Edge Sales Co. Fire Cause 'Undetermined'

The cause of the fire which destroyed the Edge's Sales Company building and an adjoining business, Booneville Auto Electric, late Monday night of last week, will be listed as undetermined, according to Booneville Fire Chief Frank Fleming.

State Deputy Fire Marshal Mike Ivy was in Booneville Friday of last week to investigate the fire.

No evidence was found that the fire was arson, Fleming said. "We worked over there four hours. We didn't find anything."

It was necessary for firemen to put water on the charred building remains Friday before Ivy investigated the fire because there were still hot spots in it, Fleming said.

NECAA Appointments Begin December 1

The Northeast Mississippi Community Action Agency will schedule appointments for the Low Income Energy Assistance Program beginning Dec. 1.

There is a three week closed application period when only households with elderly or handicapped may apply. All other persons must wait until Dec. 23 before calling for an appointment.

Income guidelines have been raised to reflect increased cost of living, according to Bobbie George, director of programs.

"An individual living alone may earn $6,075 annually and be eligible for Low Income Energy Assistance while a family of 4 may have a household income for $12,375. Residents of federally subsidized housing are eligible for assistance under the 1984 plan," she said.

To avoid any delay in receiving assistance, applicants must bring with them a social security number for each household member and verification of income for all household members. They must also provide a bill in the name of the applicant for their primary source of heat.

Contact your Prentiss County Community Action Center which is located upstairs in the Prentiss County Courthouse or call 728-8141.

Unemployment

11.5 % In October

The number of unemployed Prentiss County residents continued to decline at mid-October. According to Charles Smith, Manager of the Mississippi State Employment Service, approximately 1,270 individuals were unemployed at the reporting period, compared to 1,310 in September, and 1,090 in October, one year ago. This figures to be 11.5 percent of the civilian labor force unemployed, compared to 11.8 percent last month and 9.8 percent one year ago. The county's labor force was estimated to be 11,060, 50 below the previous estimate but relatively the same as one year ago. Employment in the county was estimated to be 9,790, only 10 below the September figure but 230 below the October, 1982, estimate.

Rehabilitation Center Telethon Dec. 4

The annual radiothon for the benefit of the Regional Rehabilitation Center and Cerebral Palsy Handicapped Persons Center will be held Sunday, Dec. 4th, at the Regional Rehabilitation Center in Tupelo from 10:00 p.m. This fund raising campaign aids all handicapped people of this area.

John A. "Red" Raspberry, Executive Director of the Regional Rehabilitation Center, stated that this year's goal is $42,000.00 This is the amount needed to complete the budget for another year. Counties making up the center's support area includes Alcorn, Tippah, Tishomingo, Itawamba, Monroe, Chickasaw, Pontotoc, Union, Lee, Prentiss, and Calhoun Counties, however, it was noted many patients from outside this area were treated in the past year.

Patients will be scheduled for therapy, and a staff member in every department will be present from 2:00 p.m. til 5:00 p.m. in order to demonstrate and explain the services that are provided and give you the public an opportunity to see the entire program in action.

Baldwyn To Pay $350,000 Settlement

By ED WOODWARD
Managing Editor

Three heirs of James Clyde Shook, a 20 year old Booneville man who was fatally shot by a Baldwyn police officer in October 1982, will be paid $350,000 as part of an out-of-court settlement reached one day before the opening of a lawsuit trial in Lee County Circuit Court.

According to Booneville attorney Tommy Comer, lawyer for the Shook heirs, the money will be paid over several years to the shooting victim's father, Freddie Shook, his mother, Carolyn Shook, and his sister, Regenia Twain Shook, 13.

James Clyde Shook was fatally shot in the head on Oct. 29, 1982 by Baldwyn Police Officer Troy Agnew after the car in which he was riding was stopped for alleged traffic violations. An investigation by the Lee County Sheriff's Department indicated that Agnew had accidentally fired his .357 magnum revolver when the driver of the car in which Shook was riding attempted to ram the patrol car.

After local and state investigations, during which Agnew was under suspension from duty, a special session of the Lee County Grand Jury declined to charge the officer. Agnew resumed his duties, and continues to serve on the Baldwyn force.

The Shook heirs subsequently filed a $1.75 million lawsuit against Agnew and the city of Baldwyn.

"The basis of our lawsuit was the fact that he (Agnew) was negligent in the use of his firearm, which was a .357 magnum. And we brought the city in on the basis that they were negligent in not properly training their officers, in not having any kind of training program and in not meeting the state requirements as to training of law enforcements officers," Comer said.

"Maybe this settlement will not only compensate the Shook family, but make Baldwyn comply with state laws requiring them to have law officers with sufficient training," he said.

Though Baldwyn Mayor

Merle Rowan was not available for comment, he has repeatedly insisted that Officer Agnew acted properly "under the circumstances." Rowan had said that Agnew was "naturally nervous" when stopping the car at 1:00 a.m. because the driver, Ralph Roberts, had been driving recklessly, and had reportedly attempted to ram

Thanksgiving Is A Daily Occurrence

'Life Itself For Almeda Is A Real Gift From God'

By C.L. POTTS
Pastor
First United Methodist Church

Ms. Almeda George has never taken Thanksgiving for granted. The tone of her life agrees with the psalmist: "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good." (Ps. 107:1)

She stands eager to give a plain and sincere "thank you" to God for his gracious gifts.

Life itself for Almeda is a real gift from God. On March 2, 1903, she entered this world without life and breath. It was only after much effort by the doctor placing her intermittently in warm and cold water that life finally came, leaving her handicapped in many ways, but certainly not in spirit.

The first of three children by her father's second wife, Almeda was welcomed by eight brothers and sisters by her father's first wife.

The family moved in 1905 to the home where Almeda still lives in Prentiss County. At 80 she still thanks God for this mysterious, wonderful, yet unfathomable thing called life.

She learned to walk at five years of age, having been crippled at birth. By sheer determination, she began school at nine, completing the 9th grade when she was 21.

In spite of handicapping conditions, she feels that there is sufficient cause for thankfulness each day for the senses through which we view God's world - beautiful scenes, sweet music, chatter and laughter of little children, singing birds, the conversation of a friend. . .

Almeda has been a committed Christian for many years and the influence of God on her life is most evident.

She recalls the comfort

A Young Friend's Tribute To Almeda George

By MITCH MOORE

Thanksgiving as well as Christmas is a time of year that has brought on a new meaning to most. Many people forget what Thanksgiving is all about.

But not Miss Almeda George. She is truly a 20th Century Pilgrim.

Miss George is an elderly, handicapped woman with a willing heart and mind to bring joy to everyone she meets.

In the past, she has spent hours of time and money trying to help handicapped children in her special way.

In the six years I've known her, she has never complained or questioned her health condition. Instead, she is always talking about what she has to be thankful for.

Miss Almeda has been a blessing to everyone who has come to know her.

Worldly things mean nothing to Miss Almeda. Just a phone call or a post card brings more joy and happiness to her than words can express.

She greets people at her door with a big smile, so happy that someone has taken a little time to drop by to say hello.

This Thanksgiving I am giving special thanks for having the opportunity to know this special lady - Almeda George.

Phone Company Files Rate Increase

South Central Bell has filed a request with the Mississippi Public Service Commission that would reprice telephone service by decreasing long distance rates and restructuring other rates.

According to J.N. McGowan, vice president for South Central Bell's Mississippi operations, the proposed rate changes are the result of rapidly advancing technology, the introduction of competition and deregulation have forced a complete restructuring of the telephone industry, McGowan said.

The company is requesting the Mississippi Public Service Commission to approve rates to become effective January 1984. If approved, rates for premium flat rate residence telephone service would be $27.97 a month, and one-line business service would be $66.65 a month. In exchanges where Measured Service is not yet available, the rate for premium residence flat rate service would be $25.17, and the rate for one-line business would be $59.99.

The company is also proposing a 15 percent overall reduction in its intrastate long distance conversation revenues, and a 5 percent reduction in out-of-state WATS revenues.

Considering the proposed reductions in intrastate long distance, the average residential customer's total bill for telephone services will increase from about $44.53 to about $51.05 or about 14.6 percent, McGowan said. The average residential bill for local service only would increase from about $22.44 to about $31.12 or about 38.7 percent, he said.

Other service options like Low-use Measured Service would provide access to the network for as little as $13.25 a month.

"This is not simply another rate request," said McGowan. "This is the final phase of the move toward deregulation that began 15 years ago."

The era of highly subsidized local telephone service is over, he said. "No longer can the public depend on fees paid by long distance users to cover a substantial part of the cost of providing local phone service," McGowan explained.

The major elements of Bell's proposal include restructured local rates and a 15 percent overall reduction in the company's Mississippi long distance conversation revenues.

The complete proposal would produce $131.4 million in additional annual revenues, with about $28 million of this amount for depreciation. The company is requesting this amount to bring its depreciation reserve more in line with the actual life of the equipment. This is in addition to the controversial $98 million increase requested earlier this year and still pending.

The company also proposes to charge $15.2 million to long distance companies - MCI, AT&T and others - to cover South Central's cost of handling

During BAI Meeting

Inmates Tell Local Bankers How To Rob Banks

A "Parchman Panel," consisting of four prisoners from Parchman Penitentiary, spoke to bankers at the monthly meeting of the Northeast Mississippi Chapter of the Bank Administration Institute concerning how bankers can be more aware of possible forgeries and check fraud.

The Nov. 15 meeting was held at the Frank Haney Union at Northeast Junior College.

Don, who told the audience that he was labeled a "habitual criminal" said he had begun embezzling money from his company to support his drug habit.

He was indicted for embezzling $151,000. "I don't know how much I embezzled," Don said. "The company stopped counting at $390,000." The company also went out of business, he said.

Don explained that he embezzled checks by using an IBM checkwriter. The largest check he embezzled was $32,000.

He noted that at times he would only have $200 in his bank account, and then the account would go up drastically, and then back down again. "That should have made someone suspicious," he said.

Another member of the Parchman panel, Robin, was sentenced to 20 years for armed robbery.

She told the bankers that although she forged checks and credit cards, she was not caught for that. Instead she was arrested for armed robbery.

"I wish I had been caught for forging checks," she said. "Then I might not be in here for armed robbery."

She told the group that forging checks and credit cards were two of the easiest crimes to get away with. However, she said, when people get "greedy" they get caught.

Robin said she never stole checks - she always used her own personalized checks. First she would call the police station and tell them her purse had been stolen, then she would go to different stores and write checks using her own personalized checks - although she had no money in her bank account.

Eventually, she also developed a drug habit. But, she added, whenever she forged checks, she always dressed up and "looked like she had money."

"Impression is enough to

of God in the loss of her father a number of years ago; and the support and strength of her faith in caring for her mother following a stroke that rendered her mother helpless for almost three years. Almeda cared for her mother night and day during this time and until her death in 1960. She would just thank God for the life and strength she had to nurse her mother.

And, there's a gracious thanksgiving spirit in her life for work to be done. Her needlework continues to reflect her achievements. One would never hear that she is tired and sick of work for her life has been a productive one.

On her wall hangs a certificate of achievement for those years with the 4-H clubs. During the WPA days she cleaned cemeteries and has vivid memories of when she worked in the field.

Her hands have always made clothes and drapes for neighbors. She raised calves, pigs and chickens . . . and all the while had a deep desire to teach school. Although never able to teach, she has read widely and enjoys sharing her findings.

Few people can recall when there were no mail routes throughout the county. A talk with Senator John Rankin and a later follow-up petition to have a road for mail purpose no doubt enhanced the efforts that brought a mail route in 1946.

Almeda also supported

the local portion of intrastate interLATA long distance calls.

Another $26.8 million would be obtained from non-basic services - such as 25-cent local coin calls, charges for using local directory assistance more than three times a month, installation charges based on the time and materials required to do the job, an optional maintenance plan for wiring inside a customer's home or office, and a number of other miscellaneous items.

This filing also includes request for the granting of emergency relief in the form of an interim exchange access charge. This charge would allow the company to recover lost revenue contribution from intrastate interLATA long distance (not offset by charges to long distance companies) and equipment lease fees, McGowen explained.

To generate the additional revenues, Bell is proposing the following rate structure for local exchange service: premium flat rate service with unlimited local usage; Standard Measured Service with an increased usage allowance; Low-use Measured Service; and, for areas where Measured Service is not yet available, discounted one-party service.

The proposed monthly rates are:

the Rural Electrification Program and worked for telephone service, and by 1952 both had become a reality in that part of the county.

Without a doubt, her greatest love has been the support for the Crippled Children's Hospital. Almeda has personally raised almost $1,800 for this cause. She continues to encourage both prayer and financial support, remembering her own handicaps which have now confined her to a wheel chair.

Her's is a prayer of thanks to God for the ability to work unselfishly in behalf of others.

Her cause for thankfulness goes on to include such things as the ability to remember and think . . . thankfulness for home and love. . . for books and things to do. . . for Christian fellowship and the church. . . for hope and peace and for friends and flowers.

Her demands for this world's goods are few in number, as is reflected in the poem that follows by an unknown . . . Her Thanksgiving spirit is a daily gracious one, and may we have the same this Thanksgiving.

It holds scarce anything at all!
Not because life lacks abundance,
But because my cup is small!

-- Standard Measured Service, which includes about 75 typical weekday local calls a month for home or business phones with discounts applying to other time periods; the rate for residence customers would be $16.50 with a monthly call allowance of $7.50, up from $6.50; the rate for businesses would be $38.65 per month, with a $7.50 allowance;

-- Low-use Measured Service, which includes about 30 typical weekday calls a month to nearby locations, would be $13.25 a month for residence customers and includes a $3.00 calling allowance; and

-- where Measured Service options are not yet available, the rates for one-party flat rate service would be discounted; $25.17, one-party residence; and $59.99, one-party business.

Among other changes included in today's proposal are:

-- an increase to 30 cents for directory assistance calls beyond the proposed monthly three-call allowance;

-- increases in long distance operator service charges; and

-- an increase in service connection charges.

the patrol car.

According to Lee County Sheriff Robert Herring, his department's investigation showed that Agnew apparently drew his revolver when the car in which Shook was riding tried to hit the patrol car. Agnew fired accidentally, hitting Roberts in the shoulder, and Shook in the head, the report stated, concluding that there was "no intent" on Agnew's part.

Insurance will reportedly finance payments to the Shook family from both the city and Officer Agnew.

BIBLE QUESTION BOX

WARD HOGLAND

QUESTION: Mr. Hogland, I read in Rev. 6:7- about the pale horse and his rider. It is said this is death, but why does it say hell follows. This sounds like all will go to hell?

