance and for reimbursing this state for the expenses incurred by reason of their crimes nad imprisonment, and (b) the requisitioning and disbursement of penitentiary products.

This bill eliminates the requirement that state agencies which need products manufactured in the prison industry program must purchase them from the Department of Corrections. Also, the bill changes the present law so that sales of penitentiary-made goods could be made to the public.

This bill incorporates the provisions of Senate Bill No. 2118, which became law during this session and which mandated that a prison industry be established for the growing, harvesting and processing of vegetables.

The bill creates a Prison Industries Advisory Council which would advise the commissioner and the Board of Corrections on all aspects of the prison industry program at the state penitentiary, including but not limited to, the types and quantity of products to be manufactured and their manner of production.

Another provision of this bill authorizes the lease of existing buildings on the grounds of the state penitentiary (a) to a private individual, firm or corporation for establishing and operating a factory for the manufacture and processing of products, or (b) to any other commercial enterprise deemed consistent with the aims and purposes of the Penitentiary-Made Goods Law.

The land would be leased by the Building Commission upon the request of the Board of Corrections and with the approval of the Commission of Budget and Accounting.

The bill authorizes the department to contract for work projects from outside sources, including private enterprise.

The lessee would employ inmates in the manufacture of its products.

Reflections

By Ken Christian

Have you ever wanted to write a letter to your legislator in Washington or Jackson to express your opinion about pending legislation or some other subject?

The following suggestions, published by the League of Women Voters of Mississippi in their May 1981 newsletter, may help you get your point across.

DO address your senator or representative properly: Representative, Mr. _____; Senator, _____.

DO write legibly. Handwritten letters are fine if they are readable.

DO be brief and to the point; discuss only one issue in each letter; identify a bill by number or title, if possible.

DO use your own words on your own stationary.

DO include your name and address and sign your name legibly. If you have family, business, or political connections related to the issue, explain it. It may serve as identification when your point of view is considered.

DO be courteous and reasonable.

DO feel free to write if you have a question or problem dealing with procedures of governmental departments.

DO write when your spokesman in Washington does something of which you approve. Public officials hear mostly from constituents who oppose their actions. (A note of appreciation will make your senator or representative remember you favorably the next time you write.)

DO write early in the session before a bill has been introduced if you have ideas about an issue you would like to see incorporated in legislation. If you are for or against a bill, and your senator or representative is a member of the committee to which it has been referred, write him just before the bill comes to the floor for debate and vote.

DO write the chairman or members of a committee holding hearings on legislation in which you are interested if you have factual information which you think should influence his or her thinking.

Eyes On Mississippi

Congressional Race Should Be Classic

By BILL MINOR
Columnist

JACKSON, Miss.—Mississippi has finally arrived at the ultimate of two-party politics in the Fourth Congressional District race which now shapes up as a classic confrontation between a Democrat and a Republican who sharply represent the differences in the philosophies of their parties.

The July 7 showdown between Republican Liles Williams and Democrat Wayne Dowdy should tell a great deal about how far this state has come in the development of a political system that accommodates healthy competition between conflicting styles and doctrines of the two national parties.

Williams' quick ascent from a total unknown on the state public scene just two months ago to the ticket-leader by a sizable margin in the first round of voting to fill the vacant congressional seat amply demonstrates the ability of the state Republican organization to reach into their stable of uptown conservatives for a candidate and plug him into the party machinery with overnight success.

So far, it appears that all the 45-year-old Williams has to do to win is to keep hanging tightly to the coattails of Ronald Reagan, reaffirm his own conservatism each day and let the well-oiled GOP machinery do the rest.

But it may not be that easy. Dowdy, the 37-year-old McComb mayor, clawed his way to the runoff over two other better known Democrats by hard campaigning even while taking positions on several issues that are not generally popular in Mississippi.

Dowdy abandoned the "me-too" conservative stance that other Democrats have adopted in competing against major Republican opposition in congressional and senatorial races going back for the last 10 years. Significantly, in all cases where the Democrat has tried to appear more conservative than the Republican, he has lost.

It was thought by some political observers that when Dowdy took his stance in favor of extension of the 1965 Voting Rights act at a Jackson press conference three weeks before the election, he had killed his chances with the rural white vote in the lower end of the district on which he was depending for his key base of support.

Because Dowdy was able to hold his own in those rural counties despite the Voting Rights issue, it may have proved for the first time that taking a position which is of vital interest to blacks doesn't necessarily drive whites in the opposite direction anymore in Mississippi.

Even more surprising in the emergence of Dowdy from the pack of Democrats into the final round of the congressional race was that the endorsement he received from organized labor turned into a decided plus rather than the proverbial kiss of death generally believed in state political circles.

Labor evidently embraced Dowdy with more gusto than any state candidate to come alone in years, and its effectiveness in getting out the working class vote, particularly the black vote for Dowdy in a half dozen counties around the district is now clearly apparent.

The black vote that Democrat Britt Singletary had been counting on as a result of his endorsement by the Anderson-Shirley black political machine in Jackson disintegrated, largely under the work done for Dowdy by labor's A. Philip Randolph Institute.

A lot of behind the scenes maneuvering had taken place prior to the Mississippi AFL-CIO's endorsement of Dowdy just two weeks before the election. Singletary's professional campaign manager from Washington, Bill Albers, had good political ties with national labor leaders through whom he tried to get Mississippi labor leaders to remain publicly neutral and quietly support Singletary. But when Dowdy became the only candidate who would take a clear stance on

For July 4th: An Expression Of The American Mind

By DAVID TUCKER

(c) 1981, Public Research, Syndicated

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

These words, of course, are from the American Declaration of Independence, the 205th anniversary of which we celebrate this July 4.

Thomas Jefferson once described these words and the Declaration of Independence itself as an expression of the American mind. Having composed the Declaration, Jefferson devoted the remaining years of his life to explaining these self-evident truths and drawing out their consequences for the experiment in self-government that he and his compatriots had begun.

It is a fitting occasion to reflect upon Jefferson's life's work and his ideas, which remain in their essence an expression of the American mind today.

All of Jefferson's political principles flowed from the fundamental fact, the "self-evident truth," of human equality. Because men were equal, no man could claim by nature or by the grace of God any rightful power over any other man. Because men were created equal, therefore, they were created free.

"The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time," wrote Jefferson. Furthermore, because no man had a natural right to rule over his equals, government could be justly established only if men agreed to establish it.

As Jefferson wrote in the Declaration, "Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Men could form various kinds of government through consent, but Jefferson had no doubt about which was the best form. As he wrote, "From the moment that to preserve our rights a change of government became necessary, no doubt could be entertained that a republican form was the most consonant with reason, with rights, with the freedom of man."

WHAT IS THE defining characteristic of republican government? "The first principle of republicanism," wrote Jefferson, is that majority rule "is the fundamental law of every society of individuals of equal rights." "This law once disregarded," he warned, "no other remains but that of force."

Equality, freedom, consent, majority rule—these were the elements of Jefferson's understanding of self-government. "Every man, and every body of men on earth, possess the right of self-government. They receive it with their being from the hand of nature."

Nevertheless, Jefferson understood that men did not automatically know how to exercise their right of self-government. "The qualifications for self-government in society are not innate. They are the reward of habit and long training."

If men were to respect the rights of others, they had first to learn to subdue their own selfish passions. This was an extraordinary demand and would indeed take habituation and training if men were to comply with it. But every man had to learn to govern his passions, if a nation's self-government were to survive.

Even majority rule, "the fundamental law" of republicanism, was not a law unto itself. In his first inaugural Jefferson spoke of the "sacred principle, that though the will of the majority is in all cases to prevail, that will, to be rightful, must be reasonable; that the minority possess their equal rights, which equal laws must protect." Self-government meant ruling those passions that would otherwise lead men to ignore the rights of others and to subject the minority to inequality before the law.

JEFFERSON BELIEVED THAT the American people were capable of self-government, and so he worked with his fellow patriots to put the government into their hands. In so doing, however, Jefferson did not feel that he was acting only for Americans.

"It is impossible not to be sensible that we are acting for all mankind; that circumstances denied to others but indulged to us, have imposed on us the duty of proving what is the degree of freedom and self-government in which a society may venture to leave its individual members."