ANSWER: This could be a little confusing if one did not know the meaning of "hell." It is true that hell sometimes means gehenna, the place of eternal punishment. However, in the King James translation many times the word "hell" simply means the unseen world of disembodied spirits, the subterranean abode of the dead. To translate gehenna and hades in the same word "hell" has had its effect of obliterating the difference in the place of eternal torment and the temporary abode of the dead. In Acts 2:29, it is said by Peter that Christ went to hell (or better hades). The word "hell" at the time the King James translation was made, simply meant to "cover up." In the old English people would speak of "helling" their potatoes. This conveyed the idea of covering them. This is why the word is used in both senses. Later the word "hell" came to be used for eternal punishment only. This means that all people who die will go the hadean realm but all will not go to the place of eternal punishment. Some will go to heaven.

Gifford To Be Honored At National Conference

Tracey Lynn Gifford, Rienzi, Mississippi's winner in the National 4-H photography project, will be honored by Eastman Kodak Company for outstanding achievement at the annual 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 27-Dec. 1. Her all-expense-paid trip was donated by Kodak.

Highlight of the week's activities will be a banquet, Tuesday, Nov. 29. Robert C. Sharp, a Kodak vice president and general manager, consumer-professional and finishing markets division, will be the speaker. Six of the state winners, selected as national winners by the cooperative extension service, will receive $1,000 college scholarship grants from Kodak. Sharp will make the presentations. These six winners are eligible to receive an additional $500 scholar incentive award from Kodak if they rank academically in the top half of their class at the end of their first semester.

A 10-minute slide presentation made up of photographs taken by each of the state winners will be a part of the banquet program which also will include entertainment by Jimmy Nelson and Danny O'Day, popular ventriloquist act frequently seen on television.

Kodak is a long-time participant in 4-H activities and sponsor of the photography project. The work of 4-H members in the photography project is supervised by the cooperative extension service in their home counties.

Ho-hum kitchen gift for wife is not so hot

How would you like it if she gave you a snow shovel for Christmas? Well, don't make her feel like a galley slave by giving her something else to cook with. She'd love a charming chair, or a lovely lamp to read by, or a delightful desk. Or perhaps wall units for the special alcove where she sews and writes and chats on the phone. These are gifts that say "I love you" again and again, during the moments that she loves the most.

Nostalgic Thanksgiving Memories

'Over The River, And Through The Woods'

By ED WOODWARD
Managing Editor

Though I have now been a Southerner long enough to consider myself one, I am still constantly cajoled and, sometimes, reviled for having once been a Yankee. And maybe, at heart, I am still a Yankee because at this time of year most of my memories have to do with the North of my heritage. When you have grown up and lived the majority of your life in a cold climate, your holiday memories are associated with snow and biting cold winds. Consequently, it becomes difficult to associate Thanksgiving and the Christmas season with bare ground, rain and temperatures above zero.

In Northwestern Ohio we always got our first covering snow around Thanksgiving. And, being a large, close-knit family, our holiday dinners were held on a rotating basis. One year, Thanksgiving dinner would be at Aunt Donna and Uncle Pete's, and Christmas dinner and the gift exchange would be at Aunt Millie and Uncle Zu's.

The following year the get-togethers would be rotated to the homes of two other great aunts and uncles, homes, or to Grandpa and Grandma's, or maybe even to our house. But almost always it seemed to be somewhere else -- somewhere we had to drive to.

So, we would all pile into one of a seemingly endless succession of 1936 Chevrolets -- Mom and Dad, my brother Jon, my sister Ann, and myself (I would be 16 before Mike made his appearance, and Richard Lee never lived to enjoy such things).

Inevitably, it would have snowed. Dad would have gone out in the early morning numbing cold to put on the tire chains so we could navigate over the snow and ice that would cover the roads, smooth and hard and slick like the coating on an ice cream bar.

We would then drive through the necessary 10 or 20 miles of snow-frosted landscape at 20 to 30 miles an hour. And no matter whose home we were going to visit, we would spend the entire trip singing, over and over, "Over the river and through the woods to Grandmother's house we go," occasionally interspersing choruses of Jingle Bells as we imagined that old Chevie skimming over the hills with a soft "Sssh," and the crackle of the icy glaze giving way under the runners. We kids could easily imagine the stately black or white horses straining in front of us with clouds of condensed breath streaming from their nostrils like smoke from a steam engine.

More often than not we would have to return home in a blizzard, our bellies stuffed with turkey and pumpkin pie, and the drone of the wheels on the ice lulling us to sleep as Dad hunched over the wheel trying to see the road through myriad snowflakes, delicate as glass feathers, whirling toward the windshield. Thanksgiving Day was over; Christmas Season had officially begun; and our heads were as stuffed as our bellies...with anticipation.

In the 1940s the decorations, the Christmas sales, the Christmas music...none of it ever appeared until the day after Thanksgiving. And the prospect of those hectic weeks of preparation added much to the flavor...the sensation...the anticipation of that electric train, that doll, and the hope of a snowy Christmas Eve and a white Christmas.

Over the following years the great aunts and uncles gradually left us, and the locations for the family get-togethers dwindled. But we still held to the traditions.

Christmas seemed to become more and more a season of getting, rather than giving, with the sale merchandise going on display earlier and earlier each year until Halloween items gave way to lights and tinsel overnight.

And in 1961 I found myself spending my first Christmas away from home, in a warm climate with palm trees waving in an almost tropical breeze. I was in an Air Force barracks; the Christmas "CARE Package" from home had already been received, and the goodies shared with my barracks-mates; and the family get-together was a hurried five-minute phone call on Christmas Day. And every time I heard I'll Be Home For Christmas on the radio I wanted to cry, which would have been extremely unseemly for a budding military man.

The next three holiday seasons were spent even farther away, in Chateauroux, France, with not even the phone call. I had acquired a new family, and Thanksgiving Dinner was in an Air Force mess hall.

By 1965, I was back home, married, and looking forward to having my expected child as the torchbearer of tradition at the 1966 Thanksgiving dinner, when he or she (she, as it turned out) would put her hand in a pumpkin pie.

Then, 1975, alone again, living in New York City where the holidays are spent in a bar, whether you drink or not, because the owners generally offer a Thanksgiving dinner free -- or very cheap -- to the regulars, most of whom are also transplants spending the holidays far from their families. New York City is one of the loneliest, yet friendliest places I have ever spent a holiday season. And I spent four there.

But, now, we have come full circle. Though all those great aunts and uncles, and Grandpa and Grandma -- and even Dad -- are gone, we are traveling on Thanksgiving and Christmas again.

This year, it is to Aberdeen, where my brother Jon, his wife, Sheila, and their two boys, Kevin and Christopher, will host the family dinner. We -- Sara, Bubba, Jason and myself -- will travel from here; while Mom and Mike, and my sister Ann, her husband, and Tammy, Missy, Mandy and Michael will all travel from Fulton.

There will be no imagined majestic steeds pulling a sleigh over the icy roads. There will be no myriad snowflakes to obscure the road as we're guided by Dad's steady hand. But one remaining tradition will live on. Thanksgiving will still be that time of year when the family is closest.

And I guess that was the best part all along.

Eyes On Mississippi

'Allain Man' Possible Shoo-In As Senate Leader

By BILL MINOR
Syndicated Columnist

JACKSON, Miss. -- The people of Mississippi already know that Bill Allain and Brad Dye will be the governor and lieutenant governor, the state's two top ranking officers. But who will be the No. 3 man in state government, the president pro tempore of the state Senate the next four years?

Technically, the president pro tem won't be elected until members of the new Senate are sworn in next Jan. 3, and they vote on him. But the winner has already been determined, this column has learned.

He will be State Sen. Tommy Brooks of Carthage, a crusty, 58-year-old rural veteran of the legislative wars who has never been regarded among the power elite of the Mississippi Legislature.

Brooks was a late, and somewhat surprising, entry in the pro tem race and at first his candidacy was taken lightly because two others, Sen. J.K. (Buddy) Gresham of Greenville and Sen. Emerson Stringer of Columbia had already started making contacts.

Also, Brooks, faced with some very tough opposition in the more populous Kosciusko area of his rural district, was far from a sure shot to be re-elected. But, as he has done in several tight spots before during his 28 year career in the Legislature, Brooks survived.

He still had to overtake Stringer, the leader of the "country caucus" which grew up in the Senate the past four years, dealing misery to Gov. William Winter's plans for prison and educational reforms. Stringer had become the most persistent advocate of putting scientific creationism into the state's public school books.

Middle-of the roaders in the Senate began to see

Brooks as the best possible candidate to head off a Senate takeover by the far-right forces allied with Stringer, so they swung behind the likeable, and previously lightly-regarded Leake countian.

Even the bright, young progressives who won Senate seats in several parts of the state this year have gone with Brooks as the best available choice.

As of last week's special session, Brooks had enough votes cornered to get Stringer out of the race, and Gresham was expected to fold his tent shortly. A late, half-hearted bid by Sen. Howard Dyer, also of Greenville, wasn't expected to get off the ground.

Brooks, as third ranking officer in state government, will perhaps be the most unpolished political figure to hold the job of Senate pro tem in many years, but at the same time he's the first populist to emerge in that role in memory.

Although one of the oldest oldtimers left in the Legislature, Brooks has always been something of a maverick. He never joined the Old Guard, nor did he join the Country Caucus. Somehow, he's always remained at the fringes of any formal ties with the conservative hard core represented by his contemporaries.

Although he may lack polish, Brooks is not lacking in political shrewdness. Usually, he knows better than most how a proposition will come out when it comes to a showdown in the Legislature.

In last December's special session battle on the Winter education program, Brooks was one of a handful in the Senate who convinced Lt. Gov. Dye that if the House-passed bill was not dislodged from Sen. Ellis Bodron's Finance Committee, the whole Senate, as well as Dye

Kennedy Remembered In Address

Editor's note: On Nov. 22, 1963, President John F. Kennedy was fatally wounded by a sniper's bullet. On the following Sunday, Milton H. Grisham of Booneville gave a memorial address in the Methodist Church in Chico, Calif. To mark the 20th-year anniversary of the tragic event, The Banner-Independent is reproducing the address given by Grisham.

By MILTON H. GRISHAM

A while ago John F. Kennedy, President of the United States, died. In a deep sense, a part of each of us died, too, for this is a death that diminishes the lives of all men.

The somber tones of the bells tolling the melancholy message of the President's death also tolls for you and for me, indeed for all men everywhere who love and cherish freedom in eternal dimensions.

President Kennedy is dead! And this nation -- indeed the whole world -- shivers. Sad winds sing a requiem over our land. And the whole of humanity is sad.

Calumny matured a while ago and this nation, stunned and bewildered, gropes in agony for the meaning of this immense tragedy. For a grievous moment this nation looks at its image -- and finds it ugly.

Suddenly a million incidental issues, seemingly so important and imperative a few hours ago, simply do not matter now. Gone is the fury of yesterday's rivalries and jealousies with their cries and claims. Hate is forced to take a horrible holiday and bitterness a brooding break. There is an awful unity in America right now born not of patience, long-suffering, and goodwill, but of tragedy.

America weeps tonight for a President and a man. For in the finest of this country's traditions, John F. Kennedy was both. Millions admired this courageous young man and those who didn't were obliged to respect him.

Yes, America weeps tonight, but she weeps not alone for a President, nor for a beloved man. No! America weeps tonight out of a sense of shame. Shame that an ugly spirit moves among men's minds giving comfort to those who show contempt and disrespect for constitutional authority; a spirit that affords succor and sometimes profit to those who trade in hate markets; a spirit that condones with uncommon tolerance demented words and irresponsible thoughts.

For this, America weeps tonight. And more. A while ago, the man who worked for the meaning and destiny of America died. A while ago, the man whose life was dedicated to the highest human hope for America lost that life.

Gone is the man who tried valiantly to inspire the people of this nation to come to eternal terms with the issues of justice and freedom and peace. Gone is the man who refused to shrink from the lonely burdens thrust upon his youthful shoulders. Gone is the man who challenged America's conscience with the cry: "Ask not what America can do for you, ask what you can do for America."

And now this great, good man is dead. How wistful are the words of Edwin Markham, who said of Lincoln:

"He held his place...
Held the long purpose like a growing tree...
Held on through blame and faltered not at praise...
And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down...
As when a kingly cedar green with boughs...
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills...
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky..."

How wistful! But how woeful they sound against the hard hate that presses at the soul of this nation. Even so, we are consoled by a compelling belief that all the villainy and violence that man is capable of will never be enough to put down America's noble experiment of human freedom; that even the "Hitler in all of us" cannot remain a permanent substitute for the ideal of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

But listen, America! This tragedy demands a reckoning. For as God is witness, this tragedy and this generation, too, cry out for a worthy legacy.

That Yankee From Yonder

It's Woodward With 2 'w's

By Ed Woodward
Managing Editor

I have a problem. It's not really a new problem. But it seems to be getting worse.

I find it difficult to believe that Joanne, the actress, her brother "Woody", the baseball player, the actors Morgan and Edward, and Bob, the journalist who used to work with Carl Bernstein, all have the same problem. I'll bet nobody ever drops the second "w" from their last names.

And I've never heard anyone call Woodward Avenue in Detroit "Woodard Avenue."

Though my name is not a complicated one, people everywhere seem to have problems with it. I have been called Woodworth, Woolworth, Woodwork, Woodark, Woodall and, of course, Woodard. And I've never been able to understand why.

If I had a name like Jerzy Kosinski, or Alexander

Soltzenytsyn or Chaim Potek, I could understand people mispronouncing and misspelling my name. But I don't.

I had acquaintances in New York City named Yuri Kapralov, Jadza Cupck (pronounced Yah-juh Koop-chek) and Donavon Sylvest. I used to go to a doctor named Joanne Rodziewicz (Rah-jay-witz). And to my knowledge, they never had any similar problems. And Yuri was an artist and a published writer; while Donavon was a working actor with Broadway credits.

But, as I said, though people having trouble with my name has been a lifelong problem, it seems to be getting worse lately, despite the fact it appears regularly in black and white in Mississippi magazine, and is prominently displayed in bold type every week with this column, in The Banner-Independent masthead and with the numerous articles I write for this paper.

Last week, I went to the FBLA family night banquet. When I sat down, the place card in front of me was emblazoned "Ed Woodard." When I was introduced later, I was introduced as "Ed Woodard."

My bank payment book, and my insurance policy for my new used car both say, "Ed Woodard." And two out of three people who phone here for me ask for "Ed Woodard," or "Mr. Woodard."

I've told Ken, when he orders business cards for me, he should have the second "w" in my last name underlined.

I hate to sound picky about all this. But it really does bother me. I'm proud of my name. After 44 years, I've grown attached to it. I don't want to have two credit files. And I don't want to have to start signing my name, "Ed Woodward, aka Woodard."

And this is the least rude way I can think of to make all of you aware of the problem. After all, it's embarrassing to have to correct individuals each time my name is mispronounced -- embarrassing to both of us. And sending important papers back with the change noted gets to be a hassle.

As far as I can see, my only other alternative is to take an "if you can't beat them -- join them" attitude, and change my name to Woodard. But I don't think my wife would like that. And I know my mother wouldn't.

Thanksgiving

Our American Day

Yet another Thanksgiving! And what a beautiful time of year it is. We often forget what a blessed people we are, but fortunately we have a traditional holiday to remind us. We are alive and free and live in a land of plenty. These are the values cherished by our pioneer ancestors. There are many opportunities for us to share, however, and this is a great day to do it. Some people, old or poor, are not so fortunate. In some small way we could make this a day of Thanksgiving for them also. Remember, as well, our creator who truly made this and all Thanksgivings possible.

John T. Larsen

To All Our Neighbors... Have A Happy Thanksgiving!

Booneville Happenings

By MRS. GORDON MCGEE

I received a letter from Mrs. Lila P. Johnson of Jackson, Tenn., last week saying how much she was enjoying the Booneville Happenings. It was so kind of her to write. Lila is the sister of Jessie Presley who died a year ago, Nov. 21. She was the correspondent for this column in the Banner-Independent. She mentioned how much she missed Jessie. I think she was speaking the voice of so many who knew and loved her. She was truly a dedicated Christian who lived for others and she will live on in our hearts.

Sympathy is extended to the family of Mrs. Bessie Cummings who died Nov. 14 in the Booneville Baptist Hospital. She was buried in Kirkville Cemetery on Tuesday.

Jacinto News

By ROBERT L. CHASE
Correspondent

Hello. Let me introduce myself. I am Robert Loren Chase. I live right here in old Jacinto just across the street from the famous and historic courthouse. I am beginning to write the Jacinto News for this newspaper. I am asking all of the fine people in and around Jacinto to call me if you have any news such as where you have been and if you have had any company, etc. Please phone 462-7475. A few weeks ago the Jacinto Superette and Snack Bar went out of business, and of course, we were all sad about that. But I am very glad to report that it is open now under new management and I think that's great. Come by and say hello. They will be glad to see you. Several communities in

Prentiss and Alcorn counties have a neighborhood watch program. We have a fine neighborhood watch program in Jacinto. It's just one way of helping each other and just being a good neighbor. We invite everyone in and around Jacinto to join with us in helping each other and fighting crime. We meet the first Thursday night at 7 at the Jacinto Hunting Club clubhouse. But everyone please take note of this. The meeting in December will be on Friday, Dec. 2, at 7 p.m. The deer hunting season opened last Saturday. I hope everyone got his or her big buck and no accidents, please. The last report I had, Mrs. Dewey Bain was recovering well from her auto accident that happened in Memphis while she was visiting relatives. Hope she continues to do fine. Jack Richardson and myself recently attended the American Honeybee Association's yearly meeting in Biloxi. We want to thank the Prentiss County Bee Association for helping to sponsor the trip. We enjoyed attending the meeting. Mrs. Troy Chase visited her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burcham in the Macedonia community, last Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Lois Smith has not been feeling well lately. We hope she will be feeling much better soon. Mrs. Willard Newborn has not been feeling well lately. We wish for her a speedy recovery. She was supposed to retire some time ago but said she works harder now than before. She is one of the best neighbors a person could hope to have. We all appreciate her. I am sure that we all have something to be thankful for. Happy Thanksgiving.

Library Notes

By LEE DAVIS
Librarian
George E. Allen Library

Have you ever wished that you could brush up on your knowledge of Mississippi writers or perhaps acquaint yourself with the styles of some unfamiliar to you? More help than you may realize is available to you through some browsing, if you just know where to start. On your own, you might try the subject section of the library card catalog under "Mississippi Authors" or the same subject in the Vertical File. Here are put pamphlets, clippings, typed materials and other sources of information that are in a form which will not withstand shelving. "An Anthology of Mississippi Writers," edited by Noel E. Polk and James R. Scafield concentrates on fiction, poetry, and autobiography. It presents selections from thirty-eight of the best and most representative writers of over a hundred years of Mississippi's literary heritage. Biographical introductions for each author and critical notes are furnished as well as guides and a bibliography for further study. But Mississippi has more than its share of literary geniuses. A recent gift from a patron is "Modern Short Stories: the Uses of Imagination," edited by Arthur Mizener. Not a newly published book, it has been used as a text for short-story classes, and it includes other writers both American and European. It, too, provides biographical material and helps for analyzing each story. However, if enjoyment of story and style are your purposes, it's an easy matter to select only those things that appeal to you. The library staff joins you in giving special thanks for the blessings large and small generously granted us

Excerpts From A 25th Reunion Diary

EDITOR'S NOTE: 'Excerpts from a 25th Reunion Diary' was written by a Booneville High School graduate after attending the 25th-year reunion of his class, the BHS Class of 1958. The author now lives in New Orleans where he has worked as an editorial writer for The Times Picayune and for New Orleans magazine, among others. The class reunion took place on Aug. 6 of this year.

(Booneville)

I GOT HERE a lot earlier this morning than I'd expected to, and again I wondered -- as I have, no telling how many times -- why it is that Highway 45, being one of the few and maybe even The main highway(s) north to south to north in the state -- anyway, why ain't it a four-lane?

No matter. It wouldn't change the fact that Saturday is my 25th class reunion. That's right, kid.

"Twenty five?" I found myself asking out loud as I stared at the various shapes into which uncontrolled Kudzu had sculpted itself. "A whole quarter century?"

Suddenly, I was awfully glad that I hadn't been voted Most Likely to Succeed.

Admittedly, I have been inordinately lax in my efforts to keep up with other classmates. Perhaps that was just as well, since I might have learned that This One or That One had, say, become a brain surgeon or been named an ambassador.

I probably would have responded by dipping my pen into the tacky jar.

Dear This One: How uncommonly courageous of you to mess around with somebody else's brain, being as how you never had enough of one yourself to pass sophomore literature and had to cheat every single exam...

Or
Dear That One: I was hardly surprised at your success as a diplomat since I recall how smoothly you talked your way out of it when you got caught rigging that Beta Club election.

SARAH BEENE'S in town to see about her mother, who's sick but better, and we went to Sadie's. Say bought five thin-thin bracelets for 39 cents each (or was it 59 cents?) and whispered that she would've paid ten times that since you can't even find those things anywhere anymore, which I happen to think says something good about American taste for which we all ought to be glad.

Say (and for this I am glad) hasn't changed a bit. She remains, I suppose, something of a rare and wonderful constant in my life, the closest to a sister I may ever have had, and there's a real reassurance to knowing that whatever Time has dealt us individually has not altered us collectively.

Sadie's hasn't either. Changed, that is. The only store I can name where you can find dolls' clothes right next to a roach trap -- if you happen to be in the market for either, which I wasn't. I strolled down every aisle twice, however, since I never go in without doing that. Sadie was there in the blondest of glories and when she laughed her laugh (the one that would wilt a weather-vane) I was reminded again of how few things from my (our?) earlier life have bridged the gap between Then and Now. Sadie. Sadie's.

When I was a little boy that was the only place where you could buy box kites, the paper kind that cost 15 cents. Every time I went in there I feared that a tremor of the earth would cause the whole place to come tumbling down, everything was piled so high on the walls. I wouldn't be surprised if there is still a box kite or two in there somewhere.

Outside, Say and I stood for a moment just drinking in the view. That little pony kids used to poke a nickel in and ride (a quarter, now?) and the store windows, real displays if there ever were any. They're a kaleidoscope of colors and images, objects that defy kinships and rely on, well, I guess, maybe season appeal or past sales performance or possibly -- probably the fact that this item "fits" in this place in the window.

As we walked on, Say and I had a new disagreement (and believe me, we've had plenty.) She says there were two aisles in the Von Theatre. I say one and only one, and no room for more. The Princess had two, of course, but there was still a problem if you needed a restroom, since neither the Princess or the Von had one. The Von at least had that alley, but wasn't it Aunt Jessie who said the Princess was the only picture show in the world where you could see a jungle movie and smell the animals? Besides, declared Say with typical insight, what good was that alley to a girl if it was already being used by a bunch of boys?

LATE TONIGHT I went by the office of The Banner Independent, which bears not the slightest similarity to what existed back 20-some-odd years ago when I held my first newspaper job there. It used to be in the building that had at one time been Henry Pounds' grocery. Now it's all moderned up on Main Street. It used to have a back room cluttered with trays of heavy lead type. Now it has gone to newfangled press and cold type.

But Cecil Brandon was still there, still personable, still cordial, still exceptional as a person. I asked him about Leista Woodard, who used to work with us, and he said her husband, W.V. Horn, was in the runoff for sheriff. Just think, Leista as Mrs. Sheriff.

He also said that Herschel Presley, who was our typesetter, was sick. I knew that already; he's a cousin. And when I told Cecil that in all the years since we worked together, considering all the typesetters with whom I have had contact, I have never seen one that came close to being as good as Herschel, Cecil replied: "And you won't ever."

Thursday
IN BIG B, far as I can tell from first glance, there's good news and bad news.
First, the good news.
It's this: Somebody's getting up a petition to try to make liquor legal. That somebody, I'm pleased to say, is Sukey Harber (now Lambert.) Or she's at least part of the sombodies doing it.
Having concluded in high school that the only way for me to pass Government was to sit behind Margie Robinson, I can't very well profess to know what said petition is expected to do when it is presented to whom and where, but I sure wish I could sign it.

And now the bad news.
They're trying to move the Post Office from downtown to somewhere up on Highway 45, I'm told. That "Indefinite They" is apparently the U.S. Postal authorities in general, and the local postmaster in specific.

I've tried to remember (but can't) even the current postmaster's name, let alone his background. Seems like he's not from Booneville. Also that he was formerly in a city or at least some place smaller than this. If so, he ought to be aware already of the consequences reaped by other urban areas whose internal business cores were de-centralized. I thought of writing him a letter (surely it's a "Him," not "Her," else I'd be bound to know) and I still may, despite the probability that if he is really intent on moving the Booneville Post Office, he ain't about to give much credence to an opinion by some busy-body who (1) doesn't even live here any longer, and (2) is offering notions most likely born of nostalgia. He's probably got a gut full of folks who want every petunia in the patch left just where they were planted by tradition and where they've bloomed cheerfully ever since.

Somewhere recently I came across something about city - county - state - federal - whatever public buildings in relation to each other and to the bunches of commercial establishments that formed naturally in the same shared vicinity. (Where was it? In a city planning journal, maybe.) "How To Kill A Town And Get Away With It" or something like that was the headline. A part of it had to do with the lessons learned regarding urban psychology, as reflected by necessarily clustered "civic centers." Convenience, apparently, is by no means the sole purpose for court houses, post offices, city halls, etc., having sprung up in the same general vicinity of retail stores and other businesses, although most central business districts were communally created before modern transportation. It was the psychology of togetherness. Survival collectively as well as individually. But these, oh well...

Maybe I'll save my energy and just send him a postcard, suggesting that if it's more space that the Post Office needs, he hire only very short people.

Besides, by the next time I get here, probably they will have trucked the city jail to Meadow Creek, and the Overhead Bridge to New Site.

'If it's more space the Post Office needs, he (should) hire only very short people'

SAY INSISTS that her most golden moments as "Marvelous Mother" are always when she entertains her two sons with character sketches from a Booneville Who's Who. "Now, of course, both boys are practically grown, and they've heard the Booneville stuff more times than's to be counted. But they still want to hear about some of the folks they've heard about since infancy. That's the only time I get to talk without interruption."

She figures she and I were simply too busy developing our own brands of eccentricity Way Back When to realize what a sterling art there is to being a specialty produced in Booneville.

We had just finished trying to figure out how the old Prentiss County Home Bank (what with the bank, Terry Miller's dentist office, Mrs. Hall's beauty shop, Thomas Comer's law office, Eddie Ballard's TV Repair shop and something else we knew was there but couldn't remember) all got crammed into that one space that now lies barren, as if hit by a blitz bomb, when she looked at me and said, "I defy you to cite any other location anywhere, I mean anywhere, where a kid can grow up not only exposed to, but also knowing, knowing, somebody like Jettie Nunley!"

"Or Homer Cane," says I.
"Or Albert and Jeanette Feldman," says she.
"Or their two fine sons, Teddy and Big Irv," says I.
"Or Lucy Hancock," says she.
Marion Smith.
Wick Anderson.
Christine Vincent.
George Junior Rutherford.
Sallie Kate Chase.
Seth Pounds.

"Oh, for goodness sake," said Say, "don't forget Aunt Jessie."

"I loved her," said I.
"We both did," said she.
"I loved them all," said I.
"We both did," said she.

There was a sudden pause, perhaps reflective, and then, almost as if we'd rehearsed it, Say and I said the same thing at the same time.

"Still do."

I WENT out to Cousin Pap's and Faye's house tonight for supper. They live in the big old house at Osborne where Uncle Robert and Aunt Mary used to live. Faye filled me up with roast and fresh vegetables and gave me two shark's teeth that came from the creekbed. Pap hasn't changed a bit. Still as kind as ever; just like Uncle Robert.

As I left, I glanced back over my shoulder at the dark hill in the back of the house and wondered how many hours Nicky and Mary Sue and the rest of us cousins -- nearly 50 of us in all -- spent just climbing the hill and looking for those gnarly shell-like things, actually fossils I suppose. It was years later that I finally learned they are the remains from the very large sort of oyster (or maybe another sea dweller) that had inhabited the whole region yea, how many millions of years ago, when all this area was under water, was in fact part of the ocean. I'm sorry I don't still have one of those hard, white shell things; would make a good paper weight.

Friday
THIS MORNING I went down to Aunt Dollye's and she, looking a lot lovelier than anybody ought to look that early, fixed me breakfast. But before that, I drove through Wheeler, which has most of the old houses still there. Callie Bruce's is for sale. Our old one has been taken over by the school and looks completely different. I wanted to, but didn't, get out and stand where our front porch used to be, and after I drove off, I was sorry I hadn't. After all, that was where I had, once upon a long ago time, decided why people drive on the right side of the road.
I must have been at least five when I began to notice that particular traffic tradition. (I used to sit on the porch and look out at the cars and trucks passing on that road, which at that time was gravel.) I can't recall what inhibited me from asking questions about why people drove on this or that side, but I suspect it was because I was about to start school and I probably thought I was big enough to figure it out for myself.