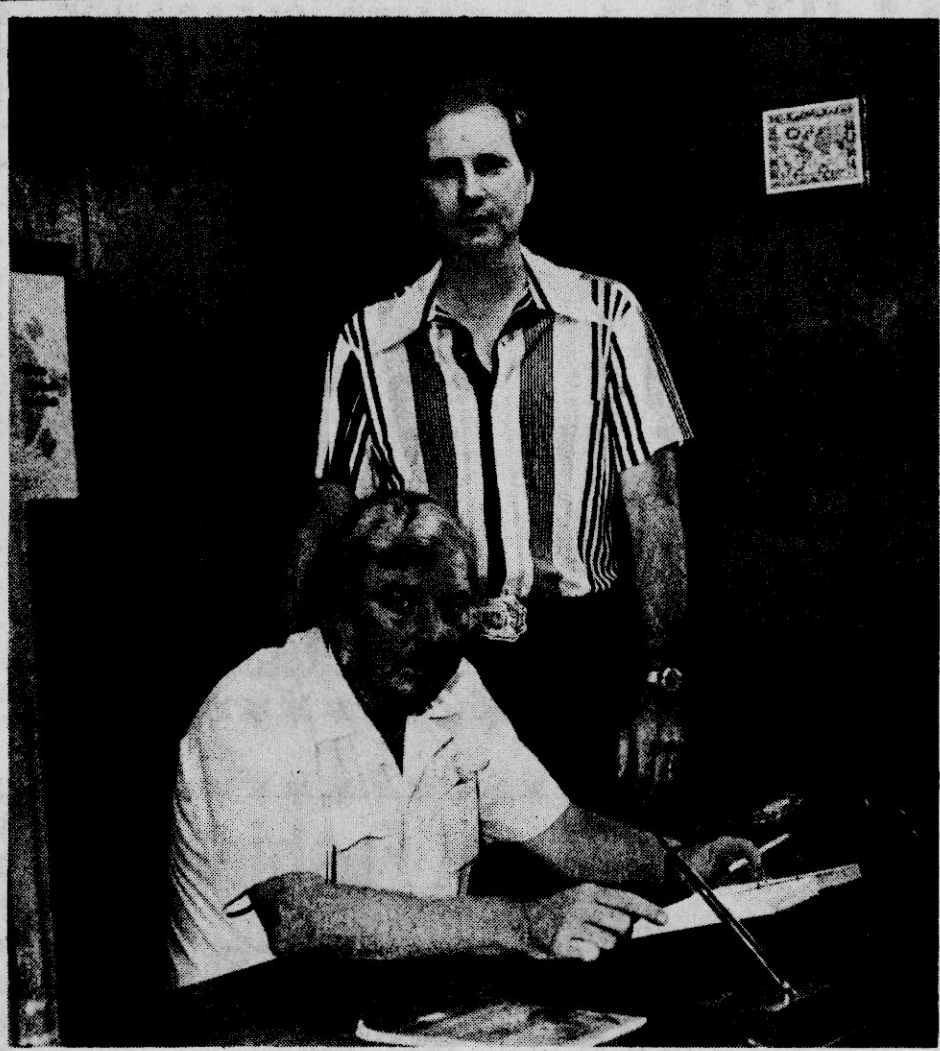

MORE THAN 200 years after Jefferson and his compatriots began our experiment in free government, the experiment and the duty is still ours. In fulfilling this duty we may take comfort in the words of the last letter that Jefferson wrote in his life.

Too ill to attend the celebration in Washington of the 50th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson, who would die on that anniversary, wrote to the Mayor of Washington that "all eyes are opened, or opening, to the rights of man... The mass of mankind had not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few booted and spurred ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God. These are grounds of hope for others. For ourselves, let the annual return of this day forever refresh our recollections of these rights and an undiminished devotion to them."

W.R. Morris (seated) And Jerry Skinner

'A License To Spy'

Local Private Detective To Be Subject Of New Book

Move over Sherlock Holmes, Phillip Marlow and Jim Rockford...Here comes Jerry Skinner.

Skinner, a native of Tishomingo County, has been a detective-for-hire for more than 10 years. He now has an office in his home near Iuka and also shares an office with attorney James Godwin in Booneville.

And now the local detective has been selected as the subject of a new book being written by W.R. Morris, author of "The Twelfth of August," the authorized biography of former McNairy County (Tenn.) Sheriff Buford Pusser.

However, the fact that Skinner is a detective and is to be immortalized in print is the only similarity between him and those fictionalized detectives mentioned earlier.

"We are always seeing private detective stories on television, and they live a wild, make-believe life," Morris said. "They spend most of their time entertaining some beautiful chick but always manage to catch the crook just before the show ends," he laughed.

"I thought it would be interesting to learn how a real-life private eye operates, so I decided to write a book about Jerry Skinner's experiences," the author explained.

In the past, Skinner says, he has tracked down murderers, located missing persons, and trailed unfaithful wives from honky tonks to motel rooms.

He says he has recently been hired to delve into the background of a well-known celebrity. Relatives of a man who worked for the superstar want Skinner to uncover some information on the celebrity's activities.

"I can't release the name of the celebrity at this time," Skinner said. "If I did, it would hamper the investigation."

Morris' book relating the experiences of the veteran investigator will be entitled "A License to Spy." It should be ready for publication early next year, the author says.

Morris' earlier work, "The Twelfth of August," was published in hardback by Aurora Publishers and in paperback by Bantam Books. It relates the experiences of the legendary Sheriff Pusser who has been the subject of two movies and a television series.

The book about Pusser sold almost a million copies, the author said.

A 1981 amendment to the Implied Consent Act tightens the control and increases the penalty for persons driving under the influence of alcohol. The amendment went into effect July 1.

Unlike most states, Mississippi has had two charges for drunk driving. Driving while intoxicated (DWI) which was charged against persons with a .15 and higher blood-alcohol content has been abolished.

Only driving under the influence (DUI) will be charged in the future. However, that charge will be placed against any person with a .10 and higher blood-alcohol content.

The recent legislation makes two penalties mandatory - a $200 fine and attendance and completion of Mississippi Alcohol Safety Education Program (MASEP) classes. Failure to attend MASEP classes will result in a mandatory one-year suspension of driver's license.

"Judges around the state should observe and implement this change in law. First offenders of DUI must be ordered to MASEP," explained Margaret Eatherly, director of MASEP which is housed at Mississippi State University. "Before this change in law, MASEP was a voluntary program. It is now mandatory for all first offenders."

A first offender is defined as any person who has received only one DUI charge and who has not been convicted of either two DUI, a DWI and/or a DUI-refused-chemical-test charge within the 24-month period preceding the latest offense.

The legislation and MASEP are aimed at reducing the number of alcohol-related highway accidents. More than 2,000 students attended MASEP classes during 1980.

"It is a fact that attendance at an alcohol safety education program teaches a person about the adverse effects of alcohol and reduces repetition of drunk driving behavior," said Gen. Sidney Berry, commissioner of Public Safety. "Lowering the amount of alcohol one can legally drink before driving and raising the penalty for drunk driving will help significantly in making our highways safer."

MASEP was established on a pilot-basis in 1972. In 1975, MASEP classes were established in key locations throughout Mississippi. The classes are offered at a location within approximately 40 miles from any person in the state.

In Prentiss County, MASEP classes are held at the Northeast Mississippi Junior College in Booneville.

MASEP classes cover several areas including alcohol use and abuse, behavior modification and awareness, and driving safety. Information regarding the Implied Consent Act and the process of a DUI arrest is given. In addition, a law enforcement officer serves as an assistant in each class.

"Our data shows that persons who complete MASEP classes are less likely to be arrested for a second DUI offense. We attempt to modify the drinking and driving behavior of those in MASEP. The end result is safer highways for people in our state," Eatherly said.

SOFT CONTACTS AND COMFORT

If pressed for a one-word summary of the advantage of the soft contact lens, that word would be "comfort." The patients who most appreciate this are former hard lens wearers who stopped using them because of discomfort. When a soft lens is put on their eye, they are absolutely astounded by the lack of any annoying sensation.

Did you ever wonder why a contact lens placed directly on the cornea does not hurt? I'm sure you've had the experience of a speck of dust irritating the eye and by extension you would expect a contact lens (which is so much bigger) to hurt even worse. But, the cornea is very choosy in its pain sensitivity. It reacts more actively to abrasiveness than size. Soft lenses absorb the warm tear fluid making them more pliant and natural-feeling in the eye.

In fact, a large object touches your cornea all the time - your eye lid. Yet, you feel no pain each time you blink. A contact lens, which is large compared to a speck of dust, won't hurt either, provided it's properly fitted.

Student Attends Clinic

Karen Wimberley represented the Prentiss County Vocational Technical School's FBLA chapter at the first State FBLA Speech Clinic last week at Hinds Junior College in Jackson.

The FBLA Speech Clinic was held jointly with the State FFA Speech Clinic.

The sessions began Monday morning, June 22, and ended Friday at noon, June 26. Miss Jerri Agent, a speech instructor at Hinds Junior College, was in charge of the sessions.

The students made one to seven minute speeches from written and extemporaneous subjects. They were also taught Parliamentary Law procedures.

Karen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Wimberley, will be a senior at Jumpertown High School, and a part of the Cooperative Vocational Office Training program at the Prentiss County Vocational Technical School.