Anyway, I never got around to asking anybody just why you drive on this side, but I did spend a good deal of time thinking about it. I applied my most methodical attention to the possibilities. Red cars and blue ones and green ones, even two-toned cars traveled on both sides of the road. Obviously, color had nothing to do with it. New ones and old ones did the same, so age and condition were ruled out. Some vehicles carried only one person; others were running over with passengers. I soon discounted occupancy.

A point of fact: to the South of our house was the back of beyond. In my mind, there lay a region of unfathomable gullies the color of dried blood, of men and women born with wrinkles and stooped backs, or children who never smiled, of days that began and ended with another row of cotton that had to be hoed. I had never been too far down the road that led in that direction. But the other way! Ah, that was North, the way you went to Booneville, the route to Everything. That was where the real world was.

I knew that when we went anywhere, we went that way. We were on this side of the road. When we came back, we were always on that side. There seemed to be only one constant to my available evidence, and that was it.

So, I concluded that everybody on this side of the road was going somewhere. And everybody on that side was coming back. It made plenty of sense to me, and it came as somewhat of a jolt when I later realized how long I had been operating on that well thought-out principle.

'I concluded that everybody on this side of the road was going somewhere. And everybody on that side was coming back'

TONIGHT A bunch of us met at Kitty Harber's Restaurant (which is awfully good and which is appropriately called "The Different Drummer") and ate and vied for group attention, which was just the way class meetings used to go.

Somehow I had forgotten that while that class of ours didn't make too many terrific decisions, didn't complete too many terrific projects, didn't perhaps do much at all that I can now look back on and call terrific, there was one exception; we elected Harold Lee Galloway class president. That was terrific. So was he. And still is.

After supper we went over to Brenda Tollison's for coffee, and everybody kept pitching out names to find out whatever'd happened to so-and-so, and the one that fascinated me most, always has and always will, was Kay Dale Mauney. Whatever happened to Kay Dale, anyway? I'll bet a lot of folks wonder; I do.

I had to fight to keep everybody from disarranging the photos I'm trying to get together for that part of the program tomorrow night. I'm not quite sure how I got roped into it -- "the program" that is -- but I fear there shan't be much memorable to it.

AT ONE POINT tonight somebody brought up the trauma that had ensued when the age 40 was reached. "That's when I stopped counting," somebody said.

I didn't say so, but it was at 30 that I stopped stuff, though counting wasn't one of them. That was when I stopped counting Kahili Gibran, for instance.

I stopped checking my horoscope so religiously.
I stopped apologizing for not liking caviar.
I stopped pretending that an occasional well-placed French idiom was rather clever.

I stopped wishing that I'd marched in at least one protest march.
I stopped making lists of things I was going to stop doing.

That was also the year (the other year, that is, other than this one) when I decided to go ahead and come to the class reunion, I think.

I got here real early that morning too, I remember. But that time, it seemed so little had changed. At first. For the first few miles across the county line, same Quaker State signs. Same holes in the road. Over there, by the Hodges' house, was where we used to cut the Christmas holly. And that little hill past the creek, the one all by itself, that's the Indian Mound where I found my first arrowhead. In that very field I swore that some day I'd be an archaeologist. Funny, the hill seemed so much bigger back then when I was 10.

In town, however, the Jeran Theatre was a burnout shell with a little chinaberry tree sprouting in just about the same place where I sat through "The Eddie Duchin Story" four times and decided to become a professional pianist.

Tigrett's Drug Store was a jewelry store. A revolving watch counter had displaced the booth where I had started writing the great American novel in a Blue Horse notebook.

But Court Square had remained the same, its weathered benches and weathered men whittling cedar sticks and chewing Bull Durham. They all had pencils stuck in the breast pockets of their overalls. They all had hairoil stains around their hatbands. They all nodded when I walked by. They didn't notice that I hadn't "gone on," to whatever it was I might have gone onto. Hadn't written a whole stack of books. Hadn't been named editor of some high-toned paper. Hadn't won any front-page prizes you read about in Time and Newsweek. Still down there in New Orleans. Still writing those little ditties he's been writing all this time. Hasn't gone on.

Others had gone on. I was soon to learn. This one and that one, they'd married former cheerleaders and majorettes and now had a house in Horseshoe Acres and three kids and two cars and two CBs and they went to the Jaycee luncheon on Tuesdays and to the Country Club on Friday nights, and they care who won the Southeast Conference. They had discovered hair spray and "Jonathan Livingston Seagull." They had gone on.

I drove past the old school building and noticed that sure enough, several letters were missing from that wrought iron sign we'd left behind as our class gift.
At each familiar sight that afternoon, my confusion built. I was playing hopscotch with tenses -- past, future and a curiously perplexing present imperfect. This went on until nearly sundown, when suddenly, conjugation seemed so simple.

That night was our 12th reunion, but I didn't make it. I was on my way back to New Orleans with some kind of renewed urgency.

Before I drove off, my mother got a bit frenzied. "But Donny," she said, "everybody knows you're in town. When you're not there, what will they say? What will I tell them?"

"Just tell them I've gone on," I replied.

Saturday
WELL, I WAS nearly late for the thing, naturally. Was late, in fact, but nobody noticed, thankfully. Since everybody was so glad to see everybody else. My prize for my Most Glad to Have Seen was Lanois Davidson, one of the class sponsors to whom I was and am devoted. My personal Most Missed was Miss Mabel Cunningham, the other sponsor to whom I also remain devoted.

Shorty Ray Howell, right off, pumped my hand and said, "Long time no see, Donald. I own 30 book stores, mainly in Pennsylvania and New York. I'm mainly concerned with the financial end, however, and don't worry about the other stuff since I've got 80 employees to see about running the stores."

Well, I had to sit down at that, which is what I did, and he did also, across from me, and I said how fine and what kind of book stores? "Oh, book stores," he said, "which sell books." I asked what kind of books, thinking of specialty book stores dealing with such items as art books or paperback books or, well, there are some that deal only in special subject books -- occult, religious, whatever, even porn. Shorty Ray said, "Used books, a lot of them, or others. I just pay attention to the business end, don't worry about anything else."

Visions of Doubleday's or B. Dalton's and other such establishments went racing through my head. "Do you have your name on the stores?" I asked. He said no.

"Well," I confessed, "read is just about all I do to books, and not that as much as I'd like or should, I'm afraid. And I'd hate to tell you how much I don't know about business ends." I tried to lower my voice when I underlined my point by admitting that I'm usually too broke to pay attention, even.

And all at once, standing beside me, taller, slimmer, it seemed, was Barbara Wallis, who spent a week of time and no telling how much energy teaching me to ride a bicycle back, how long ago in Wheeler, and I rose from my seat and hugged her with renewed thanks and admiration.

"THE PROGRAM" (if indeed it can be called that) went all right, I guess, considering that I waited until nearly 4 p.m. to start writing it, and then finally accomplished that on a borrowed typewriter atop the table in Peggy Shields' mama's kitchen.

Exactly half of the graduating seniors (there were 48 of us) were there, so I suppose I ought to feel satisfied if what I wrote was only half-inspired. Except, of course, for the little tribute I did to Katherine Ann Alexander. She's the only one deceased. I couldn't help knowing that nothing composed of mere words, no matter whose they were or where, could be enough of a tribute to Katherine Ann. She was probably the most typical of us all. And in her very own way, she was probably the most special.

HERE'S A list (in no particular order) of Past 40 class members who have made better women than they did girls -- the Fabulous Four:

Peggy George
Reba McCreary
Doris Dean Phillips
Brenda Tollison

The fellows, myself included, haven't improved enough to comment on.

I SAT THERE eating fried fish and hushpuppies with a plastic fork out of paper plates and every once in a while I'd look up and around at my fellow classmates and think about the phase that the younger generation including my godchild in Pascagoula, had gone through a few years ago. She'd seen "American Graffiti" two or three times and "Grease" so often she could quote whole hunks of dialogue, and one afternoon she informed me in no uncertain terms that the entire world was "into" the Fifties. I informed her right back that it was fine with me, as long as nobody tried to drag me back into them, because quite frankly, I felt damned lucky to have gotten out in the first place.

Yet, every time I flick on the television and one of those things -- "Happy Days" or "Laverne and Whis hennam" -- is on, I automatically start turning the knob and wondering how that much effort and expense into a single generation have turned up so few truths about it.

That the Class of 1958 falls pretty well at the peak of it all, and that as a member of that class I should have an enviable perspective about it, well, it makes me want to gnaw clean through my bottom lip because my perspective seems geared to avoiding superlatives at any price.

With this exception: Ours was probably the only generation in American history to have its sense of identity thwarted by time. We could undertake the principles of both the generation before us and the one after us, but our allegiance was split between the necessity for responsibility on the one front and urgency for freedom on the other. While we could identify a little with both sets, we ended up belonging to neither. We were banished by birthright.

Too young to jitterbug and too old to "hustle." Too late for big bands and too early for acid rock. Too long on pomp and too short on circumstance.

Our records were songs sung by the Platters and the Coasters and the Drifters. We couldn't have handled a tune from something called the Grateful Dead or Hot Tuna.

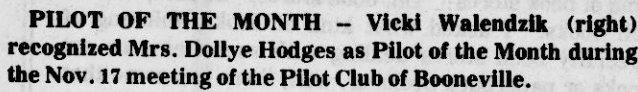

For the BHS Class of 1958, juvenile delinquency was pretty remote, and as far as "rebellious youth" was concerned, well, we suspected that the whole thing might be a tad dangerous, and danger wasn't something we particularly craved.

In fact, to us "The Pill" was something to be thought of as a cure, not a preventive. Any mention of "pot" did not refer to something to be smoked, Lord knows.

We weren't exactly moralists; we had merely settled for standards for judgement bequeathed to us.

Eventually, it turned out that our problem lay not in growing up, but rather in staying grown up. For many of us, it has taken two and a half decades and a good many attempts, but at last we are starting to assess the advantages of having been born when we were, both in spite of and because of its paradoxes. We're just now learning to create the identity we didn't inherit, and we're stitching away on a sow's ear purse.

TONIGHT AS WE finished saying goodbye and as we went this or that way, I couldn't help suspecting that other Classes of 1958, like mine, represent the unvarnished essence of our peculiar generation, and that perhaps our generation if finally, at last, "arriving." It may have been a little late getting here, but it had trouble with directions. Old maps are sometimes misleading, and even new ones don't always say where the detour signs have been put up.

With the Christmas shopping season approaching it is very important that we, as consumers, compare warranties (or guarantees) on products that we buy.

The Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act, passed in 1977 to protect buyers and sellers, gives meaning to the terms "guarantee" and "warranty." Simply stated, it is a promise by the manufacturer or seller to stand behind the product. The law is designed to protect you in case the product breaks down.

Comparing warranties (or guarantees) is an important part of any shopping venture. Shop for warranties as carefully as you shop for the product. Also, compare the reliability of the company behind the guarantee.

Almost all products have an Implied Warranty. This means that the product is expected to work for its intended purpose. For example, a dryer should dry clothes and a lawn mower cut grass. Implied warranties are not written, but come automatically with every sale unless the merchandise is accepted "as is."

Under provisions of the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act all warranties must be easy to read and understand.

Every condition of the warranty must be spelled out in writing.

Warranties on products costing more than $15 must be available to read before buying.

The law does not require a manufacturer to give a warranty, but if one is given, it must be either a "full" or "limited" warranty.

A full warranty promises the customer that:

- a defective product will be repaired or replaced free, including removal and reinstallation when necessary (under time limits stated in the warranty);

-- the customer will not have to do anything unreasonable to get the warranty service;

-- the warranty is good for anyone who owns the product during the warranty period;

- if the product has not been repaired after a reasonable number of tries, a replacement or a refund will be provided (known as the anti-lemon provision);
- the consumer does not have to return a warranty

PFC Charles Reece of Booneville has successfully completed recruit training at Parris Island, South Carolina, to become a United States Marine.

card for a product with a full warranty. A company may give a registration card and suggest that it be returned, so long as it is clear that the return of the card is voluntary.

The title "full" does not mean:

- that the entire product is covered by the warranty;
- that the warranty has to last for one year or any other particular length of time;
- that the company must pay for "consequential or incidental damages" (such as towing, car rental, food spoilage);

- that the product is warranted in all geographic areas.

A limited warranty lets the consumer know that this warranty give less than what full warranty gives.

For example, the consumer:

- may have to pay for labor, reinstallation, or any other charges;

-- may be required to bring heavy product back to the store for service, or do something else that may be

- may be promised a prorated refund or credit;
- should realize that the "anti-lemon provision" does not apply to limited warranties.

The title "limited" does

- the product is inferior or will not work as provided;
- only part of the product covered -- a limited warranty may cover the entire product;

-- the warranty only covers the cost or repair parts - a limited warranty may also include labor;

-- the warranty will last for any particular length of time;

-- the warranty service
may be done in only a few locations.

A product can carry more than one written warranty. For example, an automatic washer can have a full warranty on the entire product for one year and a limited four-year warranty on the gear assembly.

To avoid problems on warranty claims, it is commended that you:

Keep your sales slips.
Do any maintenance that required for warranty coverage and keep a written record of it.

Use the product according to the manufacturer's instructions - abuse or misuse not covered by any warranty.

Realize that a warranty is as good as the company that stands behind it.

Optical Style Show Is A Success

Local Optometrist Dr. Walter Simpson said this week that the optical style show held at his office recently was a great success.

"Progress in the eyeglass frame industry during the past 35 years has been astounding," Simpson said.

He said the recent style show at his office, put on by Tura Optical Co. of New York, "dramatized vividly the changes that have taken place."

"No longer are people restricted to two or three styles and colors when choosing their frames," Dr. Simpson said, explaining that a large enough variety of shapes and colors is available so that practically anyone can find the ideal frame.

Mrs. Dee Bennett of Tura Optical was assisted at the style show by Mrs. Simpson and Miss Jennifer Jackson, Dr. Simpson said. He said the three ladies were kept busy from 9:00 a.m. till 2:00 p.m., showing the frame selection to area people, serving refreshments, and awarding door prizes.

Door prize winners included Mrs. W.C. Inzer, Starkville, Mrs. Mary Parquetti, Fulton, and Mrs. Betty Jumper and Mrs. Doreen Elder, both of Booneville, Dr. Simpson said.

help you." "Oh, I didn't ask Him to help me be good," replied the boy, "I ASKED HIM TO HELP YOU PUT UP WITH ME."

I wonder if that's our attitude in prayer? Do you just ask God to change others or your circumstances?

IF YOU WANT YOUR PRAYING TO BE PROFITABLE, THEN COME CLEAN WITH GOD. GET TO THE HEART OF THE MATTER. BE TOTALLY HONEST WITH THE LORD. TELL HIM FIRST ALL ABOUT YOURSELF.

When Robert Louis Stevenson was a boy, he once remarked to his mother, "Mamma, you can't be good without praying." "How do you know, Robert?", she asked. "BECAUSE I'VE TRIED." So many have tried this.

This reminds me of the little boy who had been sent to his room because he had been bad. A short time later, he came out and said to his Mother, "I've been thinking about what I did and I SAID A PRAYER." "That's fine," she said. "If you ask God to make you good, He will Tell us about your heroes, ages 12 to 18.

We want to give our outstanding young people an award for their achievements and a cash savings account.

First Bank Young Citizen Awards.

It's our second annual First Bank Young Citizen Awards, and it's our way of saying thanks to the local young people who, again and again, go that extra mile.

Young people ages 12 to 18 who live in any First Bank county are eligible. And you can nominate them. All you do is pick up a nomination form, and tell us why, in your own words, you think the young person is especially outstanding. Why you respect him or her so much.

The boy or girl next door.

Maybe your nominee will be a young neighbor who spends his afternoons caring for and loving his elderly grandmother. Maybe he or she is the team captain or club officer who inspires others to give their all. Or maybe the youngster who excels in school and helps with family finances. Or maybe a dedicated volunteer at the local hospital.

With so many fine young people in our communities, the possibilities are almost endless. Feel free to nominate more than one.

Awards. Cash. Banquet.

Awards will be given in four categories—Leadership, Responsibility, Achievement-Plus and Service. And there may be as many as six awards in each category.

First place winners in each category receive a gold award and a $400 savings account. Second place winners receive a silver award and a $300 savings account. Third place winners receive a bronze award and a $200 savings account. Other finalists in each category will receive a $100 savings account. All winners and finalists will receive certificates of achievement.

Plus all finalists, their parents or guardians, and the persons who nominated them will be guests at a special awards banquet.

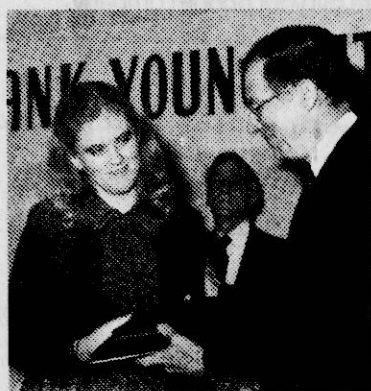

Award winners will be selected by a panel of local citizens made up of teachers, ministers, homemakers and mothers, and business and professional men and women.

Nominate now.

Nomination forms with complete details are available now at all First Bank offices, or call us at 728-9468 to receive your forms in the mail. The deadline for this year's nomination is December 15, 1983.

Please put your thinking cap on now, and make a list of all the deserving young people you know. They work so hard every day to lead, to achieve and to give. Saying thanks is the least we can do.

County Agent's Notes

By
CLIFFORD J. HAMPTON
County Agent

Fall is usually the time most farmers begin feeding supplements and looking for cheaper alternative feed sources to meet the increased requirements of their herds.

By now most grazing has been planted for use in late fall. However, proper management will increase yields from the grazing.

Limiting the grazing period each day can stretch available grazing and reduce per animal costs, particularly for brood cows. Research suggests that brood cows grazing full-time will get nearly twice the protein needed and 60 to 80 percent more energy than is needed.

A cow with a young calf can be satisfactorily wintered from about three hours of grazing each day, along with a partial feeding of fair quality hay or silage.

Allowing cattle to graze only long enough to get a fill reduces trampling damage and contamination from manure.

No additional protein supplements are needed if cows are grazing well-fertilized pastures. However, calves should have full-time access to grazing through creep gates.

Alternative Feed Source

Rising feed prices have forced many farmers to look for alternative feed sources to supplement commercial concentrates.

Whole cottonseed has proven to be an affordable alternative that also offers benefits for dairy farmers. Dairymen can use whole cottonseed to stimulate butterfat production in dairy herds. This stems from the high fat content of the seed which is transferred to milk.

Whole cottonseed in the non-delinted stage can be an excellent source of fiber. The feed supplement is also a good source of protein and an excellent source of energy.

For more information on managing grazing for maximum benefits, and alternative feed sources come by the county Extension office on 404 East Church St. or, call 728-5631 or 728-7092.

Forest Fire Danger Returning

Right now, all over the state, County Foresters and their crews are preparing for the upcoming fire season. Crawler tractors, trucks, fire rakes and fire flaps are being checked and rechecked to make sure everything is in good condition and working properly. Breakdowns during fire season can be extremely costly.

What kind of fire season can we expect? What does it cost to put wildfires out? What can we do to prevent wildfires from occurring? Lets try and answer these questions.

First of all, it is very hard to predict whether a fire season will be light or severe. So many variables are involved in wildfire occurrence, it is difficult to predict how many will occur in a given season. Wildfire occurrence in 1982-83 was the lowest in a decade.

Mississippi had only 4,354 wildfires burning 47,156 acres. Prentiss county had only 60 fires on 720 acres - these figures are well below the 5-year county averages. Without question the wet Spring weather held down wildfires, but there were some dry, windy periods when fires just did not occur like they normally would.

This is an indication that people are becoming more and more aware of the wildfire problem and are doing their part to help prevent wildfires. We can count on having more fires in dry winters than wet; however, large numbers of wildfires can be kept down even in dry winters when people are cautious in burning trash, debris and other materials. Statistics show that nearly 90 percent of all wildfires are caused by carelessness when people burn trash or debris.

It costs a great deal to suppress a wildfire - 30 dollars an hour for the tractor; about 5 dollars an hour for the operator and his assistant . . . money that comes out of the taxpayers pocket.

Taxpayers money is not all that is lost . . . the valuable timberland that fires destroy provide landowner income and homes for wildlife, not to mention lumber for houses and pulp for paper. It is easy to see that the cost of suppressing a wildfire is only the tip of the iceberg.

Wildfire prevention starts first with the individual citizen. He/she must be careful when burning and on windy, dry days not burn at all. Any smokes detected should be reported to the Prentiss Fire Tower (phone number 728-4214) so the Forestry Commission can check them out.

Most importantly, everyone should remind his neighbor to be careful with fire, all year round. All of us have a stake in Mississippi's forest resources; whether we own timberland, work in a sawmill or woodyard, or live in a house built with Southern Pine lumber.

Let's be careful with fire and protect our great forest resources!

MISS THANKSGIVING 1983 - Laura Massengill, daughter of Ray and Ouida Massengill of Rienzi, has been named "Miss Thanksgiving 1983" at a pageant held Nov. 12 in Baldwyn. She attends Biggersville High School where she is captain of the BJHS cheerleaders. She also plays the flute with the BHS marching band.

NE CHRISTMAS BAZAAR - Members of the art and home economics department at Northeast Junior College are making final plans for their Christmas bazaar which will be held Tuesday, Nov. 29, from 8:30 until 3:30 in the conference room of the Black and Gold Lounge in the Frank would wind up in the "Hall of Shame," the Jackson Clarion-Ledger created for foes of the reform act.

Dye went to work and got the bill out of Bodron's committee, even though it was a vastly different version from the House reform bill. Eventually the Senate passed a compromise measure that has been hailed a big victory for public education in Mississippi.

It is widely believed around legislative circles that Governor-elect Allain is going to have very few friends in the Legislature, and consequently, will have a tough time getting his programs considered by lawmakers.

Quite significantly, while the Mississippi system doesn't allow the incoming governor to have any say-so in selecting the leadership in the Legislature, Allain will have perhaps his most valuable ally in the Legislature in Brooks, as Senate pro tem.

Brooks was one of a small handful of legislative old-timers who backed Allain from the start of the gubernatorial campaign. The other night a social affair for members of the Senate during the special session, Allain was surprisingly invited, and showed up.

Sources close to the Senate pro tem to-be say Brooks gave Allain full assurance of his support in the post Brooks will hold. That's believed to be more than Allain can expect from Dye, who is the president of the Senate, and is more than Winter Winter got from the pro tem of the past four years, Sen. W.B. Alexander of Cleveland.

BANK ADMINISTRATION MEETING - The November meeting of the Northeast Mississippi Chapter of Bank Administration Institute was held at the Frank Haney Union building at Northeast Junior College. deceive people," Robin said. She also mentioned that 99 percent of the time people don't get caught for altering money orders. She said it was possible to take a $1 money order and alter it up to $100.

William, the third member of the Parchman Panel, was sentenced to 18 years for armed robbery. He said that he stole credit cards. "Most of the folks who got hit up were folks just like you," he told the bankers. "They dressed nice and had good jobs. I figured they wouldn't miss it. I was a modern Robin Hood. I didn't steal from poor folks."

"I was just ignorant and lazy. I could have got a job but I didn't want to at that time. I felt the world owed me something. But what goes around comes around."

William urged the parents in the audience to help their children stay away from a life of crime.

"You can't judge a book by its cover. Not everybody is honest. Everybody has a little larceny in their heart.

If you have a need you will go to any length to replenish yourself."

The final speaker was Don, who was sentenced to serve 10 years for grand larceny and burglary.

He told the group that he had committed bank fraud but had never been caught. "Most aren't," he said. "They either leave the state or are arrested for something else."

Ironically, Don worked as a layout engineer for banks in Memphis.

He told bankers they should have one camera in the bank in plain view (so he would worry about it) and then install three "dummy" cameras - so he wouldn't know which camera was looking at him.

He also advised not having trees or shrubbery in front of bank windows. "Let people see inside the bank at all times."

He also noted that people should know exactly how many credit cards they have in their wallet. Thieves may just steal one and it might be days or weeks til the person realizes one credit card is missing.

Grazing Period Opens

Prentiss County farmers participating in the 1983 farm programs are now authorized to graze their conservation use acreage. The official grazing period opened Nov. 1, 1983.

The land must not be overgrazed and sufficient cover must be maintained to prevent wind and water erosion.

Conservation use acreage is cropland removed from production under the 1983 acreage reduction, paid land diversion and payment-in-kind programs. Harvesting is prohibited on the land, and grazing is permitted only during the six principal growing months.

The installation and maintenance of protective cover and conservation practices on the land taken out of production was required to guard against soil erosion. Program participants were required to plant certain grasses, legumes, small grains or other cover on the land, or to maintain various conservation practices as well as carrying out control measures for weeds and rodents.

To qualify for full program benefits, farmers must maintain their conservation use acres in accordance with program requirements. Those who fail to do so will be out of compliance and could lose payments and other program benefits.

The agency is checking farms to see that conservation use acres are being properly maintained.

Community Committee Elections Upcoming

The mail election for ASC community committee members is being held this month, and ballots will be mailed Nov. 25 to all persons eligible to vote in the committee election.

This is an election where farmers are elected by other farmers in the community. The final date for mailing voted ballots, or for bringing them to the county ASCS office, is Dec. 5. Ballots will be counted on Dec. 8 in the county ASCS office, 105 College St., Booneville.

The counting process is open to the public. Three regular members and 2 alternates will be elected in each of the five county communities in Prentiss County.

On Dec. 16 the newly elected community committee members will hold a county convention to nominate and elect one county committee member and two alternates. The newly-elected county committee member will serve for three years, the alternates for one year.

One of the main functions of community committee members is to elect members of the ASC county committee. They also assist the county committee throughout the year in the administration of federal farm programs locally.

Soil Conservation Report

By CHARLES E. COWAN
Soil Conservation Technician
Booneville Field Office

Today beaver are plentiful in Mississippi, primarily on the large river systems in the northern half of the state.

Many landowners seek to eliminate beaver on their land by using various methods, many of which have been unsuccessful. Some research efforts have been directed toward the development of reproductive inhibitors and practical poisoning techniques for them.

The most prudent approach to animal damage control problems is annual harvest, particularly where such harvests can be made at no public expense. Considering the recreational aspects of trapping, the income potential, and the edible meat, the beaver is an animal that lends itself to population control through trapper harvest.

This approach promotes the use of nuisance populations as a renewable resource, rather than wastefully controlling them as pests.

Trapping as an effective means of reducing beaver population has been demonstrated time and time again throughout the history and range of the beaver.

Although opinions vary among trapping regarding the best trap to use, those who have tried them tend to agree that the 330 Conibear is the best trap available for southern beaver. This trap usually kills instantly and is almost 100 percent effective in preventing escapes. Conibear traps are highly adaptable for water sets in both shallow and deep water, either partially above or beneath the surface.

Since drowning sets are unnecessary with the Conibear, a trapline can usually be set quickly and will require fewer traps. Anyone seriously considering beaver trapping should have hip boots or waders, a pair of setting tongs, a small hatchet or axe, some rolls of wire, and wire cutters. With this equipment, a trapping license, written permission from the landowner, now you are ready to go to the field.

Beaver generally swim from one area to another on the surface, so the trap should be positioned with the top of the trap two or three inches above the surface, the trigger mechanism beneath the water, and the prongs sticking upward. The traps should be wired to a secure stake, and if placed in streams that are subject to high run-off, a piece of wire should be run from the trap ring to a substantial tie on either bank, preferable down stream.

This arrangement will prevent the loss of traps during high water and occasionally may prevent the loss of a trap and beaver to wild dogs.

For more information on beaver control contact the Soil Conservation Service at 107 College St. or phone 728-3544.

No USDA Approval On Adding Oil Or Water To Grain

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has not approved the application of water or oil to grain to control dust, Kenneth A. Gilles, administrator of USDA's Federal Grain Inspection Service, said today.

Several grain trade newspapers erroneously reported that USDA had verbally approved the addition of a spray of moisture or edible oil to suppress dust when loading or unloading grain, Gilles said.

"USDA authority is limited to certifying the quantity and quality of grain at the time of inspection," Gilles said. "The agency is not authorized to approve or disapprove grain dust suppressants."

"USDA supports efforts by the grain industry and others to develop methods to control grain dust. However, the addition of substances such as water and oil to grain may be considered an adulteration and may affect both the quality and quantity of the commodity," Gilles said.