For Some Recipients

Foodstamps May Be Cut

An increase in some other benefits may result in decreased food stamp allotments for some households in Prentiss County, according to the Prentiss County Welfare Department.

An increase in Social Security and SSI benefits will begin in July and an increase in Railroad Retirement and VA maximum benefits will begin in August, a spokesman for the welfare department said.

"All food stamp households containing these types of income will be reviewed during the months of July through October," he said. "These changes could result in decreased food stamp allotments for some households."

Written notice will not be provided to reflect these changes, the spokesman said. But, food stamp recipients may contact the Prentiss County welfare and food stamp office if there are any questions.

Home Economist's Notes

Inflation Shaves Insurance

By CLAIRE T. ROSS
Extension Home Economist

If you have not updated the amount of your insurance recently, inflation could cause you to fail to meet the requirements of the homeowner's policy replacement cost provision.

The replacement cost provision of the homeowner's policy says that if you maintain an amount of insurance equal to at least 80 percent of your home's replacement cost, any covered loss will be repaired or replaced without a deduction for depreciation.

For example, if you carry $50,000 worth of insurance on your home and suffer a $4,000 loss, your insurance will pay for the loss provided the 80 percent requirement was met, the policy would pay all $4,000 of the loss, less only the deductible contained in the policy.

If you did not fulfill the 80 percent requirement, the loss would be settled in one of two ways:

—The policy would pay for the actual cash value of the loss, which would include a deduction for depreciation. If it was determined that your home had depreciated 20 percent, the policy would cover only 80 percent ($3,200) of the $4,000 loss.

—The policy would pay a proportion of the loss based on the ratio of the amount of insurance that you actually carried to the amount needed to meet the 80 percent requirement.

For example, if your home's replacement cost was $75,000, your $50,000 worth of insurance would be only 5/6 of the required amount ($60,000). So your policy would cover only 5/6 ($3,333) of the $4,000 loss.

If your home's replacement cost is $75,000 and you carry only $60,000—just enough to meet the 80 percent requirement for a total loss—your policy would pay only $60,000, not the full $75,000.

The replacement cost provision applies only to losses to the house itself and not to losses to the contents or possessions. The replacement cost is determined not by how much you owe on your mortgage or how much you could sell your house for, but by what it would cost to build a duplicate of your house at today's prices.

Ask your insurance agent to help you estimate your home's replacement cost.

Your agent can help you to determine how much insurance you should carry to protect your home and to make full use of the homeowner's policy 80 percent replacement cost provision.

Residential construction costs have increased about 25 percent in the last three years in Mississippi. Be prepared to protect your home ownership with adequate insurance.

Library Notes

By LEE DAVIS
Librarian

A preschool-age story time, beginning at 10 each Wednesday morning, is being planned as a regular part of the George E. Allen Library's program.

While primary-grade pupils are on summer vacation we will be very happy to have them join us.

A few older boys and girls have not returned books and materials that they checked out for study projects. We urge them and adults who have overdue books to remember the importance of getting the books back to the library so that they are again available for use.

This is very essential to keeping service at the library as good as possible. It is a responsibility that the borrower willingly assumes before a card is issued for library use.

The Allen Library can't have too many good users! Every user is important. Please remember that overdue books affect other patrons, the cost of service, and especially the quality of service everyone receives. Help the library to help you.

County Agent's Notes

By W.H. HADEN
County Agent
Late Plantings

Soybeans planted through June 20 probably will experience only small, if any, yield reductions if they can get off to a quick start and make fast growth in the first month. This should be possible with the soil moisture we have.

Using narrower rows will help late plantings. This may not always be practical, but after June 20 I would consider using a grain drill. Most folks agree that after mid-June, medium to late maturing varieties are generally better than early varieties.

Irrigation also will help offset some of the effects of late plantings. Research in Arkansas has shown with narrow rows and irrigation, an early variety yielded as much as later varieties when planted in July.

Replant Soybeans?

If you're like most farmers, you probably plant soybeans too thick. If you have a thinned stand and are considering replanting, look at the uniformity of the remaining plants, presence or absence of disease and other stress factors.

An average of four plants per row foot, if uniform and healthy, is enough to keep in 40-inch rows. Half that many is acceptable in 20-inch rows. While drilled plantings need more plants to help shade weeds, two to three plants per square foot give 97, 120, to 130, 680 plants per acre, which is plenty.

Cotton Marketing

Cotton prices may move up and down this summer in response to weather and other developments that could affect the size of next fall's harvest.

Prices probably will move higher on "weather scares." You may want to take advantage of these runups to fix a price on part of your crop.

Stop Sicklepod

Always spray sicklepod when the leaves are wide open. Spraying at night, late in the afternoon, early in the morning or during drought stress may give poor results because the leaves are closed or partly closed in these periods.

That leaves the middle of the day as the best time to spray sicklepod. Surprisingly, you'll find that cloudy weather may help control efforts during the day since it stimulates greater expansion of the leaves.

There was a beautiful wedding cake, golden punch, mints and nuts served to those who came. The decoration was yellow roses and greenery. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Wingo were hosts for the occasion. Three large tables were laden with beautiful and useful gifts from loved ones and friends, showing their love for them.

Corinth.

A friend of the family wrote: "The last of a family of nine, all of whom made distinctive contribution to this section, Lloyd Downs was known for unassuming loyalty to the simple virtues of temperance and industry and integrity."

"His sagacious judgement made him quick-eyed and quick-brained, whether working in his church, making up an account, or performing on the golf course."

"His clear thought about things, social, political and religious, made him one of the most trusted of men. The character of the man lent luster to his community."

"His quick conversation roamed over many themes and he punctuated it with flashes of quiet humor, references to his children's achievements, or incidents of near 91 years of recollection.

"Lloyd Downs' memory is a service and a benediction."

Mrs. Kaye Osterman and her daughter, Bonnie, visited her aunt, Bertha Pinkstaff of Booneville last week. The Ostermans are from St. Simon Island, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Stoop of Dalton, Ga., have been visiting in the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stoop. They were joined by the rest of the Stoop family on Saturday, June 27, to celebrate Mr. Stoop's 80th birthday. The occasion called for barbecued hamburgers and homemade ice-cream out in Mr Stoop's backyard.

Thought for the week: "Dreaming of Freedom"

If I to all Americans Could give at least one thing,

I'd give to them, I'm sure, The daring gift to dream. For dreams are so essential

While freedom seems to cheapen,

And only daring dreams Can wake a nation sleeping,

And shock us 'til we see Our fathers' dream secured;

One nation under God, With a future that's assured. But we have lost that dream

And unless we re-learn The secret of dreaming, Our nation will turn To other forms of government

Where freedom is mocked And people suddenly discover They're locked under locks.

If I to Americans Could give one gift of earth,

It would be dreaming the dream Of freedom's matchless worth

Copied.

Mississippi Farmers Utilize Commodity Loans

Farmers throughout the state of Mississippi took advantage of price support loan programs on the 1980 crop. Commodity loans are administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) under the direction of locally elected farmer committees.

Figures just released by the Mississippi State ASCS Office show that farmers here in Mississippi received loans on 1980 crop corn, cotton, honey, oats, rice, sorghum, soybeans, and wheat. Soybean loans accounted for the greatest volume worth more than 4.3 million bushels of 1980 crop beans going into the loan. Rice loans were made on 585,000 hundred weight.

Due to fairly good prices of other crops during the harvest season, lesser amounts of cotton and other crops were placed under loan. Total value of all 1980-crop loans amounted to $28.9 million.

The many wheat farmers will likely participate in the loan program on 1981 crop wheat. Record high acreages and yields in our area of the country have forced wheat prices down to near the loan level.

Price support loans have proven to be of great value to farmers during recent years. These loans are readily available through local ASCS offices. The commodity which is pledged for loan serves as the only collateral required.

The loan provides the producer with cash to meet pressing obligations at harvest time when commodity prices are nearly always lowest. Later, if the price goes up, he can redeem the commodity by paying off the loan principal and interest. He is then free to sell the commodity at the higher price.

The commodity loan program is sustained mainly by the producers who use it and, therefore, is of very little burden on the taxpayers. Yet it provides producers a valuable marketing tool and a degree of protection against depressed prices during the harvest season.

Farmers and others who are interested in getting detailed information in connection with the commodity loan program should contact their local ASCS office.

July 15, Last Day To Report Crop Acres

Prentiss County farmers who have planted spring seeded crops still have a few days to report the acreage to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and become eligible for 1981 farm program benefits.

The final certification date is July 15. Farmers who meet this deadline will avoid paying a late certification fee of $.15 per acre with a minimum charge of $10 per farm.

All farmers who accurately report crop acres and sign an application for payment will be eligible for disaster and deficiency payments. There are no set-aside requirements or normal crop acreage limitations.

To date, 126 farms are certified and eligible for program benefits.

Second Morrow...

death of Reece "Buddy" Baggett, 30, of Booneville.

Last Wednesday afternoon the defendant spent almost an hour on the witness stand testifying before the jury.

The defendant told the jury that he thought of Baggett, who was his third cousin, as being "just like a brother."

Morrow testified he never meant to shoot Baggett. He said that on the night of the shooting, which occurred at his father's residence near Jumptown, the only reason he picked up the 12-gauge shotgun was to defend himself against Baggett, who outweighed him by 80 pounds.

Morrow said, "Baggett pointed his finger at me and said 'I'm going to stomp your damn brains out.'"

Morrow told the jury he believed Baggett would do exactly that, because "I'd seen him do other people that way and he always did what he said he'd do."

At that point Baggett took a step towards him, the defendant said, and he took a gun from behind a bedroom door to defend himself against Baggett.

"I didn't know the gun was loaded. I was gonna use the shotgun to hit him with or something," the defendant told the jury.

The defendant said his father, Hubert, suddenly rushed in the trailer and attempted to disarm him. He said during this struggle the gun accidentally discharged, killing Baggett.

Hubert Morrow's testimony last Tuesday morning collaborated his son's testimony.

However, Wilma Baggett, testified that her husband, Buddy, and the elder Morrow were both seated in the trailer when the shooting occurred.

Mrs. Baggett told the jury that the elder Morrow had not yet reached his son when the gun fired. She testified she did not see the defendant shoot her husband because she was sitting with her back to the hall where the defendant was standing.

She told the jury that after she realized her husband was shot, she looked around and "saw him (the defendant) holding the gun."

Prentiss County Deputy Sheriff Doug Hendrix testified earlier that the defendant voluntarily confessed on the night of the shooting that he shot Baggett.

Prentiss County Coroner James Horn testified that Baggett died as a result of a 12-gauge shot gun blast that wounded him in the chest, right knee and chin.

The jury was sequestered both Tuesday and Wednesday nights of last week.

Attorneys for the prosecution were Hatcher and District Attorney John Young.

Joe Ray Langston and Duncan Lott represented the defense. Circuit Judge Fred Wicker presided.

250 Plus Cheerleaders Arrive At Northeast ...

Who Ya Rooting For? NCA...

By LEE GENTRY
Sports Editor

Some 275 cheerleaders arrived on the Northeast

Mississippi Junior College campus Monday for the start this week Annual NCA Cheerleader Camp sponsored by the National Cheerleader Association. Cheerleaders from across the mid-south are on campus for a week long stay to learn, cheers, stunts and the newest in style for the junior high and high school level. The girls, under the direction of staff instructors hired by the NCA, will learn a variety of special skills designed for the modern cheerleader. According to Wendy

Pentecost, director for the local camp, these girls during this week will learn some very essential techniques to help them not only for the upcoming season but for some of their entire cheerleading careers.

Registration for the girls was held Monday at noon and the actual camp began Monday afternoon at 3 p.m.

The girls don't have much free time because as Wendy put it, "We want the girls to learn as much as possible in the week and we have to really spend a lot of time on teaching functions."

One of the most popular formats of the camp, for the girls at least, are the "Spirit Stick" given by the staff instructors for excellence on a daily basis for the best group or groups of cheerleaders on performance.

The girls know they have to earn this award, one spokesman said. "This makes them want it even more."

The girls are taught on a group to group basis and are then asked to show what they learned through several stations set up throughout the Northeast campus.

Night camp is normally held in the Bonner Arnold Coliseum while the daily activities are held at different stations outside on the campus grounds.

In Capable Hands (Sports Editorial)

Anytime you have a camp of this type to make it run properly you have to have a capable person in charge of the entire camp. Well certainly this week's camp appears to have one of the best in camp directors, Wendy Pentecost.

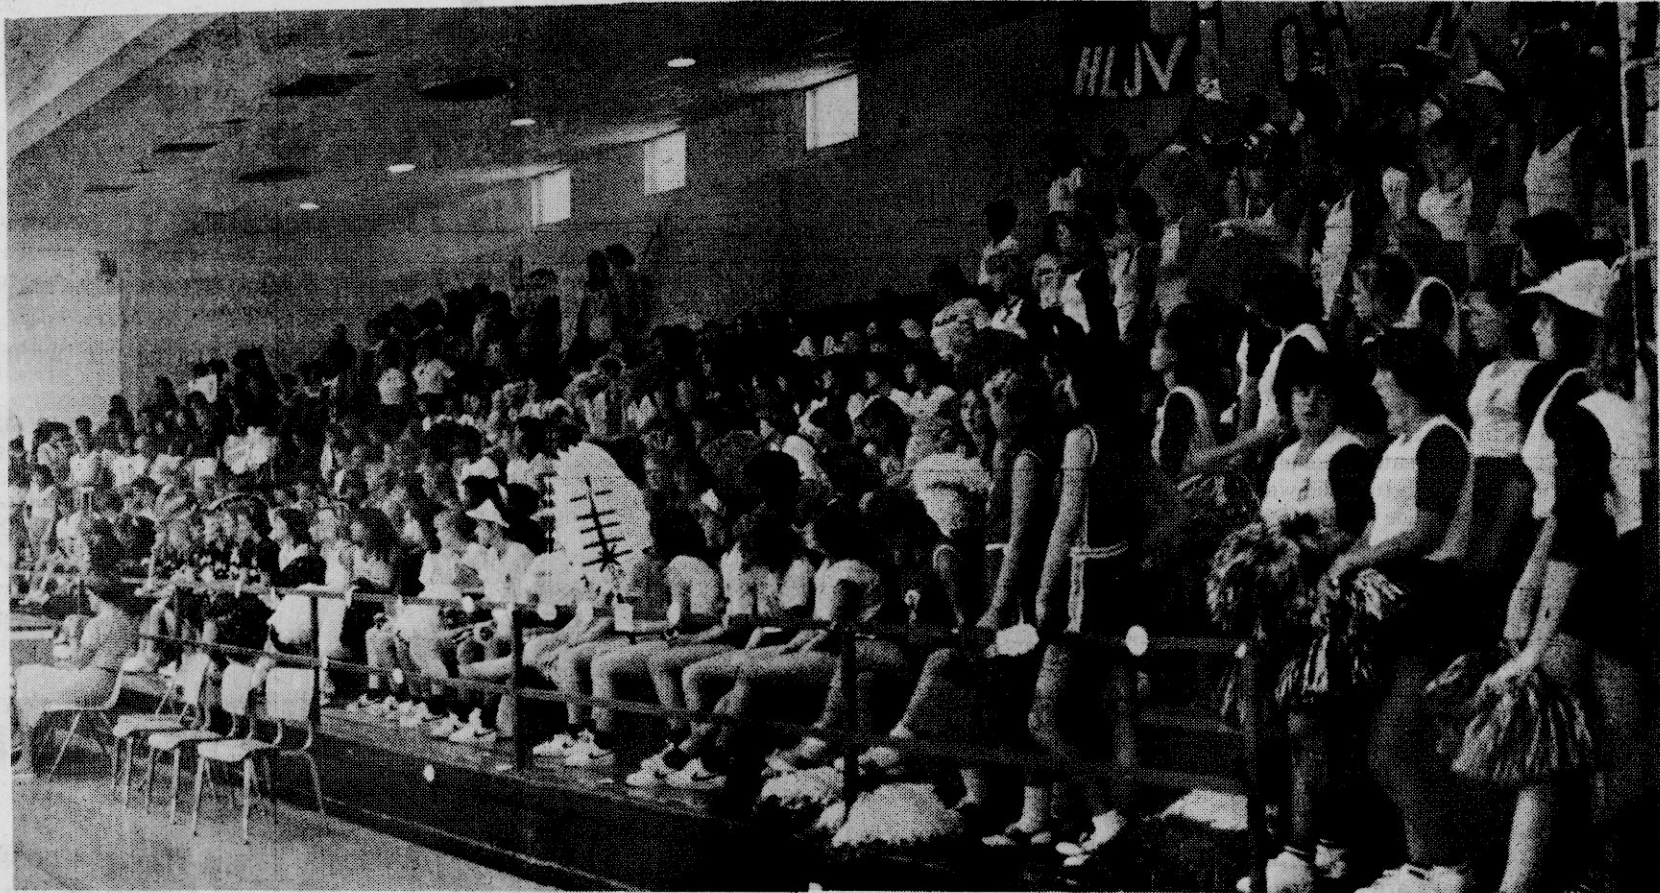

Wendy, formally of Orlando Florida, is serving not only as Director but co-director as well. She certainly has her hands full and from all indications is doing an outstanding job.

In talking with several people connected with the NCA she is one of the best in the NCA and from all reports in the local level here none would doubt that in the least.

She is very friendly but yet strongwilled and runs her ship the way it should be run.