ACCOUNTANTS' REPORT

The Board of Directors
Prentiss County Electric Power Association
Booneville, Mississippi

We have examined the balance sheet of the Prentiss County Electric Power Association, Booneville, Mississippi, as of June 30, 1983, and the related statements of earnings and accumulated earnings, and changes in financial position for the year then ended. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly, included such tests of the accounting records, and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances. We did not audit the account balances as of June 30, 1982, but reviewed and accepted the balances reflected by the audit report of another Certified Public Accountant.

In our opinion, based on our examination, and relying on the report of an independent Certified Public Accountant as of June 30, 1982, the aforementioned financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Prentiss County Electric Power Association, Booneville, Mississippi, at June 30, 1983, and the results of its operations, and changes in financial position for the year then ended, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

ELECTRIC POWER ASSOCIATION

BOONEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Members:

Prentiss County Electric Power Association members continue to buy electricity at the lowest rates in Mississippi.

Even though TVA removed their 5.8% rate reduction on October 2, 1983 PCEPA members are still paying lower rates for their electricity than they were a year ago because of the rate reduction your Board of Directors approved and put into effect on July 2nd of this year. This reduction was approximately 3% per customer.

Having a co-operative electric power association owned by the members such as Prentiss County Electric Power Association allows the members to buy electricity at the lowest possible rates since there are no stockholders expecting a return on their investment. This association was formed in 1935 and has served its members with power bought from Tennessee Valley Authority for 48 years.

Your Board of Directors and employees of this association are dedicated to the work which we do so you can continue to have dependable electricity at the lowest possible rates.

I encourage you to look for ways that you can conserve electricity such as: more insulation, closing off unused rooms, adjusting heating and cooling temperatures, replacing worn-out appliances with more energy efficient units, lower water heater thermostats and use passive solar designs when building a new home. Call our office for a free energy survey of your home.

Please be careful with extension cords and Christmas light during the coming holiday season.

Sincerely,

Thrasher Boys-New Site Girls Come Out On Top At Thrasher

By GREG SHOOK
Sports Writer

The Thrasher Tournament got under way Tuesday, Nov. 15, with county teams Wheeler, Jumpertown, New Site and host team Thrasher.

The tournament was played Round Robin style. This means each team must play every team in the tournament, and the one with the best record overall takes home top honors.

The Thrasher Rebels prevailed in the boys' division with a perfect 3-0 record. New Site's Royalettes took home the girls division trophy with an identical 3-0 tally.

In the opening round of the tournament the Jumpertown Cardinalettes met the Lady Eagles of Wheeler and found them too much to handle, losing 74-60.

Tangie Miller led the scoring for Wheeler with 30 points. Pam Johnson also hit double-figures with 13.

Leading scorers for Jumpertown were Michelle Lauderdale with 13 and Cassie Davis with 10.

The score at the half was 41-26 Wheeler.

The second game saw the New Site Royalettes squashing the Thrasher Rebelettes 75-37.

Lane Smith led the scoring for the Royalettes with 21 points. Pati Cartwright and Cindy Stanley had 12 each. Tammy Thorton joined the Royalette high scorers with 11.

Ann Chambers was the Thrasher high scorer with 9 points.

The score at half-time was Royalettes 32-23.

In the night-cap the Thrasher Rebels met the New Site Royals, and triumphed over them 71-52.

Calvin Davis led the Rebel scoring with 26 points. Danny Ramsey added 15 and Paul McCutchen contributed 12.

Scott Moore put up 26 points for New Site, while Richard Shook had 13.

Tournament play resumed on Thursday night with the girls' starting things off.

The New Site Royalettes defeated the Wheeler Lady Eagles 61-44, led once again by Lane Smith who sank 26 points. Tammy Thorton donated 10.

Angela Welch led the Cardinalettes with 14. Cindy Horton put 11 on the board.

New Site led at the half 33-22.

In game two Thrasher's Rebelettes beat Wheeler's Lady Eagles 53-49. Ann Chambers set the pace for Thrasher with 19 points. Selita Hamlin added 14 more for the Rebelettes.

Tangie Miller led the Lady Eagles with 31 points. And Pam Johnson contributed 10.

In the final game of the night the Wheeler Eagles triumphed over the Jumpertown Cardinals 95-77.

Michael Chandler did an outstanding job on defense for the Eagles with 13 rebounds. Chandler was also high scorer for Wheeler with 31 points. Willie Miller connected for 20 more. Clay Richey and William Lowery had 10 apiece.

Ricky Burress led the Cardinals' lost cause with 31 points. Julius Perrin had 17, and Tim Grizzard put up 13.

The score at the half was 37-50 Wheeler.

Friday night's games started with Thrasher's Rebelettes downing the Jumpertown Cardinalettes 55-48.

Seleta Hamlin led the Rebelette charge with 18 points. Ann Chambers contributed 12, and Marie Miller 11.

In the second game it was Paul McCutchen contributed 30, Calvin Davis 22 and James Leslie 16 to lead the Thrasher Rebels to a 97-71 victory over the Jumpertown Cardinals.

Jumpertown was led by Ricky Burress with 29 points. Charley Durham scored 13, Tim Grizzard 12 and Julius Perrin 10.

At the half the score was 40-32 Thrasher.

In the exciting game of the night the New Site Royals fell one point short to let Wheeler take home a 61-60 victory.

Mark Barnes missed a last second shot in the lane to give Wheeler the game.

Wheeler was led by Tony Pate's 19 points. Mike Chandler contributed 14, and Willie Miller 13.

Mark Barnes led the Royals with 17. Neil Moss added 12, and Richard Shook 10.

In the final night of action, Saturday, the New Site Royalettes downed the Wheeler Lady Eagles 56-53.

High scorer for New Site was Lane Smith with 26.

Tangie Miller with 26 points, and Pam Johnson with 18 led Wheeler in their loss.

In the second game the Jumpertown Cardinals, led by Ricky Burress with 32 and Charlie Durham with 16, defeated the New Site Royals 70-64.

Mark Barnes led the Royals with 22 points, while Doug Taylor added 12 more.

At half-time it was 31-43 New Site.

In the final and most exciting game of the tournament the Thrasher Rebels defeated the Wheeler Eagles 69-60.

Though rainwater leaked through the roof, causing the officials to stop the action to dry the floors, this did not stop Thrasher from playing a great game.

In the first half Thrasher made an outstanding going into the locker room at the half with a 49-33 lead.

Wheeler came out in the second half to show a good effort on the floor, but they were unable to stop the Rebels.

Thrasher hit an amazing 30 out of 31 free-throws, but the most important foul shots came from Roy White in the last five minutes of the game.

White, who had 14 points, hit a perfect 8 for 8 from the free-shot line to help put Thrasher on top.

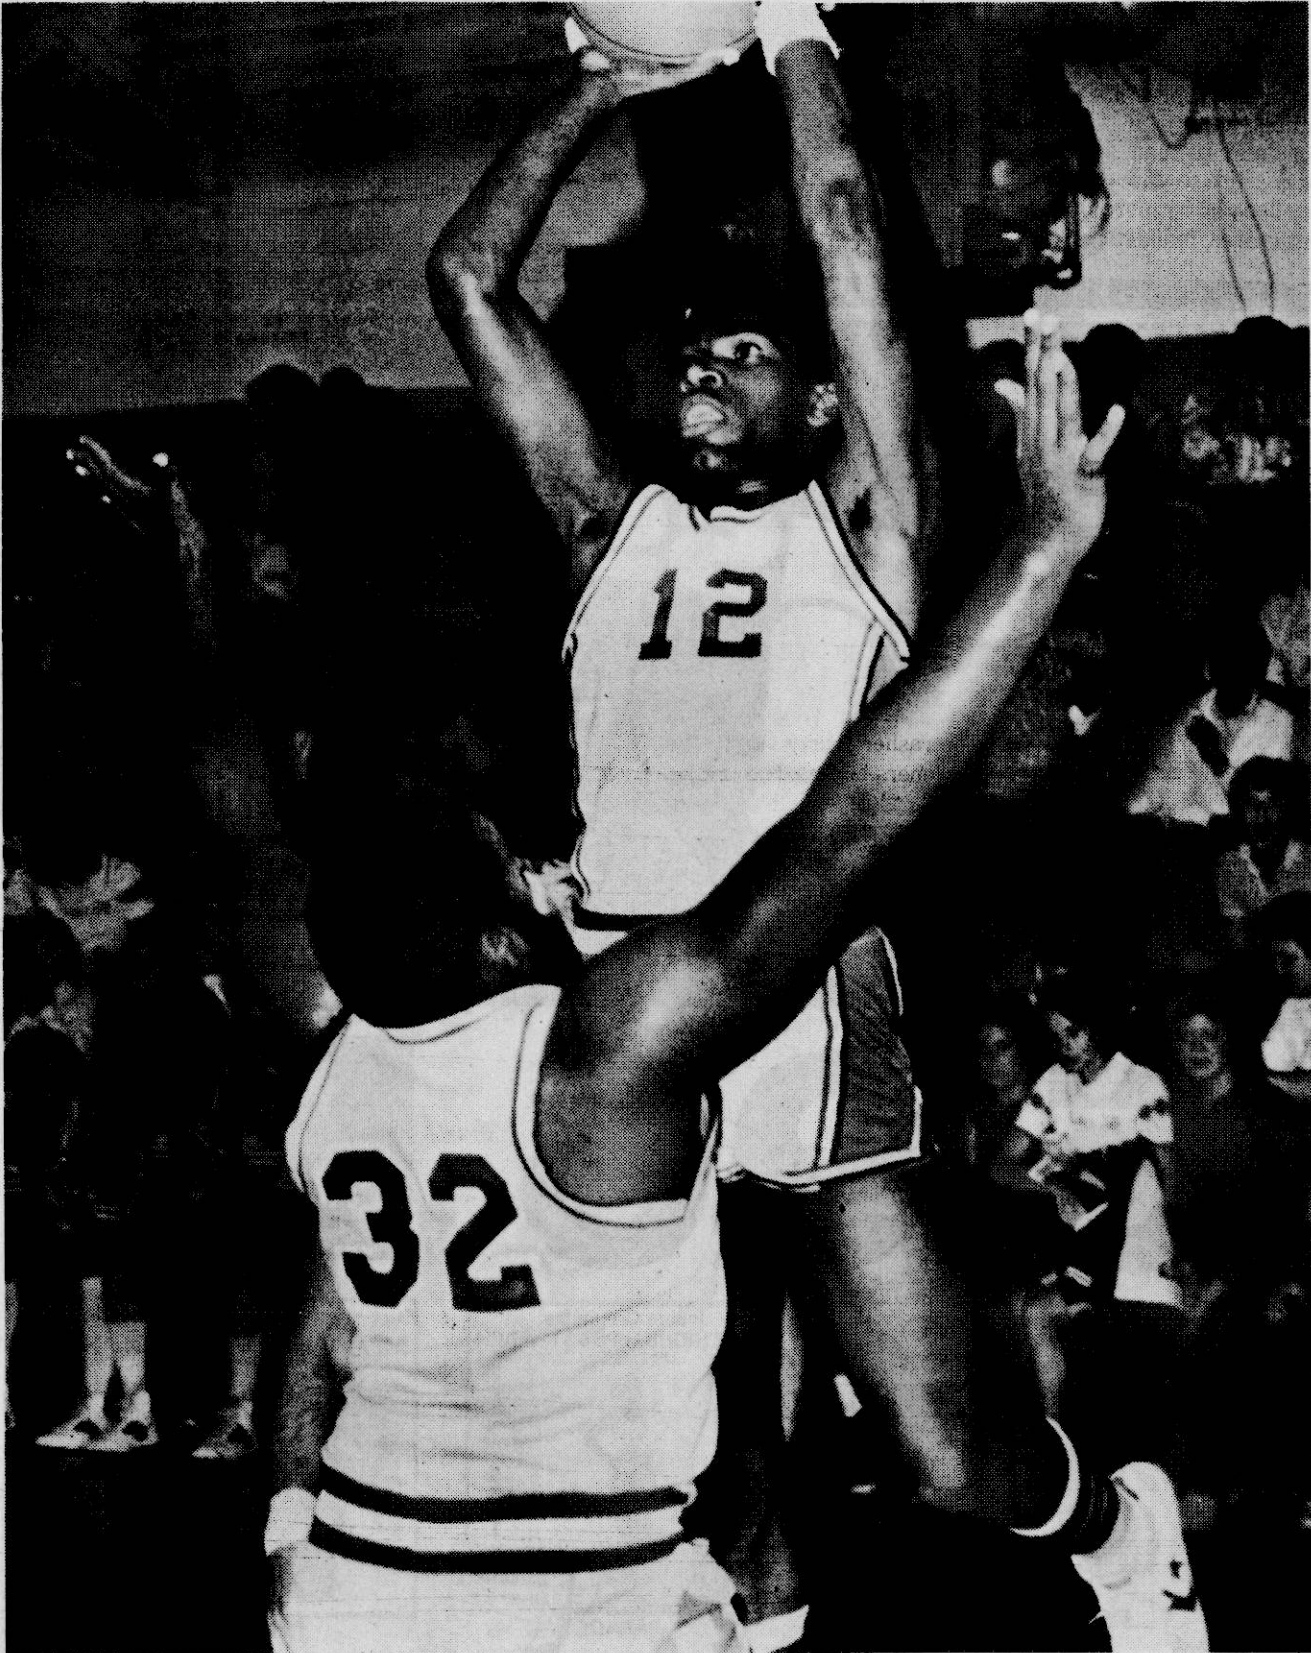

Other high scorers for Thrasher were Calvin Davis and Danny Ramsey with 16 each.

Mike Chandler received a cut above the right eye in the fourth quarter after losing his footing on the wet floor and falling. But he still led the scoring for Wheeler with 14 points.

Willie Miller scored 13. Clay Richey and Todd Swinney added 11 each.

Thrasher Coach Jacky Rowsey said, "Our free-throw shooting played a big roll in our win."

The high scorer for the girls in the tournament was Lane Smith with 73 points in three games. For the boys it was Ricky Burress with 92.

GOING FOR TWO - Wheeler's Mark Chandler (12) tries for two points while Thrasher's James Leslie (32) attempts to block the shot during the Thrasher Invitational Tournament Saturday night. In what turned out to be a 'barburner,' Thrasher's Rebels and Wheeler's Eagles met in the final game of the tournament. Thrasher walked away with the victory, 69-60. (Photo by Greg Shook)

Sports Writer Hunts - Doesn't Find - Deer

By GREG SHOOK
Sports Writer

Saturday was the first day of deer hunting season, and like most "good ol' boys" I decided to try my luck at the sport.