A quick (for instance and example) is that during registration which concerning 250 girls is always a hassle, Wendy knocked out the whole procedure Monday in one hour and 32 minutes which is tops in anyone's book.

There's a big responsibility in taking charge in a camp of this type but Wendy appears to have things well in hand.

250 PLUS SCREAMERS—Some 250 plus cheerleaders turned out this week for the Annual NCA Cheerleader Camp held at Northeast Junior

Anglers To Fish For $1,000 Prize

Anglers in the vicinity of Pickwick Dam will soon have the opportunity to carry home more money than they spend on that weekend or day-off trip. A joint effort of three businesses concerned with sport fishing in the area is making this profitable effort possible.

Catfish have been tagged below the dam at Pickwick with one fish worth $1,000 to the angler lucky enough to boat the fish and five others worth $100 each. The thousand buck white catfish drops to $100 if taken after July 5 but before the closing date of September 7, 1981 while the hundred dollar fish drop to $25 between these dates.

All other fish tagged are worth special prizes if taken and registered before September 7, 1981. Redemption is to be made at Shiloh Amusement Park, Shiloh, Tennessee. Winners will automatically be entered in a final year end drawing for $150 worth of fishing tackle.

Funding for the event comes from Art Mainers of Shiloh Amusement Park, Mel Carnel of WKWX Radio in Savannah, Tennessee and Haynes Distributing Company of Jackson, Tennessee. Haynes Distributing Company is the area jobber for Miller and Lowenbrau beers.

This Tennessee Fishing Rodeo is open to all amateur anglers and the sponsors reserve the right to verify all catches. For more information, call 901-689-5141 or 901-423-3344.

Just An Ordinary Trip? Not Hardly...

When the Mid-summer months rolls around folks tend to get the vacation fever and some make plans to travel for their time off while others just stay home and relax.

Well, Harold Hatfield and Ron Walsh, with the envy of most of us, plans to spend their vacations (1 month in all) in the air in a Cessna 172 plane touring the Southeast Coast of Alaska.

The two pilots plan to spend the entire month just seeing what most of us dream about like touring the Ucon Territory along the famed Ucon Trail.

Leaving Tuesday morning, they said they would return somewhere near the first of August.

Hatfield told the Banner-Independent Tuesday that indeed the highlight of the trip would be salmon fishing off the coast of Alaska.

"They have some of the best fishing there in the world," Hatfield said. "This is really what we're going for but we plan to do quite a bit of sightseeing," he added.

Hatfield said during the trip they plan to travel over Colorado Springs, Denver, Seattle, and all along Alaska.

"We also plan to go just short of Russia, just where we can see the Russian border," Hatfield said.

Both men are qualified pilots on these type trips, according to Hatfield, are right at home in the sky highway.

Walsh, who lives in South Mississippi, came up Tuesday and the two left at the Booneville-Baldwin Airport near 10:00 a.m. for their journey.

Not just your ordinary vacation but for Harold Hatfield and Ron Walsh, indeed quite an experience.

For Next Season 10th Game Added To Statesman Schedule

CLEVELAND, Miss.—Delta State University athletic director Dr. Brad Hovious has announced the addition of a 10th game to the Statesmen's 1981 football schedule.

"The University of Nuevo Leon in Monterrey, Mexico, will visit Delta State on Sept. 5 to open the football season," Hovious said. "The addition of the team from Mexico should add to our schedule, which now includes five home games and five on the road."

Home contests for Coach Johnny Plummer's Statesmen will be against the University of Nuevo Leon, Liberty Baptist of Virginia, Troy State, Jacksonville State and Mississippi College.

Delta State will visit Nicholls State, Southeast Missouri, North Alabama, Livingston and Tennessee-Martin.

Nuevo Leon, Nicholls State and Liberty Baptist are new additions to the DSU schedule, while 1980 opponents Southern State and Ouachita Baptist of Arkansas, Elon College of North Carolina and Southeastern Louisiana drop from the slate.

The Sept. 5 opener with Nuevo Leon and the Oct. 10 homecoming date against Liberty Baptist mark Delta State's first meetings with these schools. Nicholls State, a former Gulf South Conference member, returns to the Statesmen schedule after an absence of two years.

He's Shined Shoes For The Famous... ...And For The Not So Famous

By ANGELA SMITH
Staff Writer

Paul Strange shines shoes. He's shined so many shoes over the years, he's lost count. But he does remember shining some special shoes...like those of General Omar Bradley and Judy Garland.

On any weekday the white haired 75-year-old man can be found in Booneville on his job...shining shoes...a job he's worked at since the Depression.

"Back during that old Depression you couldn't get a job. That's when I started shining shoes...I just made me a job."

But times have changed and so have the prices of Paul Strange's shoe shines.

"A shoe shine used to be a dime, but it's a dollar now. It won't buy nothing after I get it... maybe a hamburger and a cup of coffee."

"I used to shine 50-75 pairs every day and work hard. Now maybe I shine two or three pair in one day and maybe none at all."

ALTHOUGH PAUL HAS always considered the Booneville area as home, there was a period of 11 years during the 1950's when Paul wasn't visible on the streets of Booneville.

During that time he lived in Florida where he combined shining shoes and driving a taxi.

"I made just about as much money shining shoes as I did driving a taxi because I got acquainted with all the roads and where people lived and the places they went."

"And when I was shining shoes I got acquainted with a lot of people that way."

A twinkle came into his blue eyes as he described one of his favorite patrons in Florida.

"I was shining shoes down under a shade tree out in a park and these two women drove up. I went out and asked them did they want a shoe shine."

"One of 'em says, 'I believe I'll take one.' And I got to looking at her and I thought, 'I know that woman...she's a movie star."

"After awhile she said, 'If you'll tell me who I am, I'll give you a tip.'"

"I said, 'You're Judy Garland,' and this other woman jabbed her with her elbow and said, 'Pay him off, he told us.'"

AND PAUL STILL recalls the day he gave a shoe shine to a five star general.

"I kept looking at them five stars on his shoulders." He shook his head, "There's not many of them that have four stars, much less five."

"I didn't say too much to him. I just asked him was he a five star general. He said, 'Yessir, I am.'" He answered my question but he didn't say too much about it.

"Directly I got up nerve enough to ask him another question and I asked him was there any more five star generals other than him."

"Yessir," he says, "Eisenhower is a five star general."

"Eisenhower was a big general," Paul explained, "before he got to be president and that's when it was. It's been some time ago."

THEN THERE WAS the time a young man not only got a shoe shine from Paul, but also some advice.

"There was a young boy got a shine off me one Sunday morning. He said he'd asked a girl to marry him three times...said she'd turned him down every time."

"He had the marriage license in his pocket and I told him, 'I want you to ask her one more time. If she says no, just give her a good cussing.' And the young boy said, 'I'll do it.'"

"When I went to dinner, I went by an old church. It was hot weather and the doors were open."

"I looked through the door and he was in there getting married. That's the last time

I saw him and I don't know if he did what I told him or not...but that was him getting married."

Paul himself has never been married.

"I've been engaged two or three times. But always somebody came along with a little bit more money than I had or a bigger automobile. That's the way women are."

"There was a woman down in Florida who asked me did I want to get married."

"I thought she was kidding and I said, 'Well, can you make buttermilk biscuits?' She said she made them all the time."

"I told her to give me a couple of days to think about it."

"I found out a few days later she got married that same night."

"I've thought about it a whole lot. Do you suppose she made up her mind to get married and she probably really wanted me, but she was in too big a hurry?"

PAUL, WHO LIVES five miles north of Booneville in the Thrasher community, hasn't spent all his time shining shoes. He has also written some booklets.

"I've got 500-600 copies in that old Cadillac sitting out in my yard."

"I don't reckon I'll ever sell them," he said wistfully, "but they're in there."

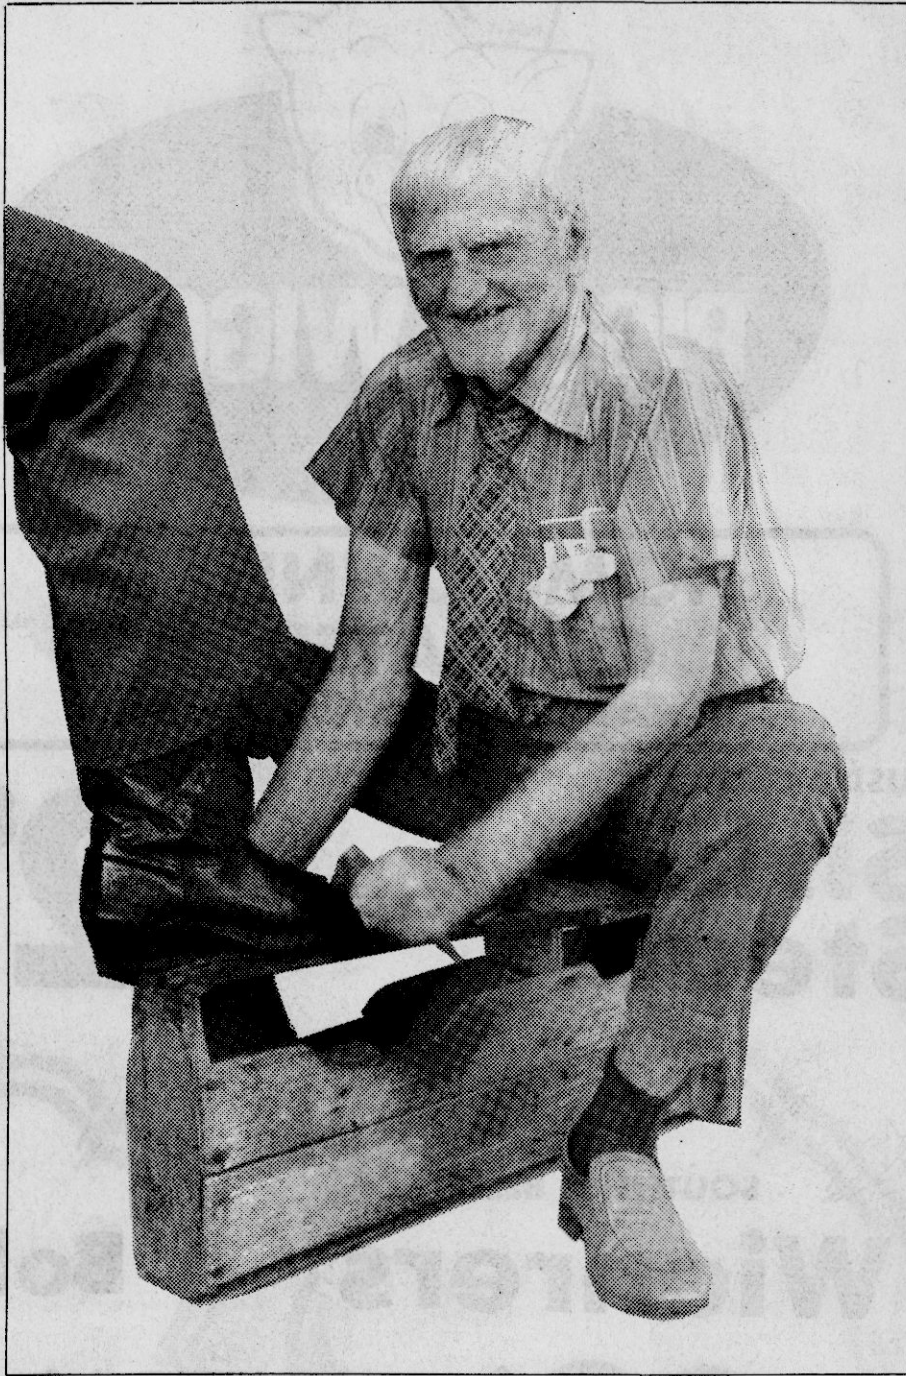

He has donated one booklet, "Friendly Foods" to the Mississippi Collection in the Ole Miss Library. He has also written a booklet about cancer.

"It's my honest opinion that cancer is not a disease. It's a bad case of malnutrition. Other people don't know that, but that's a fact."

"A lot of them smoke cigarettes and take pills. All that stuff kills your appetite."

"People that have cancer run to the doctor and he just gives them more pills and more medicine and that's just exactly opposite from what it ought to be."

PAUL ALSO GUARANTEES he can cure hemorrhoids--and by mail at that.

He wrote:

"I cure hemorrhoids, I cure them near, I cure them farther. I cure them quick, without any bother. Not a laughing matter as you can see. A matter of finding a man like me. Send 20 dollars, send it today. Let that letter be on it's way. You'll be well before you know it-- You'll be so glad, your face will show it."

Once when Paul was asked if $20 wasn't a high price to pay for his hemorrhoid cure

he replied, "If you ever had them damn things you wouldn't think it was high."

Paul said he has customers for his hemorrhoid cure in Canada and New York, but none in his own neighborhood.

"People in Thrasher think they're perfect...nothing wrong with them."

Paul's current project involves the building of his new home in Thrasher. And although this will keep him busy, he'll still be on the streets of Booneville shining shoes just like he always has. Because Paul Strange has shined many shoes and he plans on shining many more.

should be of interest to secretaries in any field, a Northeast spokesman said. Speaker for the oriental luncheon in the Mississippi Room of Frank Haney Union is Mrs. Vivian Valentine. Past president of the Mississippi Association of Educational Secretaries and the National Association of Educational Office Personnel, Mrs. Valentine is director of the Meridian Industrial Foundation. Participants are encouraged to invite their employers to attend the luncheon and to hear Mrs. Valentine, the spokesman said. For additional information or to pre-register, contact Mrs. Nina Benjamin, P.O. Box 1419, Corinth, MS 38834, telephone 286-5591, or Mrs. Janice Prather on the Northeast campus at 728-7751.

Rienzi News

By VIOLA PRESLEY Correspondent

Mr. and Mrs. Noble Williams have returned from Memphis where they attended a market meeting. Robin Johnsey has been in Booneville this week attending classes at Northeast Mississippi Junior College in a clinic of Rifle Drilling.

In Tupelo Wednesday shopping were Mrs. Roy Morgan, Mrs. Gerald Morgan, and Misses Karen and Susan Morgan.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barnes, James and Greg spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Voyles in Burnsville.

Wednesday night members of the G.A.'s of the Rienzi Baptist Church and their leader, Mrs. Judy Palmer, held their June meeting in the home of Miss Viola Presley, a fellow church member who is presently confined to her home. A devotional, and a prayer period gave a very spiritual emphasis to the meeting.

GA members present included Jana Johnson, Stacy and Holly Benjamin, Tracey Palmer, Michelle Southern and Mitzi Gann. A most welcome visitor was Mrs. Roy Morgan who was a guest in the Presley home at the time. Refreshments were served by the G.A.'s.

Old Jacinto Courthouse

4th Of July Festival Returns

Jacinto, which was once the county seat of Prentiss, Alcorn and Tishomingo counties, will come alive once again this 4th of July weekend.

The Jacinto Foundation's 4th of July Festival will feature arts and craft booths scattered on the courthouse lawn, food booths, a square dancing contest, clogging, a softball tournament, bluegrass music, a Civil War Reenactment group, Indians, a gospel music concert, and a talent show.

The gospel music concert will be hosted by Buddy and Kay Bain the hosts of the Channel 9, Tupelo, "Morning" show.

The Nathan Bedford Forrest Civil War Reenactment group are bringing a real Civil War cannon which they will be firing every hour, according to festival director Frank Chapin.

An estimated crowd of 9,000 people attended the first festival two years ago.

Jacinto was founded in 1836. Because of its central location, it was selected as the county seat of what later became Prentiss, Alcorn, and Tishomingo counties.

The name of Cincinnati was first selected, but many citizens took exception to it because there was already a Cincinnati, and they thought their town would become a metropolis, rivaling the Ohio city in size and importance.

The same year, the Texans had won their independence in the Battle of San Jacinto, so the settlers christened their city Jacinto in honor of the Texans.

4-H Club News

By Edward L. McWhirter Extension 4-H Youth Agent

New 4-H Energy Conservation Program

The 4-H members and clubs doing outstanding work in energy conservation will be recognized and awarded for their efforts through the new 4-H energy conservation program.

Materials are available to help individual 4-H members and clubs decide on needed energy conservation activities relating to the home, farm, automobiles and community.

A vital part of the program is to learn about the energy situation in American, the different sources of energy and why there is a need to conserve.

Slide sets, films and printed material are available through the Extension Service to help clubs accomplish this purpose.

The most important part of the program will be the action taken by 4-H'ers to actually help conserve energy and to demonstrate to others that it can be done. Program materials include suggestions and methods to conserve energy in the home, on the road and in the community.

Local 4-H clubs can win up to $100 in state award program. Certificates will be awarded to the outstanding club in each county.

Senior 4-H members who give leadership to the program can also win up to $100. Junior 4-H members will be awarded ribbons and an amount of cash to be determined.

Energy conservation is already a part of many 4-H projects. The energy conservation program is designed to emphasize the actual savings they accomplish and to demonstrate to others energy saving techniques. (Include any county programs or activities such as poster contests, county awards, energy conservation weeks, etc.)

For more information on this timely program, visit or call the 4-H office.

Interest in Sports is Being Revived

"A luncheon, sponsored by the Booneville Athletic Association, was given at the City Cafe last Friday night, which was attended by quite a number of Booneville citizens.

"Plans were further considered for an all-year organization which would tend to create more interest in sports among the young men of the town and community and it is sincerely hoped that every man will join in to make Booneville one of the leading centers for sports activities.