Getting up at four o'clock Saturday morning, I was ready to go out in search of this animal, as Leonard Nimoy would say. And, since I thought it would be cold, I put on my warmest clothing. But when I stepped outside I found it would have been a lot better if I had 'Gone Hawaiian' on this trip.

I got into my car, stopped to pick up my friend Steve Loveless and we were ready to hit the big woods.

Steve and I arrived at the woods about five o'clock, eager for our first shot at a ten-point buck. But after about 30 minutes, it began to look like all the deer had packed up and flown south with the ducks for the winter.

There was nothing...just a lot of woods. We could not find the time of day out there. All we could find was where the Deer had been. And you can't eat deer tracks. If deer tracks show where the deer have been, how do you know where they are now?

I decided the best thing to do was to just crawl under a tree and try to catch up on some of the sleep I had lost by getting up so early. That proved to be the most productive part of the whole trip.

What better way to get back to nature than to sleep in the woods...even if it is while you are supposed to be hunting?

Steve finally gave up after two or three hours out there. And we both decided it was time to get back to the real world.

I have decided from now on that if I kill a deer (even with my car) I will call it deer finding. Otherwise, it will continue to be deer hunting.

20-12 Loss To Tornados

Bearcats End Victory March

By SCOTT MCKINNEY
Sports Writer

Baldwyn's Bearcats ended their 11-game victory march to the state championship in Ackerman last Friday night when the 'Cats were blown away by the Philadelphia Tornados 20-12 in the opening round game in the North State Class BB playoffs.

Mistakes played a major role on both sides of the football as turnovers wiped out scoring threats and penalties caused other trouble.

A missed extra point early in the game plagued the Bearcats, although they managed to come from behind once.

A flea-flicker enabled Philadelphia to take the lead in the third period and pass interception set up a final touchdown which put the game out of Baldwyn's reach.

The Bearcats had a final chance to score and possibly tie things up as they drove to the Philadelphia five yard line, but a fumble in the end zone wiped out the scoring threat and gave the game to the Tornados.

Baldwyn had lead 12-7 at the half, but the Tornados went ahead to stay with 9:25 left in the third period.

Philadelphia marched 80 yards in nine plays to score on its first possession of the game in the first period.

The 'Cats came charging back and got a break when defender Anthony Price recovered a fumble at the Philadelphia 13 yard line. It took the Bearcats four plays before Price got the six-pointer on an on-yard plunge. Stan Scott's extra point attempt was no good leaving the Tornados holding the lead at 7-6.

Greg Lomineck intercepted a stray Philadelphia pass at the Philadelphia 19-yard line on the Tornados next possession to put Baldwyn back in business: Quarterback Gregg Tucker got the Bearcat touchdown several plays later. However, a try for two points failed as the Philly defender intercepted the pass in the end zone.

Baldwyn led 12-7 after the first quarter. But, Philadelphia used the flea-flicker and the strong rushing of senior Nathan Horne to outpower the Bearcats in the second half to preserve the 20-12 victory.

Going undefeated in 11 games this season, the Bearcats enjoyed one of their better years. Also, it was Baldwyn's first time to make the playoffs.

"We just made too many mistakes," Baldwyn coach Hubert Tucker said of the game. "Philadelphia has a strong team, but we should've made the most of our chances." Tucker was very proud of his players on the tremendous job they have accomplished this season.

Quail Season Opens On Thanksgiving Day

Thanksgiving may be America's day to celebrate the fine taste of turkey, but for thousands of Mississippians it will be a day of a different bird.

Thursday, Nov. 24 is the opening day of the bobwhite quail hunting season in the Magnolia State. It will continue for 97 days, ending Feb. 28.

Hunters are permitted 12

seven-day small game hunting for $20.

Enforcement officials with the Department of Wildlife Conservation in Jackson say that hunters need not have their shotguns plugged to shoot quail.

However, they say that woodcock, a migratory game bird, often inhabits the same woods as quail and are frequently flushed by birds in the daily bag and 24 in their possession.

Shooting hours for quail are the same as other small game animals, one-half hour before sunrise until one-half hour after sunset.

Like hunting any game animal, hunters must have a valid license on their person before going afield. A small game hunting license for residents costs $6. Non-residents may purchase a hunters gunning for quail.

The hunting season on woodcock does not begin until Dec. 24.

Shotguns must be plugged and incapable of holding more than three shells when hunters shoot woodcock or any other migratory bird.

Each year hunters take about 1.5 million quail in Mississippi during the open season.

Sports Roundup

Booneville At Alcorn

Monday night the Booneville Blue Devils traveled to Alcorn Central to take on the Alcorn Central Bears.

In the opening game Alcorn Central's Lady Bears took a 71-73 victory in a very close game.

The Devilettes went into the locker room at the half with a 37-39 lead. But when action resumed in the second half Booneville found the Lady Bears much to hard too handle.

The Devilettes' Kunshinge Sorrell led all scoring in the game with an outstanding 33 points. Sovenia Harris added 18 more to the tally for Booneville. Michelle Young rounded out the high scorers for the Devilettes with 11.

The Lady Bears were led in the charge by Wendy Williams with 23 and Marcia Young who added 17 more to the victory.

In the boys' action, the Bears took another from Booneville with a score of 80-55.

Two Booneville freshman led the scoring for the Devils. Tim Jumper had a total of 17 on the night while Clay Johnson added 15 more in the last cause.

The Bears' attack was commanded by Derrick Pollard with 19 points. Rod Nixon, who was second in command, put 15 on the board also. Jay Coln added 13 and Keith McGomper 10.

The Booneville club will be in action tomorrow night in the Wheeler Turkey Tournament.

DSU Beats ABC

Carl Brown hit 6 of 8 free throws down the stretch to give Delta State coach Ed Murphy his first win, a 69-59 victory over Arkansas Baptist College. Brown and teammate Tommy Boyd, a 6-7 freshman from Ignomar High School, both finished with fifteen points for the Statesmen.

With a minute to go, the Buffalos had cut the Delta lead to 63-57. But brown went to work at the line and the Statesmen had their first victory of the season.

Steve Smith and Mark Easley both had 12 points for the Statesmen.

Former Thrasher High School standout James Swinney was held to just two points on the evening by Arkansas Baptist.

Delta State lead 37-24 at the half.

NEMJC To Host Class AA Playoff

Friday, Nov. 25, Northeast Mississippi Junior College will host what is expected to be the largest crowd ever to assemble in Booneville for an athletic event.

Starkville and Southaven high schools will clash in Keenum Stadium to decide who captures the North Half Class AA crown and the right to move on to the state playoffs.

Southaven, the District II champion, is 9-2 for the season and Starkville, who took the District IV title, compiled a 9-2-1 record.

Ticket booths will open at 6 p.m. with the kickoff time scheduled for 7:30. Admission is $3. About 7,000 spectators are expected to attend, according to an NEMJC spokesman.

The Mayor and Board of Aldermen took up the matter of issuance of the Industrial Development Revenue Bonds of the City of Baldwin, Mississippi, in the principal amount not to exceed $4,500,000. After a discussion of the subject, Alderman Dobbs offered and moved the adoption of the following resolution:

RESOLUTION DECLARING THE INTENTION OF THE CITY OF BALDWIN, MISSISSIPPI, TO ISSUE INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT REVENUE BONDS OF SAID ISSUER IN THE PRINCIPAL AMOUNT NOT TO EXCEED $4,500,000 TO DEFRAY THE COST OF ACQUIRING AN INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT PROJECT, AND TO HOLD A PUBLIC HEARING REGARDING THE SAME; AND DIRECTING THE PUBLICATION OF NOTICE OF SUCH INTENTION AND OF SUCH PUBLIC HEARING.

WHEREAS, the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Baldwin, Mississippi (the "Governing Body"), acting for and on behalf of the City of Baldwin, Mississippi (the "Issuer"), does hereby find, determine and adjudicate as follows:

1. The Issuer is a municipality as defined in Title 37, Chapter 3, of the Mississippi Code of 1972 (the "Act");

2. On July 5, 1983, this Governing Body, as authorized by the Act, adopted a resolution making application to the Mississippi Board of Economic Development (the "Board") for a Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity (the "Certificate") authorizing the Issuer to acquire, own and lease a Project as hereinafter defined and to issue its industrial development revenue bonds to defray the cost of acquiring said Project;

3. On July 30, 1983, the Board ordered and directed the approval of the aforesaid application and issued its Certificate No. 37SR to the Governing Body, which Certificate authorized and empowered this Governing Body, acting for and on behalf of the Issuer, subject to the conditions therein set out, to adopt and publish a resolution declaring its intention to issue industrial development revenue bonds of the Issuer as authorized by the Act in the principal amount not to exceed $4,500,000 to provide funds to defray the cost of acquiring said Project and thereafter to lease said Project to Liberty Diversified Industries, Inc., a Minnesota corporation, or its designee for the purposes hereinafter set out;

4. In order to promote industrial development and to provide additional employment for its citizens, the Issuer should declare its intention to issue industrial development revenue bonds of the Issuer in the principal amount herein provided; and in order to give any person who may be interested in the issuance of said bonds a reasonable opportunity to be heard, a public hearing should be held with respect to such issuance.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE GOVERNING BODY, ACTING FOR AN ON BEHALF OF THE ISSUER, AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. That this Governing Body, acting for and on behalf of the Issuer, does hereby declare its intention to issue Industrial Development Revenue Bonds of the Issuer in the principal amount not to exceed $4,500,000 (the "Bonds") to provide funds for the purpose of defraying the cost of acquiring an industrial enterprise consisting of land, buildings containing approximately 168,000 square feet, improvements, machinery and equipment (all of which together constitute the "Project") located within the City of Baldwin, Mississippi, in the Charles M. Gordon Industrial Park on the east side of Old Highway 45 North approximately 1/2 mile north of Gordon Road and bounded on the east by the ICG Railroad line, for the manufacturing, processing and assembling of plastic containers, housewares and other custom molded consumer products or other permissible products under the Act, and thereafter to lease the Project to Mynon Corporation, a Mississippi corporation (the "Company"), which will (i) sublease the land, building and improvements included in the Project to B & B Leasaco, a Minnesota partnership which will sublease the same to Southern Diversified Industries, Inc., a Mississippi corporation, and (ii) sublease the machinery and equipment included in the Project of Southern Diversified Industries, Inc., a Mississippi corporation, provided that the Bonds shall be payable both as to principal and interest solely from the revenue to be derived from the leasing of the Project, and neither the Bonds nor the interest thereon shall ever constitute an indebtedness of the Issuer within the meaning of any constitutional provision or statutory limitation of the State of Mississippi, nor ever constitute or give rise to a pecuniary liability of the Issuer or a charge against its general credit or taxing powers.

SECTION 2. That a public hearing with respect to the issuance of the Bonds in the amount and for the purpose aforesaid shall be held by the Governing Body at their usual meeting place, at the City Hall in the City of Baldwin, Mississippi, at the hour of 7:00 o'clock P.M., on December 6, 1983, in order to provide a reasonable opportunity for persons differing views on the issuance of the Bonds and the location and nature of the proposed Project to be heard.

SECTION 3. That following such hearing, the Governing Body shall consider and vote on the issuance of the Bonds in the amount and for the purpose aforesaid. Under the laws of the State of Mississippi an election on the issuance of the Bonds may be called and if on or before the aforesaid date and hour 20 percent of the qualified electors of the Issuer shall file a written protest against the issuance of the Bonds, the Bonds shall not be issued unless authorized at an election on the question of the issuance thereof to be called and held as provided by law. If no such protest be filed, then the Bonds may be issued without an election on the question of the issuance thereof at any time within a period of 12 years after the date hereinafore specified.

SECTION 4. That this resolution shall be published once a week for at least 4 consecutive weeks in the Baldwin News, a newspaper published in and having a general circulation in Prentiss County, Mississippi, both of which newspapers are qualified under the provisions of Section 13-3-21, Mississippi Code of 1972. For each newspaper, the first publication of this resolution shall be made not less than 21 days prior to the date fixed in this resolution for the issuance of said Bonds and the last publication shall be made not more than 7 days prior to the aforesaid date.

SECTION 5. That the Clerk of this Issuer is hereby directed to procure from the publishers of the aforesaid newspapers the customary proofs of the publication of this resolution and to have the same before this Governing Body at their meeting to be held on the date and at the hour set forth in Section 2 of this resolution.

Following the reading of the foregoing resolution, Alderman DeVaughn seconded the motion for its adoption. The Mayor put the question to a roll call vote, and the result was as follows:

Vet Pension Questionnaires Must Be Returned By Dec. 31

Charles W. Wickes, Director, Jackson Veterans Administration Regional Office, advises that all veterans and their beneficiaries who are in receipt of Pension or Parent's Dependency and Idemnity Compensation will be receiving an Annual Income Questionnaire shortly after November 1, 1983. This includes those people who are over age 72 and who have not been required to report their income for the last several years.

If the cards are not returned to the VA prior to Dec. 31, 1983, future payments will be stopped. It is important that any person with a question about the income questionnaire contact our office as soon as possible after they are received so there will not be any delay in future payments.

Mr. Wickes further states that people who need assistance in the completion of these cards should contact the Jackson VA Regional Office located at 100 W. Capitol Street, Jackson. Experienced Veterans Benefits Counselors will be available to assist in completing the cards between 7:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

If you are unable to visit our office, you may contact a Counselor by telephone between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. The statewide toll free number is 1-800-682-5270, and the Jackson area number is 960-4873.

Safety A Consideration When Shopping For Christmas Toys

For children of all ages, toys still rank as the most popular gift item at Christmastime.

And with good reason. Properly selected, toys do more than just keep a child occupied. They entertain and they contribute to a child's physical, mental and social development.

Authorities on child development point out that children develop competence and mastery in playing with toys. Children also learn to think imaginatively and ultimately apply these learning skills to everyday living.

To do so, of course, requires the use of the right toys, and the use of safe toys. Safety must be of paramount interest to a buyer of toys as a gift for any child, from infant to toddler, pre-schooler, early childhood and through adolescence.

Jim Howard, president of Howard Bros. Discount Stores, major retailer of toys and games, offers a list of safety suggestions for anyone shopping for playthings.

Use recommended age labeling as a guide, and look for warning and other safety messages on the toy package.

Make sure that any rubber rattles, squeakers or teething toys for infants are too large to fit completely in an infant's mouth. No matter how cute or clever the item, avoid it if there is any danger the youngster could get it lodged in his throat.

On rubber toys for infants, be sure that the toy in its fully depressed state is still too large to fit into a baby's mouth.

If you're buying a toy for a youngster who has a younger brother or sister, avoid items that could be potentially dangerous in the hands of the younger child. Keep in mind the overall home environment in which the toy will be used.