"Many years ago Booneville was noted for its ball teams, but interest waned and for the past several years there has been practically no effort made to revive it. During the past few months, however, Prof. E.M. Hale, with the assistance of a few citizens, has worked faithfully to organize a team and get Booneville back in the limelight."

Booneville's Swimming Pool Construction Now Underway

"Booneville's new $50,000 swimming pool construction has gotten under way. Excavation is almost completed and foundations will probably be poured in the next few days, after which the plumbing and the construction of forms will be done prior to the pouring of the concrete sides, ends, and floor. If ideal working conditions prevail it is believed that the pool will be ready for use in late August."

Fire Damages Wheeler School Library

"Several sets of encyclopedias, dictionaries, and other reference books were destroyed by a fire in the Wheeler school library late Monday afternoon.

"School Principal W.F. Fraser said Tuesday morning the fire occurred in a bookcase 'sitting out all by itself.' He said the state fire marshal came to the school Monday night and is investigating the incident. The fire marshal was to come back Tuesday to pick up some samples to take back to his office.

"Fraser said the fire marshal is 'of the opinion that someone set it.'"

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: By Larry E. Hill

1 Corinthians 2:14 "But The Natural Man Receiveth Not The Things Of The Spirit Of God: For They Are Foolishness To Him; Neither Can He Know Them, Because They Are Spiritually Discerned."

With so much light from the prophecies of the Bible throwing history past and present into bold relief against God's redemptive plans for the world, one wonders how men can be so blind as not to see the moving of God in the church and among the nations. "He that cometh to God must believe that He is." Heb. 11:6. There is nothing so tragic as the closed mind, either outside or inside the church of God. It is therefore possible for even those who bear Christ's name to look out upon a world in which old ways are being broken up and to miss entirely the spiritual significance of these times. Habit and custom often breed spiritual shortsightedness. In slighting God's word many professed Christian believers fail to discern its mighty truths. It never gets down into the marrow of the thoughts and intents of their hearts. Such have allowed a cataract to develop in their spiritual eyes. They cannot see what God is doing before their eyes. They are not ready for the leadings of an unpredictable move of God, "Who chooses the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." The great movements of God were recognized as His movements only by those who were spiritually responsive to His word. In the exodus of Israel, the return from Babylonian captivity, the preaching of John the Baptist, the ministry of Jesus, the outpouring of the Holy Ghost in the book of Acts, and the Reformation. There were thousands who failed to recognize the manifest leadership of Heaven. It is sadly the same today. Thousands upon thousands do not realize that "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever." Heb. 13:8. "For the promise is unto you, and to your children and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 2:39. Let me say to you friend, that God's power is just as great today as ever, He will work if you will let Him. Truth is not static; it is progressive. Sad will be the lot of those in the day of the Lord's return who find that they have failed to keep step with God's divine direction.

WW II Soldiers Are Not Forgotten

By ED BLAKE
Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation

The passage of 37 years has only slightly blurred and certainly not dimmed the memory of a World War II episode off the shores of Italy which in a split second caused the death of more Mississippians in a single action than any other known incident.

Following a public appeal for information concerning 24 missing-in-action soldiers in the U.S. Army's 83rd Chemical Mortar Battalion through this column several weeks ago, public response has exceeded all expectations as wartime members of the 83rd CML or relatives and friends contacted this writer concerning the explosion aboard a U.S. Navy LST off the Anzio beachhead on Jan. 26, 1944.

This is that story.

The headquarters of probably the fightingest unit involved in the European Theatre of operations was shifting its operations from North Africa and Sicily to the bloody shin of Italy's boot at Anzio after stopping off at Naples on the way.

Two vessels carried the entire complement of the U.S. 83rd Chemical Mortar Battalion toward the assault on Rome itself with a beachhead landing about 40 miles southwest at the coastal resort of Anzio. Nearly half the unit, consisting of Companies A and B, was aboard the lead ship, a Landing Ship Tank, and established the Anzio beachhead on Jan. 25.

These men were specially trained in chemical warfare

-shock troops employing 4.2 inch mortars to lob shells into the laps of the Germans from close range while U.S. Rangers, or British Commandos, and or other front line troops fought fiercely to seize enemy occupied territory.

As the lead LST hit the beach and discharged Companies A and B, German plans were busy strafing, bombing and dropping sea mines offshore. The second LST was ordered to anchor and hold up about 10 miles offshore because of the minefield off the beach. On top of that, wintry winds were raw and the sea, turbulent.

As the second LST was still about 10 miles off the beach on Jan. 26 an explosion and fire racked the ship at 0428.

John R. Holley, who today is on the athletic staff of the University of Mississippi, was asleep on an upper bunk when he was aroused by acrid fumes and smoke filling his compartment.

He dropped to the floor and crawled along the deck as pandemonium broke loose. Men struggled from their quarters to get into a passageway that could lead them to fresh air on the decks.

Though burned by the explosions and fires continuing on the ship, Holley and a buddy, Harry Cohen, tried to return toward their compartment to help lead others, but smoke turned them back.

Robert M. Chamblee and Arlander Benson, both of Fulton, were among the more than two dozen Mississippians aboard the stricken vessel. They observed men jumping overboard as they reached the top deck, but hesitated to join them because of the location of the ship, the heavy seas, and the fact that it was cold and sleeting.

But the ship's deck was getting hot. They climbed down onto the anchor and its chain and perched shortly before deciding they too had to hit the water.

Chamblee noticed that Benson separated from his life belt on impact with the water and from then on he never saw what happened to him as each was on his own, but Benson never made it ashore. Chamblee later, in a letter to his wife, reluctantly described his circumstances:

"The water was really cold. I knew after I jumped that I had a long struggle ahead. I almost gave up...but you's and mother's sweet faces came before me, and then I could never give up..."

He was rescued by another vessel after being adrift in the sea for three hours. Meanwhile Holley had managed to leap from the deck of the burning LST to the deck of a Navy LCI that managed to come alongside thrice in the choppy sea.

Only 171 out of 600 83rd CML men survived the sinking. And today neither survivors nor historians can clearly say whether the explosion was caused by a sea mine or by a massive German gun, Anzio Archie, that fired 525 pound shells "with missile boosters" on the sea invaders from the safety of a railway tunnel.

At least eight of the victims were from Itawamba county, Mississippi. Others were from all over the state.

Crawfish Farming Could Become Important Mississippi Industry

By MICHAEL HINTON
USDA Biologist
Soil Conservation Service

Although catfish farming is Mississippi's claim to fame in the aquaculture industry, a number of Mississippi farmers show growing interest in crawfish farming.

In order to better serve interested farmers, local Soil Conservation Service biologists Ramon Callahan, Michael Hinton, Harvey Huffstatter and Ronnie Thomas recently took a three day trip to Louisiana to learn more about the industry.

Louisiana produces over 90 percent of the crawfish in the United States and consumes the majority of the harvest locally. In 1976, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture estimated the industries' value at $6 million.

Although historically many of Louisiana's crawfish result from wild harvest from the Atchafalaya Basin, pond crawfish farming has grown rapidly to take up the slack from the uncertain wild harvest. Louisiana now boasts over 40,000 acres of crawfish ponds.

Many Louisiana farmers grow crawfish in rotation with rice and soybeans with very little additional investment.

One of the most attractive features of crawfish farming is that the crawfish feed on plant residues in the ponds with no additional feed inputs required.

Crawfish will eat a wide variety of plants, with tender plants the most desirable. They will eat aquatic plants such as water primrose, smartweeds, alligator weed, duckweed and others.

It has been observed that they will also eat non-aquatic plants such as white clover, alfalfa, bermudagrass, sorghum and various millets when flooded.

Crawfish production begins with pond construction. Ponds generally fall into three types -- rice fields, open ponds and woodland or swampland ponds. Water depth for crawfish production must be 12 to 30 inches.

Since rice is grown in water no more than 6 inches deep, levees must be raised to hold the greater depth. Before building a pond, consideration must be given to factors such as soil type, toxic residues, water supply and vegetation.

Ideally, a pond should be filled with well water. However, natural waters may be used if steps are taken to assure the elimination of wild fish and eggs. Wild fish which prey on crawfish can drastically cut down production.

Adult crawfish should be stocked into the pond in May or June. Stocking rates will vary with pond conditions but they are usually stocked with 50-100 pounds per acre.

Further stocking is usually not needed in most ponds. There will be enough crawfish present after harvesting to produce further crops.

After stocking, pond water should be drained out of the pond over a one to two week period. During this period the crawfish will burrow into the pond bottom where the eggs will develop while attached to the female. After the burrows are completed, they are capped with a plug of dirt.

The egg laying period begins in September and they require 14 to 21 days to hatch. Ponds should be flooded as hatching begins. Young crawfish will begin to feed and grow immediately. Crawfish grow best when water temperature is between 60 and 85 degrees. If adequate food is available, they may reach market size in 60 to 90 days.

Harvesting usually begins in March and lasts through May. Crawfish are harvested by using lift nets or traps baited with fish parts. Harvesting is therefore labor intensive and may represent the greatest expenditure of the operation. Some farmers have opened their ponds to the public for fishing and charge a fee or charge a set price per pound of crawfish harvested.

Estimates of profit on crawfish ponds range from $100 to $200 per acre. Well constructed and managed ponds commonly produce 500 to 700 pounds per acre.

Crawfish farming appears to have excellent potential in Mississippi. It gives the farmer an additional source of income from his farmland while providing additional advantages such as reduction of erosion and improved soil conditions.

Interested farmers should contact the Soil Conservation Service office at 107 College Street or phone 728-3544 for further information.

The Funeral:
What Is It?
Some Considerations
On Death

From TIMBER HILLS
MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Much has been written about the funeral, and there is currently a great deal more being written about it.

The first issue usually discussed is the question, "What is a funeral?" That question has been asked and answered millions of times. It was only in recent times that a west-coast psychiatrist, William M. Lamers Jr., wrote: "A funeral is an organized, purposeful, time-limited, flexible, group-centered response to death."

When he states that the funeral is "organized," he is referring to the idea that it is influenced by local and regional practices; that religion and religious dogma make contributions; that the specific needs and wants of the family influence it; and, that a funeral director will also be involved.

The funeral has a "purpose." It is to confront, express and share a loss and separation; to act as a vehicle for the expression of grief; and to dispose of a dead human body.

The funeral is "time-limiting." It has a beginning and an end and it imposes a degree of emotional efficiency followed by a mourning process.

The funeral is "flexible." The services and events will be different according to the age, sex, religion and station of the deceased.

The funeral is "group centered." Life is not a private event and neither is death. The funeral reaffirms the deceased's relationship to the group of which he or she was a part. Funerals are a group activity, sharing is involved, and therefore, a grief shared is a grief diminished.

The funeral is a "response to death." It responds to the fact of death and does not avoid its reality; the response is immediate and not delayed; and all cultures and peoples have established acceptable and meaningful responses to death.

The funeral has "rites and ceremonies." Rites and ceremonies give verbal and nonverbal expressions to grief and provide safe and healthy means to express anger, anxiety, aggression, guilt, etc. Religious ceremonies and expressions establish man's relationship to his "gods"; and in some religious groups a way is provided that the living can assist the dead in their search for immortality -- "prayers for the dead."

In light of what has been stated here, and in the multitude of other writings on the funeral, it seems that there are many important dimensions and facets of the funeral. It appears that it cannot be adequately defined in a single sentence. It may be that it can only be defined by the individual in terms of experience in the phases and functions of their bereavement.

We're kidding, of course. The type on this page —and every page in the paper—will be here all day.

And all day tomorrow.

And Sunday.

Or whenever you have time to read it.

That's why the Banner-Independent is so popular with the folks of Prentiss County. It tells them what's happening at home and who's having a sale. And it tells them when they're ready to hear it. They don't miss it because they dozed off watching TV.

Or went out to walk the dog.

Or answer the telephone.

Or to the bathroom during the commercial.

Our readers don't have to be ready for what we have to tell them between 4:38 and 4:39 a.m. every other Tuesday. They know we are coming to their homes every week. They know because they invite us. . . . and even pay us to come.

And they invite us back week after week, year after year, because . . . .

They can read it now . . . . or they can read it later.

Telephone Industry Looks To The Future

We live in an era when almost every item offered for sale has been dramatically redesigned to either conserve energy or increase comfort and economy.

Today Mississippi's telephone industry is actively engaged, along with other state businesses, in responding to customer demands for new products and services, according to Frank Edmonds, head of South Central Bell's Mississippi operations.

For South Central Bell, introduction of new customer services and features relates closely to planned construction expenditures for modern switching and transmission facilities.

According to Edmonds, more construction funds are being committed today at a faster pace than at any previous time in the company's history to serve Mississippi customers.

"Our current total investment of $1.4 billion is fully one billion dollars more than we had invested only a decade ago," Edmonds said. "Five years from now we'll have spent another billion dollars to meet our customer's communication needs."

In addition to maintaining and expanding services, a portion of these monies will be spent to provide innovative new telephone features for Mississippi households, he said.

"The feedback we're getting from the marketplace is that services such as remote control of home appliances and home energy should be made available," Edmonds said. "Customers tell us they want to bank at home, shop at home, and, furthermore, they want flexibility in how when they receive and place calls. They will be pleased to learn that all of these features are either under design or are being field tested today in the Bell System."

Energy control through telecommunications is one of the more promising developments to come out of the laboratory. It will enable the homeowner to remotely turn thermostats or appliances on and off through a simple telephone call.

The same telephone network will be used to monitor energy usage on a daily basis so that adjustments can be made to control energy costs.

Telephone access to future emergency services will also save lives that may have been lost in fires, during burglaries, etc. These emergency services are designed to automatically detect fire, report it to the fire department and wake-up occupants of the home.

Similar services would detect intruders in the home and immediately place a call to the police department.

The equipment which should provide many of these customer services will be modeled after the electronic and digital switching central offices in service today.

Many Mississippians have already been quick to take advantage of the current technology. They are subscribing to Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three-Way Conference Calls and Speed Calling services. Services which vastly expand the utility of the telephone, making it far more than something you dial in order to speak to another person.

"Another exciting consumer service for the future will be arm-chair shopping by telephone," Edmonds added. "Linking a telephone with the home television set will enable customers to compare prices and descriptions of various items from groceries to guitars. After the item is selected an order can be placed on the phone."

Mississippians will not only have access to new telephone features in the near future, they will also be able to take advantage of new pricing policies.

Measured service is available today for those customers who wish to control their telephone bills. Offered currently in 10 Mississippi cities and being expanded rapidly, measured service is available at a discount to basic local service.

Under measured service calls are billed by the pumber made, the length of the conversation time, the time of day and distance the call travels. Not all customers would benefit from this type of pricing, but many would.

"The future of our business is exciting and I feel very positive about it," Edmonds said.

Governor's Council Warns:

Warm Weather Exercisers Should Beware Over Heating

Some experts warn that this summer could be a repeat of last summer's record breaking hot temperatures.

Gov. William Winter's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports warns that warm weather is a time for exercise enthusiasts (such as joggers) to be particularly careful.

Even the best conditioned athlete can experience hyperthermia (over heating).

Heat stroke, heat exhaustion, dehydration and muscle cramps can occur on days when least expected. The rapid rise in body temperature (hyperthermia) occurs when the body's natural cooling mechanism (evaporation) ceases because the body has lost too much fluid through sweating.

Research indicates that the rate of body fluid loss is not substantially changed from temperatures of 70 degrees and up.

Here in Prentiss County, as in most of the South, humidity is also a major factor. A moderate temperature and high humidity can be just as dangerous as high temperature and low humidity. High humidity slows down the evaporation of sweat, thus putting a strain on the body's ability to cool itself.

"In extremely high temperatures, the inexperienced or poorly heat trained individual should limit his or her workout to one-half its normal time or distance," says Dr. Bryan Barksdale, a consultant to the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

Warning signs of hyperthermia include nausea, throbbing head, chills, dry skin, giddiness, leg cramps, redness, goose bumps and incoherent speech and thoughts. If these symptoms occur, a person should stop exercising and begin drinking water to replace the lost body fluids.

According to Dr. Barksdale, the following steps can help avoid complications:

--Take in plenty of fluid (any fluid except sweetened drinks) before, during and after a workout. The body can sweat twice what it can absorb, so drink all you can.

--Limit warm-ups. Warming up increases body heat, a condition which is not needed.

--Dress lightly. Expose maximum skin to the air for evaporation. Sweating is a key body regulating device. Even a normal T-shirt covers 40 percent of your body surface. Fishnet tops are excellent.

--Douse yourself with water during your exercise if possible. This helps the sweating mechanism.

--Avoid "salt loading." The normal American diet provides plenty of salt, and excessive salt can cause intestinal pooling of fluid. This could compound heat problems rather than help them.

Also, sweetened fluids stay on your stomach and can cause additional problems.

--Pay attention to the warning signs. Your body is trying to tell you something. Don't "tough it out."

A well-balanced diet is extremely important also. The body loses more than just water and salt in the sweating process.

Foods such as watermelon, cantaloupe, cucumbers, tomatoes and carrots are high in minerals such as magnesium and potassium—two culprits in muscle cramps.

Avoid competition that begins late in the morning, especially on days when humidity is high.

Lighter colored clothing is cooler than dark apparel, and it is also more visible to motorists. Cotton clothing "breathes" better than synthetics.