For youngsters under 3 years, avoid any toys that have sharp points or edges.

On stuffed animals, be certain that the eyes and nose of the toy animal are securely fastened and cannot be pulled or bitten off.

Be sure painted toys are labeled "non-toxic" and fabrics are labeled "flame retardant" or "flame resistant."

In choosing a toy storage chest, be sure that it has a removable lid or a hinged lid that will remain securely open.

Howard offers one bit of additional advice with regard to toy safety. Specifically, he cautions parents to constantly monitor and supervise the use of a child's toy and playthings. Parents must be cautious and watchful and check their children's toys to be sure there is nothing potentially dangerous, he says.

Making sure that playthings are safely chosen, maintained and stored are as vital a part of play as the toys themselves, points out Howard. A child will learn from playing with toys only so long as the toys are selected and maintained properly.

AREA LEGISLATORS MEET WITH SUPERINTENDENTS - Newly-elected and Incumbant State legislators from the area attended the monthly meeting of the Northeast Mississippi Association of School Administrators Nov. 2 in the Magnolia Room of the Frank Haney Union on the NEMJC campus. Present at the meeting were, from left, NEMJC

Livestock Producers May Be Vulnerable To Heat Stress Losses Next Year

Livestock producers in Mississippi know the difference housing improvements can make on heat stress losses. But producers also are likely to be vulnerable to heat stress next year.

That's because profit outlooks don't make it economically sound for them to invest in extensive housing improvements, said Dr. Robert Haynes, head of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Poultry Science Department.

Because of the profit situation, there probably won't be a lot of improvements made in livestock housing over the winter.

Poultry, hogs and cattle are vulnerable to heat stress, and producers could see the need for improvement in their livestock housing during the summer heat wave.

"If a poultry producer was losing chickens, and another producer who made improvements lost only a few birds, it wasn't hard to see the need for improvements," Haynes said.

Haynes said some poultry producers this summer found that some of their ventilation systems weren't adequate, and that their evaporative cooling systems were valuable.

But since many producers don't see much prospect of making a profit soon, they aren't likely to invest in the housing improvements that could save losses in another heat wave next summer.

Haynes said some Mississippi poultry producers are using foggers inside buildings when temperatures are extremely high to reduce heat stress. The foggers create a fine mist and must be monitored to prevent wetness.

Building materials are up because of housing trends and livestock prices are down. Feed prices are expected to be higher because of the drought in the Midwest, and the heat and drought also have reduced hay supplies.

"Producers are waiting and watching the market before investing in equipment to cut their losses from those suffered this year," Haynes said.

As long as prices remain low and higher feed prices are likely, farmers will be cautious about making extensive housing improvements, Haynes said.

Recent Supreme Court Decision Could Hurt Mississippi's Recovery Plans

If a recent State Supreme Court decision is not amended through a rehearing sought by the State Department of Economic Development, Mississippi's economic recovery program to regain the 40,000 industrial jobs lost during the last three years could come to a halt, according to Hugh Ketchum, president of the Mississippi Manufacturers Association.

"The state is just beginning to recover from the recession," said Ketchum. "If this decision is allowed to stand, Mississippi will no longer be able to compete with neighboring states, in fact most states, in efforts to attract investment dollars in job-producing ventures. The end result will be an adverse impact on the workers and other citizens of this state."

Ketchum further pointed out the decision not only places Mississippi in a seriously non-competitive position to attract new investment dollars, but will cause a breach of faith between existing industries and businesses in their original agreements with state, local and county government officials. The door will be open for other local governments to break good faith agreements for tax exemptions, thereby creating an adversarial environment that will jeopardize future expansions of the existing industries, as well as chilling any attraction of new enterprises.

The Supreme Court decision arose from a 1978 industrial revenue bond authorization by the Lamar County Board of Supervisors for construction of the Hattiesburg Coca Cola Bottling Company. The agreement called for property tax exemptions as provided in the current law dealing with revenue bond issues. In 1981 the Board of Supervisors changed its mind and assessed the company for taxes. The circuit court upheld the company's position, but the Supreme Court reversed the lower court.

At the core of the Supreme Court decision is its reliance on Article 7, Section 182, of the State Constitution, which speaks to Legislative authority to grant a maximum 10-year exemption, and only to those classes of enterprises distinctly enumerated by statute. As a matter of practice for many years, the Department of Economic Development and local governments have relied on the specific Industrial Revenue Bond code section as legal authority to grant exemptions. This practice is common in other Southern states, and in most states throughout the country.

"The bottom line is that it is not a matter of tax exemption philosophy. It's the simple question of whether or not Mississippi is going to compete in the real world for seeking investment capital. If we have to wait for approval of a Constitutional amendment, it is possible Mississippi will be by-passed as it watches the rest of the nation march to the economic recovery tune," Ketchum said.

New Bill Would Make PIK Acreage Exempt In Emergency Loan Eligibility

Senator Thad Cochran has sponsored legislation requiring the government to not count payment-in-kind acreage in determining farm losses for those seeking eligibility for emergency loans due to disastrous weather this year.

"This legislation is necessary in view of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's policy decision to count PIK acreage in determining farmers' eligibility for disaster loans," he commented.

Cochran said USDA spokesmen admitted in Senate Agriculture Committee hearings that "they had already made a policy determination that PIK acreage would be counted as normal yield acres."

At field hearings held Oct. 31 in Memphis, Mid-South farmers complained that such a USDA policy could seriously curb the number of farmers eligible for disaster relief in the wake of summer drought and spring rains and floods.

On Nov. 1, USDA, following state and local appeals declared 48 counties in Mississippi eligible for the emergency farm assistance as a result of this year's adverse weather.

Farmers are required to establish a loss of at least 30 percent to be eligible for such disaster relief. If 50 percent of a farmer's acreage was in the PIK program, he would have to have sustained losses of 60 percent on the remaining acreage planted to establish eligibility under current USDA policy.

Senator Cochran was joined in sponsorship of the bill by a number of other Senators from agricultural states suffering from adverse weather.

Northeast Putting Young Team On The Court

Though the thought of having an ample supply of seasoned veterans return for another year seems to make most basketball coaches breathe a little easier, Northeast Mississippi Junior College coach Richard Mathis is counting on performances by a promising crop of freshmen to help the Tigers to a winning season this year.

Actually, Mathis doesn't have much choice in the matter. "In junior college sports, you face the task of rebuilding a team virtually every year," Mathis said. "I mean, you only have an athlete a maximum of two years, and by the time you get him to the point where you want him to be, he's gone."

Mathis can back up his argument well with the situation he's facing this season. Last year, the Tigers compiled a 22-11 record under his guidance through a potent outside shooting attack. This year, Mathis has had to reckon on a complete turn around in strategy, as his Tigers are lacking in the shooting department.

"Last year, we shot about 51 percent from the field," Mathis said. "We won't and he could possibly see some playing time in a four-year school."

Mathis grabbed another former State championship player in Fields, who was substitute off the bench last year, playing in 25 games. Ball averaged four points, one assist and one rebound per game last season.

"Terry's a good outside shooter and good defensive player," Mathis said. "I like to see kids like him come in who were well coached in the basics in high school." Ballard is a Wheeler native who spent his first year in college at Delta State. The 6-3, 180-pounder helps strengthen the fast break and adds a few rebounds, in spite of his size, Mathis said.

"Terry plays with intensity. He's the best hustler on the team," Mathis said. "His outside shot has improved, and he's a good passer and good on the fast break. He rebounds well for somebody his size, too."

Even though a lot of responsibility rests with these two freshmen, Northeas is not totally without some returning sophomores. Terry Ballard at guard, Terry Ballard at forward and Marlon McGaughey at point guard are all in their second year of eligibility.

Ball, a 6-11, 155 pound New Albany graduate, will fill the shooting guard slot for Mathis. He was the first substitute off the bench last year, playing in 25 games. Ball averaged four points, one assist and one rebound per game last season.

"Terry's a good outside shooter and good defensive player," Mathis said. "I like to see kids like him come in who were well coached in the basics in high school." Ballard is a Wheeler native who spent his first year in college at Delta State. The 6-3, 180-pounder helps strengthen the fast break and adds a few rebounds, in spite of his size, Mathis said.

"Terry plays with intensity. He's the best hustler on the team," Mathis said. "His outside shot has improved, and he's a good passer and good on the fast break. He rebounds well for somebody his size, too."

Even though a lot of responsibility rests with these two freshmen, Northeas is not totally without some returning sophomores. Terry Ballard at guard, Terry Ballard at forward and Marlon McGaughey at point from the field and 57 percent at the free shot line, Mathis said his hand has warmed up this season.

"Marlon's shooting has improved, he's the best jumper for his size I've ever seen and he's extremely quick," Mathis said. "But, he needs more control when he's setting up the offense and defensively, he needs to play more fundamentally."

Rounding out the roster for the Tigers are Jeff Hurt (5-10, 150) from New Albany, Kenneth Odle (5-10, 175) from Alcorn Central, Perry Perrin (6-2, 177) from Jumpertown, David Robbins (6-2, 150) from Blue Mountain, Kevin Simmons (5-6, 150) from Jumpertown, Ronnie Elam (6-3, 175) and Michael Groves (6-3, 180) from Booneville and O'Neal Payton (6-4, 200) from New Albany.

With a new team, Mathis has to live with trade-offs. On one hand, there's a lack in shooting proficiency, but on the other, his Tigers have greater depth than last year. But Mathis is convinced he and his team can deal with the changes.

"Obviously, our goal this year is to make the state playoffs and the regional tournament in New Orleans," Mathis said. "I think Northwest will probably be the team to beat, but Mississippi Delta, Holmes and Itawamba will be tough, too.

"Even though we may not have the shooting ability we had last year, I'm confident this team will be able to win ballgames their own way."

Last Minute Cliff-Hanger Field Goal Attempt Unsuccessful For MSU

It was possibly the only field goal ever celebrated by two teams.

It was good. And then no good.

He kicked it straight and long and over (?) the crossbar, and the State fans went wild.

But just as the ball reached the goal posts, a 40 mph gusting wind made the biggest interception of the day. It suspended the ball, inches from the crossbar in

Ole Miss Wins It 24-23

Victory Gives Ole Miss Independence Bowl Berth

By SCOTT MCKINNEY
Sports Writer

The Ole Miss Rebels' 24-23 victory Saturday over the Mississippi State Bulldogs opened the door for the Rebels to play in the Independence Bowl on Dec. 10 in Shreveport, Louisiana.

This is the first bowl for the Rebels in 11 years. Not since 1971 when Ole Miss went 9-2 and a 41-18 blowout of Georgia Tech in the Peach Bowl has the Rebels appeared in past season play. Also, with the victory over mid-air for what seemed like hours.

Then, in basketball player style, slam-dunked the ball back to earth, a good 10 yards shy of its intended destination. Rebel fans went bananas.

And after quarterback Kelly Powell took one snap and fell flat on his face at the Rebel 10-yard line, Ole Miss was the winner 24-23 before 59,758 fans.

A few moments later in their emotion-filled dressing room, the Ole Miss Rebels, 6-5 overall and 4-2 in the Southeastern Conference, claimed their Independence.

On December 10 in Shreveport, Louisiana, the Rebels will end an 11-season bowl-less streak when they play Air Force in the Independence Bowl.

Mississippi State had dominated the Rebels the entire game, leading 17-0 with 5:04 left in the first half and 23-7 with 4:34 left in the third quarter.

However, the Rebels scored 17 fourth quarter points and used Mother Nature to beat the upstart Bulldogs.

The Rebels only score in the first half was a 66-yard punt return by junior wide-receiver Jimmy Moffett as State got touchdowns from quarterback John Bond and runningback Henry Kooniz and a 19-yard field goal, with the wind, from Cosby. Emory Bellard's 'Dowgs played errorless ball the first three quarters as they maintained the favored Rebels. But two fumbles and an interception put Ole Miss back in business.

Moffett got his second score when quarterback Powell threw a 10-yard scoring strike to the game's M.V.P. in the fourth period. Powell brought the Rebels closer with a six-pointer of his own, and kicker Neal Teevan gave the Rebels the victory with his 35 yard field goal.

Ole Miss has put together its first winning season since 1975 and its first bowl invitation since 1972. Mississippi State finished the 1983 season at 3-8 overall and 1-5 in the SEC, leaving fans speculating about Bellard's security at MSU.

couldn't they establish Ole Miss again as a football powerhouse?

Brewer's intensity and disciplinarian attitude has done the touch for the Rebels, he has changed a bunch of kids into one group as a team that wins together and losses together and that has seemed to have made the difference.

Has Brewer's excellent job of coaching brought Ole Miss back into the powerhouse of college football? Most people believe so and that the Rebels are on their way back to the days when they made 15 consecutive bowl appearances, dating from 1967 to 1971 and including such bowls as the Sugar Bowl, the Gator Bowl, the Cotton Bowl, the Bluebonnet Bowl, the Liberty Bowl, the Sun Bowl and the Peach Bowl.

It seems that the Ole Miss program has been rebuilding for many years, but now, the time has come for the Rebels to "take their stand in Confederate land and march straight on to victory!"

Second Half Rally Gives DSU 31-21

The weather was not fit for man nor beast, but the game went on nonetheless.

It was evident after the Carolina Pirates took advantage of two scoring opportunities in the second half and survived a blocked punt for a 10-6 victory.

Mississippi's Golden Eagles 8-3 record, not quite good enough for a bowl bid. Southern Mississippi jumped on the board first when kicker Steve Clark booted a 46-yard field goal

Saturday night before 21,000 brave souls at M.M. Roberts Stadium in Hattiesburg.

The Pirates took advantage of two scoring opportunities in the second half and survived a blocked punt for a 10-6 victory.

giving Ed Emory's team an 8-3 record, not quite good enough for a bowl bid. Southern Mississippi jumped on the board first when kicker Steve Clark booted a 46-yard field goal and later hit a 44-yarder to give the Eagles a 6-0 halftime edge.

However, East Carolina scored all the points they would need in the third quarter as they got a 14-yard scoring pass from Kevin Ingram to Norwood Vann and a 37-yard field goal from Jeff Heath to claim the victory.

Southern Mississippi All-American Candidate at runningback Sam Dejar-nette stated the game conditions hampered his play.

"Holding on to the ball was like holding on to a piece of ice," Dejarnette said. "Also, the wind was blowing the rain into our eyes making it hard to see."

The Golden Eagles ended the 1983 season with a 7-4 record, but a probation ruling enables them from participating in only post-season play.
